Consumer prices rise in June

WASHINGTON — Consumer prices rose a moderate 0.3 percent in June as the biggest jump in energy prices in 20 months was partly offset by muted cost increases — or even declines — in other categories, the government said today.

The seasonally adjusted June advance in the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index was anticipated by most economists, who said inflation poses little threat to the economy. The consumer index had risen only 0.1 percent in May and 0.2 percent in April.

In a separate report, the Commerce Department said retail sales — which represent roughly a third of overall economic activity — rose a modest 0.5 percent in June to a seasonally adjusted $159.8 billion.

But most of the sales strength came in automobiles. Excluding that sector, sales edged only 0.1 percent higher.

Analysts said lackluster sales and low inflation are both symptoms of the sluggish recovery from the 1990-91 recession.

For the year so far, inflation was running at an annual rate of 3.1 percent, the same as last year's price rise for the full year and well below the 6.1 percent rate in 1990.

City gets the money either way

SANFORD — Sanford City Commissioners Monday voted to charge the Sanford Historical Society a reduced rate for use of the Sanford Civic Center. The society requested "free use for a fund raiser to raise money for the expansion of the library museum." Director of Parks and Recreation Mike Kirby told City Manager Bill Simmons.

Simmons said he was "concerned where we draw the line in the future."

Kirby could remember only Seminole High School receiving free use of the center for Project Graduation and the homecoming dance.

Minimum cost to the city for the Sept. 27 event would be $189.

Commissioner Whitley Eckstein pointed out that the city gets the money either up front or after the fact since the fund raiser benefits the city-owned library museum.

"What's the difference? That's money we pay ourselves. The $189 up front means less profits at the end, but it's the same. If we don't charge them, we get the same amount in the end," he said.

Commissioners voted to charge the society, which is not a city appointed board but works in close alliance with the city, $189.

Sanford tax unchanged

By LASY BOWEN
Herald People Editor

SANFORD — The 1992-93 city budget and millage rate used to calculate property taxes were tentatively approved by the Sanford City Commission Monday night.

City Manager Bill Simmons asked for a millage rate of 6.8750.

The city had the option of rolling the millage rate back to 6.8153, the rounded number corrected from the truncated 6.8152 previously considered.

"I want to stress that the millage rate is exactly what we had last year and the year before that and the year before that," Mayor Betty Smith said.

The millage rate in Sanford has been 6.8750 since 1990.

The rate is expected to generate an estimated $4,774,359, $144,367 more in tax dollars than this year.

Only Commissioner Lon Howell voted against the millage rate. He said he felt it should have been rolled back.

"In these tight times, I won't vote for taxes. Everything needs to stop. They should have rolled it back," he said.

The owner of a house appraised at $60,000 with a $25,000 homestead exemption will pay $171.90 to the city in property taxes. County taxes are also levied but are not affected by the city's millage rate. With the same exemption, a homeowner with a $75,000 house would pay $344.80. Taxes on a $100,000 home would be $515.69.

Had the city accepted the rolled back millage rate, taxes collected next year would be the same amount as this year.

Simmons said the budget approved Monday was based on the current millage, not the rolled back one proposed by Seminole County Property Appraiser Bill Suber. He said the rolled back millage would require the city to "find an additional $144,000 for the general fund." He said items would have to be cut from the budget if the millage had been rolled back.

Had the rolled back millage been accepted, a Sanford property owner with a $60,000 home would save $1.56 over the millage rate the city has approved. The owner of a $75,000 home would save $4.34 and the owner of a $100,000 would save $6.71.

Before the budget is officially approved, the public will have a chance to voice opinions. The first public hearing is scheduled for Sept. 14 in commission chambers at City Hall.

SANFORD — Bicycle riders in Sanford may soon travel more and safer trails.

Sanford City Commissioners Monday night voted to participate in the Orlando Urban Area Metropolitan Planning Organization Bicycle/Pedestrian Program. The city will donate $1,018 through the Engineering and Architectural Services budget, Director of Planning and Development Jay Marder said.

"I think you're seeing a lot more bikes on the road in Sanford. We ought to be doing it," Marder said.

"We've denied funding for this before. Will the world come to an end if we don't do it this year? No, but I think it would be a nice thing to do." City Manager Bill Simmons said.

Marder said it is "difficult to say exactly what you get" by participating in the MPO project.

"We'd be planning and implementing for bike routes and (bike) safety," he said.

During the past two years, the MPO has approached each jurisdiction within Orange, Seminole and Osceola counties seeking funds to continue the Bicycle/Pedestrian Program. Sanford has chosen not to contribute until now. Other participants in Seminole County include Altamonte Springs, Oviedo. See Paths, Page 5A

Commission to modify borrow pit ordinance

SANFORD — Seminole County commissioners will modify their 18-month-old borrow pit ordinance to strengthen environmental protection requirements.

Monday, commissioners authorized county staff to prepare a "glitch" ordinance to strengthen several requirements in their borrow pit ordinance adopted only last year. A public hearing will be scheduled in September or October.

Commissioners have been confronted with numerous complaints recently by residents of Geneva, the north Lake Jessup area and southeast Seminole County over a growing number of dirt pits. Residents say the current borrow pit ordinance does not adequately protect them. See Pits, Page 5A

Sanford election districts OK, court says

By LASY BOWEN
Herald People Editor

SANFORD — A U.S. district court class action lawsuit between Sanford and its black residents has been settled, freeing the city to realign voting district boundaries in the future as population shifts, City Attorney Bill Colbert announced Monday.

Federal District Judge Kovachevich entered the order modifying final judgment and the order to end litigation on July 9, Colbert said. He announced the amicable settlement at Monday night's city commission meeting.

The proposal to shift district boundaries was filed to insure equal population among the city's districts using the results of the 1990 census.

"There is now equal representation in all districts and the city can change districts on its own now as the population grows or shrinks in different areas," Colbert said.

Plaintiff Alfred Delattibeaudere said he is happy it is over.

"Just so we keep in line with what has been decided," he said this morning.

Plaintiffs Delattibeaudere, E.N. Smith, Samuel Wright Jr., R. Fletcher McGann and Hannah Pinkney, on behalf of themselves and all others similarly situated filed the original suit in 1983. At that time, they challenged at-large city-wide voting for members of the City of Sanford Commission. Although a quarter of the city voters were black, no black had ever been elected to the city commission. The city settled on April 17, 1984. Four districts were drawn to comply with the requirements of the Voting Rights Act. Bob Thomas, a black, was elected to the city commission that year.

The plaintiffs then asked that the district boundaries be altered based on the city's growth tabulated in the 1990 census. The district boundaries were revised in consultation with the City of Sanford. New maps were drawn in February of this year.

"We wanted this settled so proposed candidates will know where their boundaries are. The matter has been concluded," Colbert said Monday.

With the court terminating jurisdiction, the city now has the power to realign districts at its own discretion.

"I'll continue to keep my eye on that for the minorities," Delattibeaudere said.

District 1 formerly was comprised of 5,799 with a 45 percent minority population. Commissioner Lon Howell will now preside over 8,100 people, 33 percent minority.

District 2 formerly was comprised of 5,798 voters, 62 percent of whom were minorities. Commissioner Bob Thomas will now preside over 8,105 residents, 56 percent minority.

District 3 formerly was comprised of 5,798 voters, 12 percent minority. Commissioner A.A. McClanahan will preside over 8,098 residents, nine percent minority.

District 4 formerly had 5,798 residents with two percent minority. Commissioner Whitley Eckstein will now preside over 8,086 residents, 14 percent minority.

The new map is available at Sanford City Hall.

County will re-evaluate garbage rates

SANFORD — It's back to the negotiating table again with Seminole County's garbage haulers with the latest county garbage wrinkle — mandatory collection for unincorporated urban areas, with a continued voluntary program in the rural areas.

Three commissioners mustered support for commissioner Fred Streetman's proposal Monday to require garbage collection only in the more densely populated areas of the county. Commissioners said they would consider the program only if garbage companies limit their monthly charge to $13.50 or

Shupe takes the helm at Lakeview

By VICKI BOGGERMAN
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Jim Shupe, who has been an assistant principal at Greenwood Lakes Middle School in Lake Mary, is going home.

Recently, Shupe took over the helm at Lakeview Middle School in Sanford. It was at Lakeview that Shupe began work with the school district 21 years ago.

"It was very exciting to have the opportunity to come back here," Shupe said. "I started here more than two decades ago."

Shupe, a graduate of Stetson University in DeLand, began teaching at Lakeview in 1971 following a year of teaching and four years as headmaster of the Sanford Naval Academy.

At Greenwood Lakes, he taught seventh grade geography for a year before moving into an administrative position a year later.

"I was dean of students and assistant principal while I was there from 1972-73 through 1985-86," he said.

Shupe said that he has an advantage in taking over at Lakeview in that he is familiar not only with the physical plant, but also with the community of the school.

"I know these people and the needs of the community," he said.

Shupe said that his biggest challenge will be opening the lines of communication between the school and the community, however.

Local charitable groups hopeful

ORLANDO — Local officials expect a high level of charitable contributions this year, despite a prolonged recession and a spending scandal involving the United Way of America.

In fact, the head of a major Central Florida group sees a lot of room for growth, both locally and throughout the state.

"Florida as a state and Orlando as a community are raising one-third to one-half of what other major cities and states are doing," said President Lawrence J. Norvell of Heart of Florida United Way.

That organization is aggressively soliciting new sources of money through smaller companies, previously untapped industries and wealthy individuals.

Job to avoid international incidents

TAMPA — A team of diplomacy experts helps the nation's military leaders maneuver through an often complex maze of politics and customs as they direct their forces abroad.

There are only nine State Department political advisers, "or polads" at military headquarters around the world. Two of them are assigned to the Central Command and Special Operations Command at MacDill Air Force Base.

"I'm here to fill that gap in knowledge that exists," said Patrick Therios, the "polad" for the Central Command.

For example, Therios would warn his boss, Marine Gen. Joseph Hoar, that simply flying over the tiny island of Hawar after taking off from Bahrain in the Persian Gulf would provoke howls of protest from neighboring Qatar. Both nations claim Hawar and merely passing through its airspace would be seen as U.S. recognition of one side's position, he said.

Cop justified in fatal shooting

TAMPA — Prosecutors said an off-duty police officer was justified in fatally shooting a man who had just gunned down another man in a crowded nightclub.

Officer John R. Ramos was uninjured in early Sunday's shootout at the Peeking Lounge. Police said they have identified the 22-year-old gunman, but were withholding his name pending notification of relatives.

Carmelo Estrada Barrios, 18, was shot repeatedly at 12:35 a.m. by another man in the nightclub's restroom. Barrios was pronounced dead at a hospital about an hour later.

The gunman was then shot to death by Ramos, who was working as a security guard in his police uniform at the time.

Police officials said they believe Barrios and the gunman had quarreled earlier, but the motive for the shooting was unknown.

Doctor: Wuornos not mentally OK

DADE CITY — After receiving four death sentences and spending months in solitary confinement, serial killer Aileen Wuornos is no longer mentally competent to stand trial, a psychiatrist ruled.

That raises the question of whether the former prostitute's convictions in three of those cases could be overturned by the Florida Supreme Court, the Tampa Tribune reported today.

Wuornos, 36, has admitted killing seven men on Florida highways in 1989 and 1990. She pleaded guilty last month to the 1990 shooting death in Pasco County of 40-year-old Charles E. Carakaddon of Missouri.

The ruling by Gainesville psychiatrist Harry Krop will delay the sentencing hearing in Pasco Circuit Court at least two months, said Assistant State Attorney Phil Van Allen. The jury had been scheduled to hear evidence today.

Wuornos was sentenced by psychiatrists four times and found competent each time — including once by Krop — before she received her first death sentence in Volusia County in February.

But months in solitary confinement on death row have taken a toll, said Steven Glazer, Wuornos' Gainesville attorney.

"I think the solitude, the understanding that she has four death sentences has changed her somehow," Glazer said. "I said two weeks ago that she was competent. Now I'm not sure."

Mom, son reunited

JACKSONVILLE — A mother who launched a global search-and-rescue mission after becoming convinced her ex-husband had spirited their toddler son away on a sailboat has been reunited with her child.

Stephen Von Foelkel and his 35-foot sailboat, the Aahanti, vanished in late May after he failed to return 2½-year-old Tarik after a weekend custody visit.

Because her ex-husband is a worldly seaman who speaks seven languages, Elaine Von Foelkel sent fliers to international sea ports, hounded police everywhere she could and begged diplomats to listen.

It paid off. On Monday, the little boy giggled as his mother tickled his belly, squeezed him and kissed his chubby cheeks in their home.

"I was afraid I'd never see him again," she told The Florida Times-Union in Jacksonville for today's editions. "I can't stop looking at him and hugging him and kissing him."

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Florida to sue Southern Bell

By DONALD WARRON
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD — Florida's attorney general has accused Southern Bell of taking advantage of hundreds of thousands of telephone customers through deceptive sales practices and announced lawsuits seeking $14 million in refunds.

"Southern Bell has exploited our ignorance," Attorney General Bob Butterworth said Monday. "Southern Bell has exploited our trust. We all grew up trusting Ma Bell. We never expected to encounter Ma Barker."

He compared the utility to the infamous gangster-mom at a news conference here, where he said customers paid for services they never ordered and don't need.

"We are warning all Southern Bell customers in Florida to make an immediate personal inventory of the services they are paying for," Butterworth said.

Southern Bell should repay at least $14 million to 225,000 of the utility's 4.7 million customers, he said, adding there's no way of knowing how many people may have been affected.

Utility spokesman Spero Canton said Southern Bell has been cooperating with the attorney general's office for 18 months and has "learned a lot through this situation."

"We've made some changes to make sure our customers are treated fairly," he said.

A 15-month state investigation uncovered evidence that Southern Bell created "boiler room" operations in which lightly supervised sales people pressured customers to accept unnecessary services or simply applied them to accounts without the customers' knowledge.

Southern Bell closed down the operations in early 1991 and agreed to refund the charges, but company employees later tried to persuade customers to accept only a fraction of what they were owed, Butterworth said.

Canton acknowledged that until this January, Southern Bell only refunded the most recent six months of unwanted charges, rarely itemized additional options on phone bills and failed to send notices to customers confirming that they had ordered extra services.

Federal judge bars fee caps

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — A federal judge threw out a new state law that caps fees at doctor-owned clinics, but state lawyers said an appeal is likely.

One state health official estimated on Monday that lifting the fee cap could cost the public hundreds of millions of dollars over the next few years.

The Legislature passed the law this spring in an effort to control the state's skyrocketing health care costs. State health officials say the doctor-owned joint-venture clinics drive up costs because doctors refer too many patients to their clinics and order too many tests. In addition, the clinics often charge too much for their services, officials say.

Many of the worst abuses reportedly have happened in connection with clinics that provide diagnostic imaging.

But U.S. District Judge William Stafford ruled Monday that the new fee-cap law violates the U.S. Constitution because it doesn't affect all doctors equally.

The law exempts clinics owned by so-called group medical practices, which can offer a wide range of medical services. The doctor-owned clinics operate more like businesses, because the doctors who own them usually don't practice medicine together, state lawyers said.

Stafford concluded that that wasn't enough of a distinction. He ruled that the Legislature had no "rational basis" for classifying group practices differently.

"I do not find that there is any rational basis for imposing these caps on some of the medical profession but not all, or on some of the physicians but not all," Stafford said at the conclusion of a daylong hearing. Stafford said he would enter a permanent injunction against the fee caps.

Disappointed state lawyers said an appeal is likely. The Legislature also might have to readdress the law, said Tom Wallace, acting head of a state agency that oversees health care. Wallace said that lifting the fee caps could cost state residents as much as $200 million to $500 million. That's the amount of excessive charges at the clinics in the past.

State lawyers also were critical of the Florida Medical Association.

Tax cap drive ends here

Seminole County volunteers for Save Our Homes in the Fifth Congressional District, turn in the last of the petitions needed here in an effort to cap property taxes at three percent annually. The district, including Volusia and Orange counties, has secured its share of signatures needed to help place a constitutional amendment on the November ballot. The effort statewide is expected to be completed later this month. The last batch of 16,340 signatures is being hand delivered this morning by DeLoree Lash, left, and Nancy Goettman to Supervisor of Elections Sandy Guard. Elections staff members look on.

Fewer losing licenses; officials say dropout law may be working

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — State officials say one Florida anti-dropout program seems to be working, with fewer students dropping out and consequently losing their drivers' licenses.

But the program is only working with those who have or want licenses, and other approaches are needed for less-motivated dropouts, warned Hal Lewis, a Department of Education analyst.

Under the law which took effect in October 1989, the state takes drivers' licenses away from students aged 16-17 if they skip 11 consecutive school days or 20 days in a single school year.

The number of requests for suspensions rose sharply from the 89-91 school year to 90-91 — but the number of actual suspensions dropped from 9,602 to 3,748 as more students returned to school or signed attendance agreements.

"The second year more of them stayed in school — we can only speculate that as time went on, the information was passed from school to school that the Highway Patrol was serious," Lewis said.

About a third of the dropouts who eventually returned to school — 3,383 in 90-91 — cited the license law as a reason, he added.

Statewide figures for 91-92 are not in yet, he said, but some counties have compiled their own, and show the trend appears to be continuing.

By July 1, for example, Palm Beach County educators had asked the state to suspend 1,346 licenses in the 1991-92 school year — 83 percent more than they did in the law's first year. But the number of licenses the state actually yanked dropped 42 percent.

Lewis emphasized the program is not a cure-all.

"It's having a tremendous effect for students that either have drivers' licenses or want to have drivers' licenses," he said. "But this program would not work as a deterrent for a child who wasn't motivated by having a license."

Educators have complained that the law is an expensive and unwieldy administrative burden that is not worth the effort.

Williams was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where he was held without bond.

Sexual battery, other charges filed

Carlton G. Enoch, 32, 756 Sun Dr., Lake Mary was charged with sexual battery, domestic violence and resisting arrest without violence when he was arrested by Lake Mary Police on Saturday.

Police said that they found him outside the 7-11 store on Lake Mary Boulevard and Rinehart Road in Lake Mary and that he matched the description of a person wanted for sexual battery and domestic violence.

Police said they asked him for identification which he said he did not have and that he then gave them false information as they questioned him further.

He eventually gave them the proper information and was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where he was held without bond.

Plane strikes power line

Pilots suffer minor injuries

By LARRY BOSSER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Don Knight, of Sanford, and Jerry Hagood, of Longwood, received only minor scratches and bruises in a plane crash early Saturday.

The incident occurred on a remote private crop dusting landing strip near Lake Ashby, north of Osteen.

The crash, which caused the aircraft to flip completely over, has been officially classified as accidental, and no charges will be filed.

Hagood was originally piloting the single engine aircraft. Knight was conducting a bi-annual safety check for Hagood, who has been a licensed pilot for many years.

"At about 8:45, I took the controls to demonstrate an emergency landing procedure," Knight said, "but when I brought the plane down, we hit a power line."

"Neither of us saw the line, and when we hit, it was like hitting a rubber band."

Volusia County Sheriff's investigator J.R. Johnson, Sr., was the first official to arrive at the scene. "We looked into it and couldn't find anything wrong," he said. "The only thing we are going to do is check with Florida Power and Light to find out about the power lines, and try to get the wind sock taken down from the landing strip."

Johnson added, "The strip is on private land, and only used occasionally during crop dusting. When it's not in use, the sock should probably be taken down and the area not used by anyone."

The Federal Aviation Authority conducted an on-site investigation. FAA Safety Inspector Hooper Harris explained, "We arrived at the scene within a few hours and checked into the entire incident to determine if any safety violations may have been made."

"We submitted all of our findings to the National Transportation and Safety Board in Miami, who is responsible for determining if any further investigation might be required," Harris said.

Don Knight

"We have already wrapped this whole matter up, and classified it as an accidental situation caused by those unmarked power lines," said Tim Monville, an investigator with the NTSB. He added, "Because there was damage to the plane, we were required to conduct an investigation but there won't be any charges filed and we consider the incident closed."

Knight estimated damage at approximately $20,000 to the Cessna 172 Skyhawk, valued at $40,000. The plane is owned by the South Seminole Flying Club, based at the Central Florida Regional Airport.

Knight, owner of Knight's Shoes in downtown Sanford, has been flying since 1948. "In all those years I've only gone down one other time," he said.

While he wouldn't explain the incident, he commented, "It was a long time ago and my injuries were slightly worse than they were this time."

Knight is a licensed inspector involved in the FAA's "Wings" program, conducted through Tom Savage of Savage Aviation at the Sanford airport. "This is a safety examination required of all pilots every two years," Knight said. "It involves three hours of flight instruction on aviation regulations and changes in the laws."

The incident won't change Knight's love of flying. "I went up the very next day," he said. "It was just something that happened, and I certainly don't expect it to happen again, at least to me."

Investigation continues in shooting

By LARRY BOSSER

SANFORD — Sanford police this morning continue to investigate a near fatal shooting in the downtown historic residential district Monday night.

"From the large loss of blood, we thought it would be a homicide," Police Chief Steve Harriett said.

Juan Reza-DeIgado, 25, was listed in satisfactory condition this morning after an apparent robbery attempt, Harriett said.

Reza-DeIgado was walking home after making a purchase from the Cumberland Farms, 317 Park Ave., about 10:15 Monday evening when he was accosted by one or more armed assailants, Harriett said. Police believe DeIgado was shot in the leg northwest of Fifth Street and Park Avenue during a robbery attempt. He attempted to flee, finally falling at the intersection of Fifth and Park.

"It appears that the way he was shot in the leg that he was fleeing the subject or subjects," Harriett said. "It is speculative at this point, but the shooting is possibly robbery related."

Residents of the neighborhood gathered at the blood-soaked scene last night as Sanford Fire Department Paramedics attempted to stabilize an unconscious Reza-DeIgado.

One neighbor, who did not wish to be identified, said she heard the incident.

Commission denies owner multi-family zoning change

By LARRY BOSSER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Sanford City Commissioners Monday night denied a request from a historic district property owner who wanted to rent apartments in a home now zoned for a single family.

In a letter to the city, James Bagley claimed he had been defrauded into buying 414 Palmetto Ave. by the previous owner.

(He) "showed me the multi-family complex and introduced me to the four tenants in the five unit complex and assured me that they all are good tenants that always pay their rent on time. I saw the five renters and knew they could not be there if were not five separate dwellings," Bagley said.

City Manager Bill Simmons explained that the city has implemented "several actions to re-establish the single family character of the neighborhood." He recommended denial of Bagley's request.

Commissioner Lon Howell motioned to deny the conditional use variance.

"These were apartments initially, but when the non-conforming use was given up it reverted back. I think it should be the commission's position to turn it down," he said.

Bagley claimed as a multi-family dwelling, the property generates $1,040 in monthly income. He said that was a consideration in obtaining a loan to purchase the property.

Air bags

Let us now praise some bags of hot air — the kind that are showing up in the steering wheels of new cars. The first federal study on the efficacy of air bags in preventing death and injury in automobile accidents has just been released, and, in general, the results confirm a lot of the high hopes that drove Congress' decades-long battle to force the automakers to install them.

In cars equipped with an air bag the risk of death in a head-on collision, according to the Department of Transportation, has been reduced by 26 percent. This translates into 300 lives saved, by the government's calculations, over the five years since automakers were first required to begin phasing them in.

Currently, 6 million cars, or only about 4 percent of all those on the road, have air bags. But the study also points up some potentially serious shortcomings, some of which may be solved by better design, and some which may be inherent to the nature of the bags themselves.

The way air bags work is that at the moment of collision a sensor ignites an explosive chemical, sodium azide, which instantly fills the bag with the nitrogen gas heated to 300 degrees. Since the surface of the bag is traveling at approximately 100 mph when it meets the driver's face, something like a serious rug burn is not uncommon. That's a lot better than having one's head strike the steering wheel or windshield, but it's still a drawback in those rare instances in which an air bag pops out by mistake or is triggered by a minor fender-bender.

It's much more of a problem for automotive children, however, when they try to meet the increasingly popular demand for bags on the front-seat passenger side as well. Because these bags have the same larger area and are therefore "three times bigger," the current models can deliver a wallop forceful enough to throw a child who's not properly belted down right into the back seat.

That problem, in turn, underscores what may be the most important warning about air bag technology in the government's report: The bags are no substitute for a seat belt and shoulder harness. To work well, both safety devices have to be used together.

Unfortunately, Lee Iacocca and the other automakers who spent years blocking the bags and denouncing them as a waste of money have now switched to overvelling them in the sales campaigns that suggest the bags are a panacea for all collisions. They are not.

For conservatives, a weird election

For the conservative movement, which has been dominant in American presidential politics for the last 12 years, this is a distinctly weird election.

For the first time since 1976, conservatives don't have a dog in this fight. And yet it is hard to visualize any outcome that could plausibly be interpreted as a repudiation of conservative principles by a majority of American voters.

Best in mind the distinction between the conservative movement and the Republican Party. The conservative movement is a large, ill-defined, but reasonably well organized group of people dedicated to certain moral and philosophical principles with applications in many fields, including both politics and economics.

From the Republican Party's standpoint, therefore, a Bush victory in November is every bit as important as victory in any other presidential election. From the standpoint of the conservative movement, on the other hand, a Bush victory, while probably preferable to a Perot victory, and certainly preferable to a Clinton victory, isn't nearly as important as Ronald Reagan's victories in 1980 and 1984, or even Bush's victory over Dukakis in 1988.

It is true that Bush has stuck firmly to the conservative line on abortion and on Supreme Court appointments, and led the country to a brilliant victory in the Gulf War. But he simply betrayed his conservative supporters — no other word will do — in the matter of new taxes, and has waffled deplorably on other important issues, from quotas to environmentalism. The general mood in the White House today is one of confusion, indecision and drift.

Yet Mr. Bush isn't pretty clearly going to campaign as a conservative, and most conservatives will probably vote for him in November, if only as the least of three evils. If he wins, his victory will rightly be scored as one more for conservatism.

Marine sanctuaries gain status

A string of aquatic gems has been added in recent years to the places specially designated to protect their natural or historical uniqueness. This necklace, the National Marine Sanctuaries, is relatively new, discrete in size, and nowhere near as well-known as the National Park system to which it owes lineage.

Sanctuary status has been accorded to the seal and sea lion rookery of the Channel Islands off California's coast, to the underwater volcano crater evolved into a 200-species thick tropical coral reef at Fagatele Bay in American Samoa, and to the water grave of the Civil War's ironclad U.S.S. Monitor, sunk off Cape Hatteras in December 1862. In all, 10 marine sanctuaries are in the system, two more will be added this year, another pair are likely to be added soon, and still others are under consideration.

The aim is to protect before it is too late for some of the nation's most delicate, ecologically rich and historically important marine areas. While at a turning point now, the sanctuary program's brief history has been one of great potential, largely unrealized. It wasn't until 1979, seven years after its creation, that any funds were appropriated to run the sanctuary program. During the 1980s, it spluttered along with scant support never topping $3 million a year. Ten times that much is needed to make the program fully viable, according to a recent report by an independent panel.

Finally, in 1989, Congress got so disgusted with foot-dragging over designating proposed sites that it ordered several be put into the system. Much of the delay, which still plagues the program, has been over whether to allow oil and gas exploration in sanctuaries. Thus far, those fights have been resolved in favor of keeping drilling rigs out of the protected areas.

President Bush has been kinder to the program than his predecessor, and at the end of this year's congressional debate, annual funding may shake out at between $10 million and $15 million.

The Florida Keys amply demonstrate that sanctuary status can create a framework for ecosystem protection but is not a magic wand assuring it will occur. Marine sanctuaries, far more than national parks, are expected to facilitate various uses, including commercial activity, so long as they are compatible with the primary goal of preserving the natural resource.

Earlier this year, a temporary ban was imposed on treasure-ship hunting within the Florida Keys sanctuary. Officials concluded that the reefs were being damaged by destructive methods of gold hunting. The ban is being contested in court. One of the biggest threats to the reefs comes from sediments and chemicals carried in the water runoff from all sorts of activities conducted on the low islands that make up the Keys. The sanctuary designation provides an impetus to solving this problem, but several years of setting priorities on competing interests and paying for those decisions lie ahead.

Within the near future, the Keys may provide the site for the nation's first fishery reserve to begin coping with overharvesting that is causing a decline in many commercial fish stocks. "We may end up with areas that have very few controls (on fishing) and other areas with very strict controls, down to perhaps a few areas that are almost wilderness areas," says Commander William Harrigan, the National Marine Fisheries Service officer who heads the program.

The Keys are probably the best marine sanctuary where the breeding patterns of certain stocks of fish lend themselves to setting aside a reserve to allow severely overharvested species to regenerate. They could well provide the first place where the concept of fisheries reserves can be tested in U.S. waters.

Harrigan thinks that in the coming years, "while we are going to do a reasonable level of new designations, the program will concentrate more" on improving conditions at sites already included or soon to be in the system.

That view tracks closely with recommendations from the Center for Marine Conservation, a private organization that has been instrumental in promoting the sanctuary system. "There are still a lot of worthwhile sites that over time should be added," says the Center's spokesperson Jack Sobel, but "let's get some running, demonstrating how beneficial they can be and learn from those before we set up a whole other slew of sites." It took several generations for the full value of our National Park system to become evident. The same may well be true for marine sanctuaries.

Navy beginning to be ship shape

In a recent Don Wright cartoon in the Palm Beach (Fla.) Post, a Navy pilot stands in the open cockpit of a sleek, needle-nosed U.S. fighter plane. It's as huge and splendid a symbol of power and dominance as one could imagine. In front of the plane walks a woman with a handbag. The pilot has his flight jacket open, flashing her.

Wright's cartoon sums up a confusion-finding situation that defies explanation. It perfectly captures my own feelings about the Navy's treatment that Navy women were subjected to by some of the 1,500 members of the Tailhook/Association, a group of 15,000 retired and active-duty Navy and Marine aviators. I'm at a loss to conjure what on Earth was in those pilots' noodles when they formed a double line down a hotel hall and passed 26 women service members — 14 of them officers, some of them fellow pilots — down the line, rubbing their breasts and buttocks and ripping their clothes.

If it was a dominance display, just how much more dominance does a fella need in this day and age than to drive one of the most powerful rigs on earth, be called "sir" by a host of underlings and admired by all us groundcock civilians who'd love to have a crack at one of those marvelous planes? If it was a "We'll show you to horn in on our action" display, why use such means on fellow officers? They're the kind of folks most likely to cry "foul" and most likely to be listened to seriously if they do.

Perhaps the Tailhookers thought their fellow male officers would protect the good old boys who just wanted to have some fun hooking a few tails. For a while, it seemed that way as a number of the witnesses remembered seeing or hearing anything the least bit untoward. But this is 1992, and professional women don't just keep quiet when a bunch of lewd buffoons try to play ping-pong with them.

Way Back When

An old stage concerning civic clubs goes like this: "Rotarians own the town, Kiwanis run it and the Lions enjoy it." Forty-five years ago the Sanford Lions Club plus representatives of the Kiwanis, the Rotary, the Elks club and the local Chamber of Commerce gathered in the front entrance of the former Florida State Bank of Sanford at First and Park to great and meet Fred W. Smith, president of Lions International. That was in 1947.

Herald editor Roland Dean, Florida State Bank system president G.H. McNulty who was also a director of Lions International, Cliff Ables, Tax Collector John L. Galloway, Western Union manager and Kiwanis club president Lester Tharp, Henry Wynn who is still an active member of the Sanford Lions Club, Florida State Bank of Sanford president E.G. Kilpatrick and Florida Power-Light Company area manager H.M. Cotman. Front row (left to right) are: Exalted Ruler of the Sanford Elks Club and an official of the Sanford Atlantic National Bank Jimmy Rowland, Richard Doss, City Commissioner Andrew Curran, Herald reporter Willard Connolly, C.E. Pits

County staff said the 10-foot distance is adequate to protect the bubble. Commissioners also accepted a provision to require pit operators to post a bond that will continue for at least two years after digging is done to assure vegetation and other pit restoration requirements are completed satisfactorily. The county now releases the bonds when work is done.

Shupe

Shupe said he hopes to institute an open-door policy at the school and work closely with the PTA and the Local School Advisory Council (LSAC) to tailor the school to the needs of the community. He is making plans to institute a "homework hotline" like he began at Lakeview.

Quilters angry over Smithsonian deal

CONCORD, N.H. — The gentle art of quilting has taken a belligerent turn, pitting quilters in this country against Chinese manufacturers that copy American heirlooms.

Actually, the quilters' target is not so much China as the Smithsonian Institution, repository of American folk art and artifacts of culture and industry, which sold China the rights to four classic 19th century patterns.

Now, department stores such as Filene's and mail-order companies such as Land's End and Spiegel stock the reproductions made in China through a contract signed by the Smithsonian with a New York importer, American Pacific Enterprises.

They sell for about $180, one-quarter the price of an American-made quilt. That does not sit well with U.S. quilters, especially since the copies bear tags with the Smithsonian's name.

Ironically, the Smithsonian doesn't sell the copies — designs based on originals in the National Museum of American History — either at its shops or by mail. It sells only original, handmade American quilts.

Jury finds negligence asbestos cases

BALTIMORE — A jury found six companies negligent in the nation's largest asbestos personal-injury trial, but one of the 8,595 workers who sued said the verdict came much too late.

Pipefitters, steelworkers and other craftsmen who were exposed to asbestos at their jobs in Maryland's mills and shipyards contended the companies knew as far back as 1936 that asbestos caused deadly lung ailments.

The Baltimore Circuit Court jury agreed Monday, returning a verdict that allows damages to be awarded to asbestos victims. The money awards, if any, will be determined in the trial's second phase.

But Paul Sefchuck, who worked at a Baltimore shipyard for 40 years and suffers from a lung disease called asbestosis, was not jumping for joy.

"We haven't gained anything," said Sefchuck, 79, a plaintiff and president of the White Lung Association, a group that represents asbestos victims.

"We have lost something very, very important that we can never get back and that is time," he said. "Many asbestos victims have died since this began."

Education key to black power

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The head of the United Negro College Fund says education is the key to power for black people, and he credited historically black colleges with leading the way.

Virginia Gov. Douglas Wilder, a Virginia Union graduate, and NAACP executive director Benjamin Hooks, a Le Moyne-Owen alumnus, are examples of leaders produced by historically black colleges, said William H. Gray.

"Once you get that knowledge, you empower yourself," the former House Democratic whip told about 1,200 people at the 83rd annual convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People on Monday.

The convention continues through Thursday.

Historically black colleges welcome all college-bound students, not just the top 10 percent, Gray said.

"If we are to empower ourselves, we have to take more than the top tens, the diamonds," he said. "These schools know how to take a lump of coal and turn it into diamonds."

Gray said historically black colleges awarded 34 percent of bachelor degrees earned by blacks last year. The United Negro College Fund provides financial aid for students attending 41 such schools.

Within eight years, 66 percent of employees entering the work force will be women, minorities and immigrants, he said. That means business will grow increasingly dependent on the skills of minorities, especially blacks, he said.

Presidential convention '92: The Democrats' Bush-bashing galore, Clinton lauded

By JOHN KING
AP Political Writer

NEW YORK — Democrats opened their Big Apple bash with an always pointed, sometimes mocking indictment of President Bush and a festive salute to Bill Clinton's rise from smalltown Arkansas boy to White House challenger.

The festive first night set the tone for the next three days as Democrats launch Clinton's race against Bush and Ross Perot and what they hope will be history-making challenges by their insurgent female Senate contenders.

"The choice in this election is clear: We've got us a race between an aristocrat, an autocrat and a Democrat," Georgia Gov. Zell Miller said, leaving little doubt that the campaign will prove both colorful and cantankerous.

"The American dream is not dead," fellow keynote Barbara Jordan said, but added, "It is gasping for breath."

As Democratic conventions go, Clinton's has been a civil affair so far. He has delegates to spare for Wednesday's roll call, a platform tailored to his moderate message, and a running mate in Tennessee Sen. Al Gore whose performances in a whirlwind tour of convention receptions are drawing plaudits aplenty.

Still, the rambunctious partisans of former California Gov. Jerry Brown are not going quietly.

"Let Jerry Speak," they chanted. Some taped their mouths protesting Clinton's refusal to give Brown a prime-time slot unless Brown first delivers an endorsement.

Party Chairman Ronald Brown said today he had tried to arrange a meeting with the former governor Monday night but was sent a campaign aide instead.

"I want to look Jerry Brown in the eye, have a face-to-face meeting with him and see if we can resolve whatever differences that there are," the chairman said in an interview on CBS television.

At the convention hall Monday night, the mistress of ceremonies, Texas Gov. Ann Richards, picked up where she left off in Atlanta four years ago — singing Bush.

"As far as this White House is concerned, honey, you can turn out the lights because the party's over," she said.

As the Democrats turned on the lights for their 41st convention, they had other numbers in mind: 12 years of Republican rule, and a 1-5 record in the last six presidential contests.

For the superstitious, their last winner, Jimmy Carter, is on tonight's program, as is Jesse Jackson, whose endorsement of Clinton was far from enthusiastic.

Those in the opening night parade of past, present and future Democratic stars took time to praise Clinton, stressing his modest roots in Hope, Ark. There was no shortage of Bush bashing, and Vice President Dan Quayle didn't escape, either.

"We can't all be born rich, handsome and lucky," said Miller. "That's why we have a Democratic Party."

The pugacious Miller even worked in a few shots at Perot, delivered with emphasis on his own drawl.

"If Ross Perot's an outsider, folks, I'm from Brooklyn," he said with a smile.

Clinton and Gore watched from their hotel, both crafting speeches for Thursday night's finale. They took time for television interviews, presenting themselves as a youthful partnership for "people first" change. In one, Clinton quipped that he and Gore formed "a little bit of a Dubba ticket."

The "Let Jerry Speak" chorus drowned out some speeches, including parts of Party Chairman Ronald Brown's address.

But he found something every Democrat could cheer: "Read our lips, no second term," he belted not once, but six times.

Chiles not a convention party player

By CURT ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — A rarity among Democratic governors from the biggest states, Lawton Chiles of Florida is not a player at his party's national convention this week.

Texas Gov. Ann Richards chairs the Democratic National Convention and Gov. Mario Cuomo of New York will nominate presidential candidate Bill Clinton.

Chiles wasn't even planning to get here until tonight.

It continues a pattern of aloofness to the Democratic Party he has exhibited since winning the governor's race in 1990. He didn't even attend this year's Jefferson-Jackson Day event in Tampa, and almost bypassed the state party convention in Orlando.

Aides explain that Chiles, who served three terms in the U.S. Senate, had family concerns, was too busy trying to get a state budget out of the Legislature and doesn't enjoy the social whirl of the political crowd.

"He can do without the parties and the glitz," said his press secretary, Julie Anbender.

SANFORD — Pat Warren poured on the fundraising effort during the past three months of her campaign, according to reports submitted to the election office Friday.

Warren, seeking a second term as District 1 county commissioner, has raised a total of $29,185. Of that amount, $26,063 was raised since April 1, according to her campaign finance reports.

Warren's challenger, John Tracy, also a Republican, had raised $6,661 by June 30, including $670 since April.

County commission candidates were required to submit campaign finance reports for the quarter by Friday.

District 3 candidate Ginger Bowman faces a fine of $50 per day because her campaign report had not been received, said elections supervisor Sandra Goard this morning.

The major contributors to county commission candidates were:

IN BRIEF

Dolphins sign two

MIAMI — The Miami Dolphins signed the team's second-round draft choice tackle Eddie Blake and free agent safety Fred Marion, the team announced Monday.

With the signing of Blake, the Dolphins now have a total of 18 players, 11 veterans and four draft choices, who are unsigned.

Hurricane arrested

MIAMI BEACH — Miami Hurricanes wide receiver Kevin Williams was arrested Monday for carrying a stolen gun in his car, police said.

Williams, 21, of Dallas, faces charges of carrying a concealed firearm, theft and possession of stolen property, according to a Miami Beach police news release.

He was arrested Monday morning while driving a car with expired Oklahoma license plates, the statement said.

League shuts down

BOCA RATON — The Sunshine Baseball League, a new professional development league scheduled to begin play this winter, announced Monday it was shutting down operations.

The league, which was to begin a 56-game season in November, was designed for free agents and college graduates who weren't drafted.

All-Star lineups announced

SAN DIEGO — Tom Glavine of the Atlanta Braves will start his second straight All-Star game for the National League tonight while Texas right-hander Kevin Brown will start for the American League.

In his lineup announced Tuesday, manager Bobby Cox of Atlanta said shortstop Ozzie Smith of St. Louis would lead off, followed by San Diego right fielder Tony Gwynn, Pittsburgh left fielder Barry Bonds, San Diego first baseman Fred McGriff, Atlanta third baseman Terry Pendleton, Pittsburgh center fielder Andy Van Slyke, Chicago second baseman Ryne Sandberg, San Diego catcher Benito Santiago and Glavine.

American League wins derby

SAN DIEGO — Forget the Bash Brothers. Mark McGwire is baseball's supreme slugger all by himself.

With McGwire's 12 homers, including seven on seven consecutive swings of the bat, and seven more from Ken Griffey Jr., the home run contest was no contest at all. The American League routed the National League 27-13, sending the senior circuit to another defeat.

The longest drive of the day was a 458-foot shot to right field by San Diego's Fred McGriff.

Jackson leads AL oldtimers

SAN DIEGO — The ballpark was full, the national press was watching and almost everyone was focusing on home plate.

OK, OK, the cool winds of October weren't blowing. Never mind, when he's the center of attention, Reggie Jackson comes through.

The first three batters in Monday's Heroes of Baseball old-timers game reached base, and Mr. October was in his accustomed cleanup spot. With Hall of Famer Bob Gibson on the mound, the future Hall of Famer came up big.

He took a ball, and then sent the next pitch soaring over the center-field wall for a grand slam, just like the old days.

"I hit me a room-service fastball," Jackson said as he sat in the dugout and basked in the attention after the American League's 7-2 win.

Indurain gains on Lino, field

LUXEMBOURG — Defending champion Miguel Indurain of Spain served notice Monday that one Tour de France championship might not be enough.

Indurain dominated the 41-mile individual time trial, besting the field by three minutes in 1 hour, 19 minutes, 31 seconds, averaging 30.5 miles per hour. He chopped more than four minutes off overall leader Pascal Lino's time and lifted him from 12th place into second heading into the 10th stage.

Three-time winner Greg LeMond was fifth, 4:04 back.

Outrunning the rain

Lake Mary Track Series draws 40 for opening night

From Staff Reports

LAKE MARY — Participants in The Lake Mary Track Series Monday had a special incentive at certain times: run faster and one could get out of the rain.

About 40 runners and jumpers dodged a temporary drizzle to compete in track and field events at Lake Mary High School.

Athletes were separated by age groups and participated in a maximum of four events.

In the 6-and-under boys, Willie Calloway Jr. finished third in the long jump with an effort of 5 feet, seven inches. He also took third in the high jump (2-6) and 100-meter dash (19.8). Calloway also grabbed second in the 50-yard dash with a time of 8.9. Michael Gibson Jr won the high jump with a leap of 2 feet, 9 inches, while coming in second in the long jump (9-0), 100-meter dash (19.7) and third in the 50-yard dash (9.0). Clint Sovie enjoyed a spectacular night, winning the long jump (8-8), 100-meter dash (19.2), 50-yard dash (8.8) and placing second in the high jump (2-9).

In the 7-10 boys' group, 10-year-old Bobby Legerton grabbed first in the 100-meter dash with a time of 16.1. He also won the 440 (1:22.1) and finished second in the high jump (3-0) and long jump (9-5). Robby Sovie, 8, took first in the long jump (11-10), high jump (3-8) and came in second in the 100-meter dash (17.3). Eight-year-old Ryan Yadav captured second in the mile (9:45.1) and third in the long jump (9-0) and high jump (2-6). Stephen Smith came in fourth in the long jump with an effort of 8 feet, 11 inches.

Brett Weber won four events to highlight the boys' 10-14 age group. Weber, 11, finished first in the long jump (13-5), high jump (4-0), 440 (1:15.3), and 800 (3:49.9). Fourteen-year-old Mike Lormann grabbed second in the long jump (13-4) and 100-meter dash (18.1). Carl King, 12, won the 100-meter dash (18.99) and came in third in the long jump (13-3).

The largest group of competitors was the 15-18 boys. Richard Heinzman, 15, leaped 16 feet, 0 inches for first place in the long jump. Heinzman's twin brother, Michael, won the 440 with a time of 1:05.5 and took fourth in the long jump (14-10). Steve Platt finished second in the long jump (15-7) but won the high jump (4-8) and mile run (5:41.5). Sixteen-year-old David King captured the 800 title with a race of 2:53.2. He also placed second in the high jump (4-6) and third in the long jump (15-1). Eric Hanson, 18, ran the 440 in 1:13.3 for second place and high jumped 4 feet, 6 inches for third place in that event. Fifteen-year-old Chris Corell won the 200 (27.4) and finished fourth in the high jump (4-6).

Coach Weber of Gateway ran an impressive triple of long-distance events, finishing first in the mile (5:12.2), 800 (2:13.8) and two-mile (11:10.2) races. He ran in the 19-29 division.

In the 30-39 age group, David Altar took first in three events: long jump (7-6), 50-yard dash (10.1) and the 220 (43.1). Hugh Laughry came in second in those same events, jumping 6 feet, 2 inches in the long jump while running a 10.5 in the 50-yard dash and a 45.5 in the 220.

Willie Calloway grabbed first in the mile with a time of 5:36.5.

Jr. PGA event a success

By ROBERT STOKK

LONGWOOD — As has become the norm this summer, rain pelted down on a junior golf tournament Monday evening, soaking the plush layout at Rolling Hills Country Club and the East Central Chapter of the Professional Golfers Association Junior Tournament.

Only this time, all the competitors had finished playing their rounds, marking the first time in a month that a junior tourney was not shortened by inclement weather. In each of the previous two weeks, Junior Golf Association of Central Florida events were halted by rain.

A record number of golfers came out for the tournament, which has produced some talented champions, including 1988 winner Paul Tynan, a Lake Brantley graduate who went on to play for the University of South Florida.

Jason Pienka led the field of 141 players with a round of one-under-par 71 to capture the 16-17 boys' division. He birdied the second, 11th, 15th and 17th holes and posted a back nine of two-under-par 34. Pienka also won a berth in the Insurance Youth Golf Classic last week with a 73 at Timacuan Country Club. Steven Opperman finished second with a 73, including an even-par 36 on the front nine. Ian Peterson took third with a 74 while Tyler Smith grabbed fourth with a 76.

In the boys' 14-15 flight, Lake Mary's Jeremy Anderson continued his impressive play this summer with a 77, good enough for first place. Travis Fulford came in second, two shots behind Anderson. Brian Diley took third and Scott Ellman finished fourth. They each shot an 81 and Diley won a match of cards for third place.

Brian Craver grabbed the championship in the boys' 12-13 flight with an 86, two ahead of Brian Smith. Charles Girvin came in third with a 91 while Andrew Jones won a match of cards over Erik Lobitzke for fourth place. They each shot 93.

Dusty Leinbach parred three of his first four holes en route to the title in the boys' 10-11 division. Leinbach's score of 41 on the front nine put him four ahead of Patrick Norris, who finished second. Matt Belle grabbed third with a 49 while Bobby Hazel took fourth with a 50.

Another Craver, this one Craig Craver, took the title in the 8-9 boys' division, posting a score of 27 for five holes. Jimmy Nedrow

Rhein shot 81 for her 18 holes to claim the title of the Girls' 12-13 age Division, while Close (left photo), finished second in the Girls' 14-15 Championship with a round of 96 and Messier was third, also in the 14-15's, after firing a 122.

The event drew a record 141 entries and was the first junior tournament in more than a month to get all of its golfers' rounds in before the rains came.

The Junior Golf Association of Central Florida returns to action next Monday with the nine holes playing Bay Hill and the 18 holes tackling Winter Springs.

Cutting through confusion of terms

DEAR ABBY: I just read your column in the Greenville (N.C.) Daily Reflector, and either someone made a typographical error, or you failed to consult with your medical experts.

A reader wrote: "I can no longer remain silent. I must at least try to educate those ignorant females who keep wanting to castrate rapists so they can't rape again. When I was 30 years old, I lost my testicles to cancer. Castration does not always cause impotence — it causes sterility. I am now 63 and still sexually active. So much for castration. Sign me...San Antonio"

In your reply, you said: "Many people are not aware that castration does to males what tubal ligation does to females."

No, no, Abby! Castration does to do to males what tubal ligation does to females. Vasectomy does to males what tubal ligation does to females.

To clarify the confusion, I submit the following:

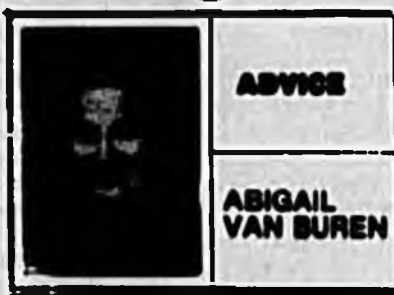

Castration: Male: Both testes are removed; Female: Both ovaries are removed.

Sterilization: Male: Popularly known as "vasectomy"; Female: Popularly known as "tying off the tubes."

In other words, castration of the male is not analogous with tubal ligation of the female.

STANLEY P. OLSKEY, M.D. (RET.) TAYLOR, S.C.

DEAR DR. OLSKEY: I blew it! Only when I was deluged with letters from readers did I become aware that castration and sterilization are not synonymous.

ADVICE

Finally, I consulted Dr. Robert Sanford, a Beverly Hills urologist, who said:

"In castration, both of the testes are removed. The testes are where the male hormone testosterone is produced. So, upon castration, a male's interest in sex will be greatly reduced (or eliminated entirely). However, with testosterone replacement through injections or medication, a male can elevate his hormone level (and sex drive) to normal. And although castration usually renders a man impotent, it is not always the case."

Dr. Sanford added that since rape is an act of violence, castration would not necessarily stop a rapist from raping again.

The Rape Crisis Center stresses that rapists do not rape for sexual gratification — they rape to degrade and humiliate.

DEAR ABBY: How do you cope with someone who has borrowed a book from you and never returned it? It's a hard-back copy of a well-known novel, and I would really like to get it back.

This friend has had it for nearly 10 years. Three years ago, I called and reminded her that she still had my book. She apologized, said she was very much embarrassed and she would return it as soon as possible.

Well, she still has not returned it. I really like this lady, but I would like to have my book. What should I do?

STUMPED IN CINCINNATI

DEAR STUMPED: I think you should resign yourself to the fact that in all probability you will never see that book again. Your friend may have misplaced it, lost it, or possibly lent it to someone else to read. In any case, since it's a well-known novel, it is replaceable. Wouldn't it be lovely if your friend saw this and replaced it with a new one?

DEAR ABBY: My husband had terrible bad breath! Finally, after several rounds of antibiotics, his doctor sent him to an E.N.T. specialist. The new doctor found the cause: My husband's lingual tonsils (the ones at the base of the tongue — not the set on either side of his throat) were infected (they were rotting!), hence the terrible odor. The tonsils were removed, which solved his bad breath problem. PUEBLO, COLO.

DEAR ABBY: When people tend to step back a few feet as you come up to speak with them, you can be sure something is wrong. At times my mouth tasted like the bottom of a chicken coop. I went to the doctor and he prescribed Mylanta II, because he thought my bad breath was caused by food lodging in my hiatal hernia. He said the Mylanta II would coat the pocket of the hernia and allow the food particles to slip out. Such a simple remedy for something that caused so much distress! Thanks for being there, Abby.

FDS-S-IN-FLA.

DEAR ABBY: In April, you had a whole column on remedies for bad breath. Since I had a problem with it too, I asked my dentist — who, of course, works close to his patients' faces — how he managed. He told me to use acidophilus or megadophilus capsules — both are available in health food stores. This increases the "good" bacteria in one's intestines and should solve the problem.

According to my dentist, most bad breath problems do not originate in the mouth.

HELEN COX, SAN DIEGO

DEAR HELEN: Most dentists agree with your dentist bad breath can also be the result of chronic sinus infections. That's why breath mints, chewing gum and constant gargling and rinsing with a mouthwash offer only a temporary fix — not a permanent cure. However, a temporary fix is better than nothing.

Debate brews over designing family makeup

Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — There was a vacancy in Betsy Gilman's life, an emptiness her lawyer-husband, two sons and a full-time job couldn't fill.

She wanted a baby girl. "I didn't feel like my family was complete or that I was complete," she says.

So she sought ways to better the 50-50 odds in pre-selecting the sex of her offspring.

As more parents seek the same course, it has touched off an ethical debate that reverberates from church to clinic to laboratory.

It hinges mostly on a sperm-separation technique developed a decade ago by a Montana doctor and is now leased to about 65 clinics worldwide, including one in Albuquerque.

Patients come to clinics in the United States, Canada, England, India, Malaysia, Pakistan and Singapore to balance their families or to fulfill cultural pressure to produce boys.

In the United States, the couples are primarily middle-aged, middle-class professionals. Mrs. Gilman is 42.

The technology involves separating the Y and X chromosomes in the male sperm, followed by artificial insemination with the desired partner. The Y chromosome is male-bearing and the X chromosome is female-bearing.

It's based on evidence that Y chromosome-bearing sperm swim faster than X-bearing sperm, says Dr. Ronald Ericsson of Alameda, Mont., who patented the process.

Washed and spun sperm is layered on increasingly thick albumin proteins, through which the strongest sperm swim the fastest.

Producing X-weighted sperm is more difficult, Ericsson says, so fertility drugs are used as a backup.

The process, which costs $300 to $600 per insemination, improves the chance of having a boy by 30 percent and a girl by 20 percent, he says.

Ericsson claims that more than 1,500 gender-correct babies have been born using his method.

Others say there is no real evidence the system is effective.

Dr. Francis Byrn, chief of reproductive endocrinology at the University of New Mexico, says he philosophically opposes gender selection and doubts it works.

"If you look very carefully at well-done studies, it isn't clear to me that you can guarantee an increased chance of males or females," Byrn says.

But he refers patients who raise the issue to clinics such as Gender Selection of New Mexico, the only facility in the state offering Ericsson's procedure.

"I think that getting pregnant is a random process and people should enjoy either sex," Byrn says. "I don't feel like I ethically can aid or abet a couple in trying to create a pregnancy with a preselected sex."

Some ethicists and researchers say that while regulating against gender selection would impinge on women's reproductive rights, the procedure raises concerns.

"In the most fundamental sense, selecting the sex of one's child is a matter of reproductive choice and if we were to limit this... then it might invite the floodgates to open up and we might see other aspects of reproductive choice limited," says Neil Bennett, associate professor of sociology at Yale University and editor of "Sex Selection of Children."

"However, I would really be very concerned about (parental) motivations if they were to go so far as to use some sex-selection technique," Bennett says. "Is it that the father has this great desire to play ball with a son? Well, I would argue, why not play ball with your daughters?"

There are also worries that widespread use of gender selection could create an unbalanced society, says Jim Nelson, associate editor for ethical studies at the Hastings Center, a private nonpartisan ethics think tank in Briarcliff Manor, N.Y.

"There is a natural regulator of gender balance and it doesn't take a lot of imagination to see that a rough 50-50 balance is conducive to social harmony generally, and that sex pre-selection, if it became widespread, might have some untoward aspects in terms of upsetting that balance," Nelson says.

"Some might say it won't be practiced by enough people to affect the overall ratio or it might not select preponderantly for males, but it's still worth worrying about. There is an interest in having firstborn males, and that could reinforce advantages already available to boys."

But a 1989 study by Nan Chico, assistant professor of sociology at California State University at Hayward, found most couples interested in the process already had an average of two children of the same sex and were seeking mixed families.

Chico based her survey on 2,505 letters to Ericsson from couples wanting information on gender selection.

She found 92 percent had one to seven children and those desiring a firstborn male comprised only 1.4 percent of the total.

Her study showed a nearly 50-50 balance in requests for boys and girls.

"Overwhelmingly, the letters were from people who already had one sex and wanted the other and wanted that to be a last child," Chico says.

She and others call it the ultimate in family planning.

But Nelson says many are concerned that using sex selection "encourages an overall attitude of consumer choice and quality control."

"There's a kind of spirit of loving acceptance that is an important part of what children need... and that may be in some way subtly undermined by the notion that we can expect a certain amount of tailoring, fine-tuning, on the kids we get," Nelson says.

However, he says, "the difficulty is justifying limits on people's liberties in the name of worrisome possibilities as opposed to demonstrated harm."

Most see a medical value in the technology when used to try to prevent the passage of some 300 sex-linked diseases, such as Duchenne muscular dystrophy and hemophilia, which are transmitted through the female.

But many fear the process could lead to abortion when the preferred sex is not conceived.

The religious community tends to oppose gender selection.

Congenital defect causes headache

DEAR DR. GOTT: Two years ago I was diagnosed with Chiari malformation. Is this the same as spina bifida? My symptoms began with severe headaches across the back of my head. An MRI was negative for tumors but found this malformation. My head continues to feel as if it weighs a ton and there's pain every day. What does my future have in store for me?

DEAR READER: The Arnold-Chiari malformation is an unusual congenital defect of the brainstem, where the brain meets the spinal cord. Without getting overly technical, I can summarize the problem as follows: Part of the lower brain (cerebellum) abnormally protrudes through the opening at the base of the skull, leading to hydrocephalus (increased fluid in the inner-brain chambers). This causes headache and other symptoms.

The diagnosis is made by MRI or CT scanning. Treatment consists of a shunt to relieve the pressure caused by the malformation.

This is not the same as spina bifida (incomplete closure of the spinal bones) but is often associated with it.

In my opinion, you should be examined by a neurosurgeon, who will review the MRI scan, and tell you whether shunt surgery is advisable. Such a specialist can also give you a more definite idea of your prognosis.

To give you further information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "An Informed Approach to Surgery."

DEAR DR. GOTT: My son has developed an eye disease called fundus flavimaculatus. What can you tell me about this disease, and is there a specialist who can help him?

DEAR READER: Fundus flavimaculatus is a rare inherited eye disease marked by whitish yellow deposits in the retina.

causing progressive loss of vision. The enzymatic defect causing this disorder has not been identified. At present, there is no treatment.

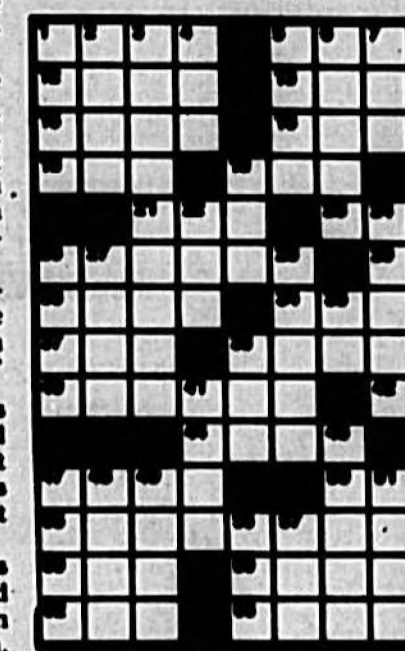

Because this disease is so rare, I believe your son should be examined by either a retinal

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder
Basically, bridge is an easy game. If you count carefully and make the textbook bids and plays, you will get 90 percent of deals right. But what stops the game from becoming boring is the remaining 10 percent. On these deals, for one reason or another, the normal bid or play isn't correct. These are the deals that sort out the men from the boys — and the women from the girls.

In today's deal, against your contract of three no-trump, West leads the club three. How would you plan the play?
The declarer counted his top tricks and came to nine: one spade, one heart, four diamonds and three clubs (given the lead). No problem! He called for dummy's club jack, which held. Then he played a diamond to his king. Those two tricks were played in next to no time. But suddenly the clock stopped. South realized he didn't have four diamond tricks because the suit was blocked and there was no dummy entry. The contract was now unmakeable.

Too late declarer wished he could return to trick one. If he had just won the first trick in hand with the club king (or ace), the contract would have been ensured. He could have unblocked the K-Q of diamonds and led a low club toward the dummy. He would have been guaranteed a dummy entry with the club jack, giving him access to the A-J of diamonds.

To the many beginners I teach, I stress the necessity of counting and forming a plan of campaign before playing from the dummy at trick one. Only those who heed that advice have any chance of going on to become good players.

By Bernice Bede Cool YOUR BIRTHDAY July 15, 1992

A joint venture formed for a profitable purpose might not meet your expectations in the year ahead. But endeavors you operate independently could be very gratifying.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) An unprofitable endeavor you're presently involved in should be carefully reviewed at this time. It might be wise to start cutting your losses and move on to something else. Cancer, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for Cancer's Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Have the courage of conviction today. Once you make a decision you believe to be right, don't let the less knowledgeable alter your course.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

There's a chance you might derive a profit from a joint endeavor today, provided that what you bring to the table is not merely a suggestion.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You could be luckier today as a result of things others originate rather than from what you conceive yourself. Hop on their bandwagon.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If material rewards are your primary motivation today, you might not receive the impetus you need to succeed. In order to be successful, you must feel you're doing something worthwhile.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Someone who is willing to be helpful today might not be tomorrow — especially if this individual feels used. Show proper gratitude.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your possibilities for success are encouraging today, provided you don't let unexpected developments shut you down. To be a winner, you must be persistent and keep your head.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)

Disagreements between you and your mate should be kept confidential today. Don't bring an outsider in to endorse your position.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Conditions are rather interesting today. Someone you might try to dump your problems on may have the same idea — only in reverse. An impasse is likely.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you don't keep track of your commitments today, social complications are possible. Be very careful you don't placate one pal while offending another.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you assume you can just start the engine and the rest will take care of itself today, objectives you establish for yourself won't be achieved. Follow-through is essential.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Do not attempt to promote something or sell things today in which you do not sincerely believe. If your heart isn't behind your product, poor results are likely.
