Roger's mother charged

SANFORD — The 65-year old mother of Michele Roger is the fourth member of the family charged in connection with the death of David Richmond two years ago.

Agnes Roger of Orlando was served a summons Wednesday night for failure to report a death, which is a first degree misdemeanor. She is ordered to appear in county court Oct. 7 at 9 a.m.

Michele Roger was convicted last month of second degree murder in Richmond's 1992 death. Her father, brother and mother are charged in the coverup of the crime. Will Roger and his son, Kenneth, are each charged with two counts of perjury, tampering with evidence and failure to report a death. The two men were arrested earlier this week and were released on bail.

After Michele Roger stabbed Richmond, her parents and brother saw the dead man in the couple's condominium. No one notified authorities. The two men carried the body from the residence, the elder man cremated the body and mixed the remains in concrete. The father and son later tossed the blocks in the ocean.

Voter turnout

SANFORD — Seminole County elections supervisor Sandra Guard predicts 30 percent of the county's 137,044 registered voters will participate in today's primary election. Based on her estimate on growing primary participation in previous gubernatorial election years, Guard said the call is difficult this year. "This is a tough one to call," said Guard. "I don't know that people are all that interested." In 1990, 28.7 percent of the county's voters participated in the primary election. In 1984, 24.3 percent of the voters cast ballots.

School board races

Don't worry if you don't see any school board races on the ballot today while you cast your ballot.

Of the three seats that are up for grabs this fall, two remain unopposed.

Incumbent Jeanne Morris is being challenged by retired Greenwood Lakes Middle School principal Ted Barker, but board chairman Barbara Kuhn and vice chairman Sandy Robinson have drawn no opposition in the race and will walk into their second four-year terms.

Morris and Barker will not face each other until the November election.

Until then, look for more from the two camps and remember that race in two months.

Polltbits

SANFORD — The Florida Chapter of the Sierra Club has endorsed the GOP team of Tom Gallagher and Curt Kiser in today's gubernatorial primary election. "Tom Gallagher has shown his continued commitment to the environment and concern for our quality of life by voting correctly on growth management and wetlands protection issues before the governor and Cabinet," stated Bob Sullivan, state political chairman of the environmentalist organization. Gallagher's running mate Kiser was praised for his senatorial record of supporting Everglades protection and other preservation issues.

Grandparents struggling to afford second parenthood

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

More and more grandparents are finding themselves involved in second parenthood. The American Association of Retired Persons, AARP, says they are being denied financial help to which they should be entitled.

An ever increasing number of grandparents are being forced, through divorce, separation, or other traumas, to raise their children's children, and are finding it difficult to afford.

"It's certainly something which is growing rapidly," said Lynette Dennis, of Longwood, Dennis is Florida District Director of the American Association of Retired Persons.

"I know of several cases where the grandparents are finding it very difficult to afford raising the children, mostly because they themselves are on pensions or social security."

Dennis said her own sister is raising grandchildren, as is a friend in Casselberry. "The money just runs out," she said, "and they are finding it necessary to change their lifestyles. One man, who wanted to spend his retirement days fishing, can't even afford to do that anymore because every dime is spent on raising the grandchildren."

Dennis said most of the information on the problem with obtaining additional financial assistance is being circulated to AARP members from the Washington headquarters, and Washington AARP says many of the low-income elderly are being denied welfare benefits by caseworkers who refuse to acknowledge these three generation families.

A recent AARP report documents the hardships facing seniors who become parents again, often at a time when their health may be falling and their financial security at risk.

AARP's study found the number of children under age 18 living in homes headed by grandparents increased by more than 80 percent in the past two decades, from 2.2 million in 1970 to 3.34 million in 1993.

In most cases, the mother of the children is living with the family. But in one-third of such cases, the father is living with the family. See Seniors, Page 5A

Little, the director of the Adult Basic Education program at Seminole Community College, said she believes people need to learn to read in order to master basic life skills.

While SCC used to focus merely on the basics of reading, the educational program for illiterate adults now has a broader scope.

"We are putting more of a focus on functional life skills," she said. "We are teaching people to read, but also teaching

Election Day wrap

Voters trickling to polling places

By J. MARK SANFORD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Voting began at a trickle this morning at area polling places.

Trudy Nopper, clerk of Precinct 23, reported there were five people waiting when doors opened at the Seminole County YMCA on Longwood-Lake Mary Road at 7 a.m. this morning. Two hours later, few people were coming in, Nopper said.

Precinct 29 voters at Goldboro Elementary came were coming in steadily, reported poll clerk Neda Hoykin. "It's been kind of fair," she said.

Elections supervisor Sandra Guard predicts a 30 percent turnout today. Early on, it appeared the projections may be close. Guard said there were few snags, but she's received several calls from voters angry about campaigning in front of polling places.

Several complaints came from Precinct 11 at Seventh Day Adventist Church on Midland Avenue, said Guard. People were handing out Christian Coalition of Seminole County voter's guides in the parking lot of the church, she said. Motorists have also complained about sign wavers obstructing traffic, she said.

Guard said materials may be distributed within 50 feet of polling places if voters' access isn't blocked and distribution remains on public property. Otherwise, campaigners must stay at least 50 feet from the entrance to a polling place.

Although a low turnout is expected, voters have numerous decisions to make.

Republicans have a host of contenders seeking the governor's office, including Jeb Bush, son of former president George Bush. Also running are Josephine Arnold, Bob Bell, Ken Conner, Ander Crenshaw, Tom Gallagher, and Jim Smith.

Who contributed to judge campaigns?

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Candidates seeking circuit and county court judgeships in Seminole County have spent amounts ranging from $6,500 to over $24,000 in their primary election campaigns.

In the five-man race for the circuit court post being vacated by retiring Judge C. Vernon Mize Jr., the latest contribution/expenditure reports show Gene Stephenson leads the pack with contributions of $46,785 and expenditures of $45,054. Carmine Bravo spent $24,831 of the $28,655 raised.

The final pre-primary reports for Robert Miller, Ken Leane, Dean Mosley and county court judge candidate John Galluzzo had not been received as of late Wednesday afternoon. All of the candidates contributed or loaned money to their own campaigns.

Although the reports cover up-to-date contributions and expenditures on the fourth day prior to the primary, no mail service on the Labor Day holiday may have delayed delivery, according to a clerk in the supervisor of elections office. It is only required the reports be postmarked in the time frame. The circuit court judge candidates are required to file their forms in Tallahassee and file locally with election officials. Main Street forges future plans, direction

Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Neil Fritz is back in town.

As interim program coordinator, Fritz is credited with being the person who prepared the documents necessary for Sanford to be selected as a Florida Main Street City.

Fritz left Sanford in July of this past year, having been hired as a researcher and application preparer. Shortly after that time, Faye Fulton of Knoxville, Tennessee became Sanford Main Street's official director.

During that time, Fritz helped 10 already existing Main Street cities continue their progress, and worked with Delray Beach and Leesburg, who were newly-designated Main Street cities at the same time as Sanford.

Although Fulton began working with the Sanford program on Dec. 6 of this past year, she remained for only six months, and submitted her resignation in the middle of 1994. She did not state a reason for leaving.

Now, Main Street President Chris Cranias has announced that Fritz is back, and will be assisting the organization this evening, in a membership meeting to be held at the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce building.

In addition, Linda Baldwin will be serving for the time being, as interim manager, until a new manager can be hired.

"I know this is labeled as a membership meeting tonight," Fritz said, "but I would like to see non-members show up as well. When I look at the many other cities which are involved in the Main Street program these days, I realize that it's only through the cooperation of a large number of people that success can be achieved."

The meeting tonight will include the election of officers and board of directors. See Main, Page 5A

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

FLORIDA BRIEFS

On the campaign trail

DEFUNIAK SPRINGS -- The Republican march across the western Florida Panhandle stops at the Walton County line. The GOP has gained an electoral majority in neighboring Okaloosa County -- the only Panhandle county that has more registered Republicans than Democrats -- and has taken control of county government there. Republicans also hold numerous local offices in Santa Rosa and Escambia counties to the west of Okaloosa. But in Walton not a single Republican is on the ballot in local races. As a result, winners of Democratic primaries for county-level offices will be elected today barring runoffs. "What happens is you're outnumbered four-to-one," said former Walton County Republican Executive Committee Chairman Franklin Brooks. "It's one of those things that's hard to overcome." Walton has only 4,047 registered Republicans compared to 12,713 Democrats. The only Republican to hold a Walton office as far as anyone can remember was Bob Fleet. Republican Gov. Bob Martinez appointed him to a county commissioner's seat in 1982 after the incumbent was suspended.

Worms to be utilized in landfills

MILTON, Fla. (AP) -- If a federally funded experiment succeeds, worms may soon be put to work reducing the amount of yard trash and wood-related waste buried in landfills. More than 175,000 earthworms -- 100 pounds -- have been turned loose to eat their way through a stack of trash 8 feet wide, 30 feet long and 5 feet high at the Carroll Landfill in Santa Rosa County. The state has ordered landfills to reduce trash volume by 30 percent because Florida is running out of places to safely bury its waste. Worms are just one option that landfill officials are considering. Three other trash piles are part of the experiment. Lime and fertilizer have been raised into one of the piles and compost into another to see if they will speed decomposition. The fourth pile has nothing added for comparative purposes. The worm experiment, paid for with $6,000 in federal money, began Aug. 10 when the red wigglers were deposited in a special bin filled with the shredded yard trash. Worm compost researcher Larry Martin of Ocala is overseeing the project. He has set up similar projects across the nation and in Canada. Hospitals, prisons, hotels and restaurants have been using his method to dispose of kitchen and yard waste.

Odd customs

MIAMI -- The arrivals at Miami International Airport are getting odder and odder. Two Latin American travelers were accused of violating the Endangered Species Act by smuggling pygmy marmosets, a tiny monkey, and sea turtle eggs on their flights. Marcelo Perez, 23, a U.S. citizen living in New York, was arrested Wednesday after acting nervous during his customs check following a flight from Lima, Peru. "A search of his person revealed that Perez had two live pygmy marmosets concealed within the front pockets of his sweatshirt and two live pygmy marmosets hidden inside a waist bag," U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service agent Charles Bepler said in an affidavit. Marmosets are one of the world's smallest monkeys. Fully grown, the pint-sized creatures weigh less than a pound. Owners of the showy but illegal pets often carry them in their pockets.

Landlubber dog takes long swim

SARASOTA -- In the past few months, an adventurous dog named Flipper has been rescued three times -- the last after a sailboat outing left him paddling for hours in the Gulf of Mexico. Somehow, no one noticed when the pooch fell off Bob and Dancie Barnett's 45-foot sailboat "Rocking Horse" about a half-mile offshore Saturday. Hours later, a passing boater spotted his little head bobbing in the waves and kept him from becoming a shark snack. It's not the first time the 18-month-old poodle mix has gotten into trouble. Flipper, a dog with webbed feet who doesn't like the water, was left at an animal shelter twice to face an uncertain fate before the Bernettis adopted him. He fell off a boat at a marina and was rescued by a man who thought at first he was a young manatee. Another time, Flipper wandered off and ended up at a restaurant where outdoor diners ordered him a turkey sandwich. And that's just the past six months. On Labor Day, Flipper turned up missing when the sailboat docked.

Gay bar storming

Conduct charges dropped against prosecutor

By The Associated Press
WEST PALM BEACH -- A Broward County prosecutor and two other men accused of trashing a gay bar and shouting anti-gay abuse won't be tried on disorderly conduct or hate-crime charges, prosecutors have concluded. Mark McHugh, a felony division supervisor in Broward's state attorney's office, and three other men were accused of raiding the Paradise Club in Boca Raton while wearing women's clothing July 17. There is insufficient evidence to pursue hate crime charges against McHugh, Edward Murphy and Christopher O'Hara, Palm Beach County Assistant State Attorney Motra Lauch said Wednesday. A fourth suspect, Christopher Hynes, will be charged with disorderly conduct, and Murphy faces charges of resisting arrest without violence. Both charges are misdemeanors. Lauch, who was the losing prosecutor in the William Kennedy Smith case, said in a report she could not prove "that any one individual was targeted as a victim because of his sexual orientation."

But the Gay and Lesbian Lawyers Association of South Florida believes the state should pursue the charges. "If during the course of a disorderly conduct, they say things that evidence prejudice, that's the definition of a hate crime," said Mark Leban, a Miami attorney and board member for the 60-member group. A dozen rugby players, including the four suspects, were accused of jumping on tables, shouting anti-gay insults, smashing picture frames and pulling down plants at the bar. They were bar-hopping after finishing their rugby club's annual cross-dressing golf tournament. One of the 12 wore a black cocktail dress with spaghetti straps, police were told. "They did it, and they got away with it," said bar owner Kenneth Rohman. Lauch said she was aware of the bar owner's disagreement with her findings. "His concept was that mere presence was enough to charge them. Obviously, that's not enough," she said. McHugh's attorney, David Hogeneshtz, maintained Wednesday his client was not at the bar and called Lauch's conclusion "a courageous act." "I'm sure he's going to be very relieved," Hogeneshtz said of McHugh, 32, who is in Ireland after being put on administrative leave. Bartenders and a patron who described the incident as "a mob scene" identified only one suspect, Hynes. They said he was the man in the black dress. "They were all grouped together and everybody screaming and yelling," bartender Kirsten Nordberg said in a sworn statement. After Hynes started a bump-and-grind strip routine, affiant bartender Steve Pace said, "I cut the music off, I told him that we were in the city of Boca, and in this establishment we did not allow stripping." Ralph Ray, one of McHugh's supervisors as chief assistant state attorney, said the department would seek a copy of Lauch's report and hoped to make a decision on McHugh's status by the end of the week. Asked whether the decision could be seen as prosecutors protecting prosecutors, Hogeneshtz said it was "a spin that could conceivably be put on this."

Out with the old... Work continues to turn the 57-year-old U.S. Highway 17-92 bridge over the St. Johns River into a fishing pier. Last week, the old iron and wood structure was carefully moved from its historical resting place to its final spot nearby. The bridge's new replacement stands nearby.

Retailers must post oyster warnings

By Bill Sambrook
Associated Press Writer
TALLAHASSEE -- Raw oyster warnings carried by restaurants and wholesalers will be expanded to retail markets starting this week, said Agriculture Commissioner Bob Crawford. At a news conference Wednesday, Crawford ate an oyster -- safely roasted -- to make his point. "Oysters are an excellent source of protein, iron and other nutrients, and they're one of my favorite foods, but no one needs to be eating them raw," he said. Raw oysters can contain vibrio vulnificus, a bacteria present naturally in Florida's warm coastal waters. It can be harmful -- and possibly fatal -- to people with weakened immune systems. Restaurants were ordered to begin posting warnings in June 1983 after the deaths of nine people were blamed on the bacteria the year before. Since 1981, when health authorities first started tracking it, an average of six vulnificus cases and three deaths a year have been linked to raw oysters in Florida. Nine illnesses and six deaths linked to vibrio food poisoning were reported in the past year, Crawford said. Now oyster containers or bins where oysters are displayed for retail sale are also required to carry this warning: "There is risk associated with consuming raw oysters. If you have chronic illness of the liver, stomach or blood or have immune disorders, you are at greater risk of serious illness from raw oysters and should eat oysters fully cooked."

'Ganja Man' says he's persecuted

By The Associated Press
PANAMA CITY -- James Tranmer calls himself "the ganja man" and says he would die for marijuana. He even has offered to go smilingly to the gallows, throw the noose -- he'd prefer a hemp rope -- around his neck and then pull the lever. "People hate to hear the truth," Tranmer says. "They hate the spirit person. And they hate the ganja man. That's why they must persecute me." Instead of execution, Tranmer, 50, likely will spend the rest of his life in federal prison serving a 35-year sentence for smuggling thousands of pounds of marijuana into the Florida Panhandle. Tranmer, being transferred to a federal prison in Lewisburg, Pa., contends the government's war on drugs is persecuting him for his religious belief in a plant that is part of creation and completely harmless. He says he became a priest in the Ethiopian Zion Coptic Church and was interviewed by Dan Rather for "60 Minutes" while living in Jamaica. During the 1970s, Tranmer and the Coptics argued in a Miami court that smoking marijuana was a religious right, but they lost. Most people brought into court on drug charges vehemently deny them, said Johnny Johnson, Bay County liaison for U.S. marshals. But not Tranmer. He not only admitted using marijuana but praised the drug. Tranmer's lawyer refused to put him on the stand during his trial in April, but he spoke at his sentencing in July. "I'm an herb man. I've always been an herb man," he told the judge. "You cannot win this fight against marijuana. If you fight against the herb, you fight against creation." The judge was unmoved, but soon after Tranmer's impassioned speech, a pelican crashed into a power line outside the courthouse. The bird died in a huge fireball and the courthouse went dark. Tranmer's friends took it as a sign that maybe somebody, somewhere was listening.

Warrant check

Sanford police investigated a suspicious person, believed to be wanted on a warrant, Tuesday. They spotted the man in the 400 block of Palmetto Avenue. When the officer approached him, he said the man, identified as George Walter Jolicoeur, 22, of 1015 Wildmere Cove, Longwood, ran from the area. The officer gave pursuit, but Jolicoeur reportedly grabbed his radio and prevented him from calling for assistance. Eventually, the officer got the radio, and other officers arrived, after which Jolicoeur reportedly became involved in a physical altercation with the officers. He was arrested on charges of resisting an officer without violence, two counts of resisting with violence, two counts of battery on a law enforcement officer, and depriving a law enforcement officer of communications. He was subsequently found to be wanted on a warrant for failing to appear on a charge of theft.

Kindle flames of progress

Sanford Main Street, Inc., is holding its annual membership meeting this evening. One of the purposes of the meeting is to elect new officers, directors and coordinators.

Neil Fritz believes it should also serve as an opportunity to increase support. We agree. The limited number of people presently involved in the Main Street project have accomplished some excellent progress. With more people however, the work will be able to expand as well as improve.

Fritz plans to be on hand at the meeting to make a presentation on volunteer opportunities. We hope there are a goodly number of non-members on hand to hear this discussion. If not, it will be what is commonly referred to as preaching to the choir.

The members of Sanford's Main Street organization know well the responsibility they must accept if the project is to succeed. The progress they have made is proof of that.

Sanford people were extremely proud when the city was selected from among dozens of other applicants throughout Florida, as one of only a few to be so-designated.

In obtaining the Main Street title, the city can obtain services of state as well as federal Main Street operations. While they will supply very little funds, the expertise and planning assistance they do provide will be extremely helpful in improving the downtown area.

Many people were on hand for various open meetings, to help get the project underway and determine the direction it should take.

Many others attended the meeting at the City Hall breezeway when officials of the state and national Main Street programs came to town to congratulate it on achieving the designation.

Now it's time for those same people, as well as anyone else who has a connection with the downtown area, to gather again. Not only attend this meeting, but become a member.

Main Street will continue to move forward unless someone lets the steam out of its boilers. Let's show the people that we won't allow this to happen. Don't let the steam out, but kindle the flames of progress.

Be at tonight's meeting at the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce building beginning at 7 p.m., and don't leave until you join the Main Street drive.

Smokers of the world, unite!

Don't look now, but I suspect a large group of worms may be getting ready to turn.

About one in every four adult Americans still smokes. That is a lot of potential voters — far more than voted for Ross Perot in 1992, and (if united) quite enough to persuade Congress to insert an appropriately big cigarette between the lips of every face on Mount Rushmore.

Yet the anti-smokers have been riding high in recent years, treating smokers like a bunch of drug-addicted pariahs incapable of running their own lives or making their own choices. About two years ago, on the basis of no scientific evidence worthy of the name, they hit on the concept of "passive smoke" — smoke involuntarily inhaled by nonsmokers — as a serious health threat, and since then it's been Katy Bar the Door. Today America is well on its way to becoming a society where smoking is totally banned, not only in every public building but in every workplace, public or private.

The cheap thrill this has given to certain mousy little sadists who never had a chance to throw their weight around before must not be underestimated. There are few pleasures that compare with the rush some people get from morally condemning their fellow men. Under the leadership of the unspeakable Henry Waxman and a handful of other opportunistic politicians, they are determined to outlaw smoking altogether, indirectly if not directly.

Smokers have put up with this harassment because, by and large, they are decent people who rightly feel uneasy about inconveniencing their fellow citizens when they smoke. But most of them do not, in my experience, consider themselves the unhappy slaves of an addiction that will kill them in their prime. They are aware that, like many other pleasures, including alcohol and rich food, tobacco can, in excess, have a serious effect on their health. But they are also aware (unlike, apparently, a lot of health nuts) that they are going to die sooner or later anyway, and that the great majority of them won't, in fact, die of lung cancer. Yet they are being treated like lepers.

Now, at last, there are signs that America's smokers are tiring of playing "it" in this national game of tag. And not just smokers. Not long ago I was at a luncheon where a prominent figure in the entertainment world was asked, as the desert dishes were cleared away, whether he smoked. "No," he replied, "but I'm thinking of taking it up." The odor of anti-smoking sanctimony had gotten to him, too.

I first noticed the shift of tone in the letters column of Marvin Frank's wonderful new quarterly, Cigar Aficionado. The writers — and I will grant you that cigar smokers are, in general, a somewhat more macho and aggressive bunch than cigarette smokers — have had it up to here with the anti-smoking brigade. The magazine regularly lists fine restaurants all over the country that are "cigar-friendly," and the incoming letters recount, with names and other details, those where unnecessarily unpleasant experiences have been had. I suspect it is only a matter of time until the writers start turning on elected officials.

All they need is a national lobbying organization with a Washington address. (I suggest calling it "United Smokers of America.")

JOSEPH SPEAR

Comet vindicates dedicated worriers

Perhaps now the Serious Worriers of this world will get some respect. Perhaps now, all you Normal People who fret over such minutiae as the price of coffee beans or iron overload or the inadequacy of landfill space will finally begin to applaud what Serious Worriers have been doing for you all these years.

We've been telling you for eons that the planet Earth could be bombarded with objects from outer space. Did you listen? Nooooo. You chortled up your sleeves until this July, when huge chunks of Comet Shoemaker-Levy 9 crashed into Jupiter with the force of 6 million nuclear bombs, creating fireballs and flashs and colossal craters.

Now all you Normal People know that what we SWs have been warning you about all this time is very possible.

We've been telling you for eons that the planet Earth could be bombarded with objects from outer space.

Our lovely planet could be slammed by some humongous object that could turn the metropolis of Omaha into Lake Omaha in the blink of an eye.

I bring this matter up at this point because we have just entered the official 1994-1995 Worrying Season, and it is the perfect moment to honor the Serious Worriers who have done so much for humanity with so little recognition through the years.

For the uninitiated, the official Worrying Season begins the day after Labor Day and runs through the following Memorial Day, with a week off between Christmas and New Years. Although Serious Worriers allegedly get the summer months off, they don't really because they gnaw their nails to nubs worrying about what they're going to worry about after Labor Day.

Until Shoemaker-Levy 9 came along (frankly, it had been a season of pretty slim pickings for SWs. For example, these are a few of the things I had on my personal worry list:

Drinking just two cups of coffee a day can weaken women's bones, leading to crippling fractures.... Raw oysters continue to be a health threat because they tend to become contaminated with a bacteria called Vibrio vulnificus and eating them, experts say, is tantamount to "a game of seafood roulette."

Hot chili peppers may be carcinogenic, studies show, and people who say they are "heavy" consumers of them are 17 times more likely to develop stomach cancer.... Children who eat more than a dozen hot dogs a month are nine times more likely to develop childhood leukemia; if your father ate hot dogs during conception or your mother ate hot dogs during pregnancy, your risk of brain tumors is double that of kids whose parents avoided wieners.... Autopsies performed in Australia disclosed that drinking eight beers a day can cause brain damage.

Bungee jumping can pop the veins in your eyeballs.... Rural rivers are so polluted it's putting a crimp in total submersion baptisms.... Anger more than doubles the risk of a heart attack in people with heart problems.... Research on 5,000 people show that Monday morning is the most likely time for a working person to experience a heart attack.

As I said, it was fairly routine stuff until summer brought with it the comet bombardment of Jupiter and — get this — threats of voodoo curses from Haiti. This is true: Haitians who do not want the United States to invade their island are casting spells designed to blind and confuse American troops. Other believers in this curious practice have said they will dispatch Zombies to fight the Marines and douse them with poisonous powder.

GUEST COLUMNIST

Let's say thanks to the unsung heroes on the job

Off on a totally different subject matter this trip. No crime, no criminals, no judges, juries or courtrooms — not even an idiotic decision or two. Nope, none of those this time. Oh no, I haven't given up on them. No way! I haven't even turned over a new leaf. What I did find — actually I stumbled over it — was a slightly different soapbox. Looked it over — tried it on for size — and climbed aboard.

After teetering back and forth a couple dozen or so times, I think I've got this bronco ready for riding — so here goes.

Today, my good friends out there in LaLaLand, we're going to do something so totally out of character that you're probably going to wonder who the heck wrote this column this time. I plead guilty.... 'Twas me and the whole me and nobody other than me, so help me Hanna.

On this fine day we are going to praise the unrecognized and unsung heroes of yesterday, today, and tomorrow. Those men and women who most of you (us) simply take for granted, sort of like leaves on a tree or grass in the yard. You never notice them when you see them. You only notice them when you don't see them anymore. It's then that you realize that they're not there. What happened? And you miss them. Oh-my-yes! You do miss them.

Who are they? Well now, let's roam around the barn a time or two and take a look-see. There's a whole big bunch of real life heroes out there. Let's see if we can latch on to three-four unsuspecting souls that just might fit the bill. Here we go — ready or not.

How about your friendly police officer? Oh yea, you don't want to see one of "t-h-e-m" when you're doing 75 in a 55 mph zone. But just wait till your life is in dire danger in a real serious way and you'll welcome him/her with open arms and a tear in your eye. Hero, right? Right-on!

How about your friendly firefighter? You don't even see them even when you look at them. Especially when they come around knocking on doors for a contribution so they can serve you better. No, of course not. But when your butt is making like a sizzling rump roast in a very serious fire, you'll think otherwise in a mighty big way, when that firefighter gets to you before the flames do. Hero, right? Right-on!

SEMINOLE OPINION

And now, one more most unlikely candidate for title of unsung hero. You know "of" him/her. You most likely have never "met" him/her. You may never have "seen" him/her. But rest assured that he/she is there — on a regular basis. But let him/her skip you once or twice a year and all hell breaks loose. Immediate thunderstorm of blue haze vocabulary. Why? All it takes is one little phone call. Okay. So he/she missed your driveway now and then. So what. Got it in the right yard didn't he/she? The exercise is good for you anyway ... so quellurwitchenawready! I am speaking of your paper delivery guy/gal. Hero, right? Right-on!

Chomp on that double mouthful for awhile. Don't choke. I'm now off duty.

Japan to send troops to help refugees

TOKYO — Japan will send about 400 troops to Zaire to join international relief efforts to help Rwandan refugees, a Defense Agency official said today.

The troops were expected to be sent sometime later this month for a six-month tour, but the official said those and other details would be decided after the return Sunday of Japan's third study mission to the area.

The plan is set to receive final approval at a Cabinet meeting on Tuesday. The dispatch was approved last month in a policy switch for Socialist Prime Minister Tomichi Murayama, whose party had bitterly opposed previous troop dispatches, saying they violated Japan's pacifist constitution.

The dispatch will be Japan's third under a 1992 peacekeeping law, following dispatches to Cambodia and Mozambique.

Clash kills police chief, two others

MANILA, Philippines — A police chief and two other people were killed in a clash between police and Communist rebels about 20 miles north of Manila, authorities said Thursday.

New People's Army rebels fired on a group of lawmen Wednesday in a village near Placerdel town in Bulacan province, police said. Senior Inspector Paul Mendosa, an aide and one of the rebels were killed in the ensuing gunfight.

The Communist Party has been fighting the government for 24 years, but recent power struggle has kept them from launching large-scale military operations.

Newspaper publishes nude pic of prince

LONDON — A German newspaper published a photograph Wednesday of Prince Charles in the nude.

Buckingham Palace was not amused.

"We think it is completely unjustifiable for anybody to suffer this sort of intrusion," said a spokesman.

The daily tabloid Bild said the photo was taken while Charles was vacationing at a friend's villa in southern France. The heir to the British throne is seen inside the villa wearing only a folded white bathrobe draped over his left shoulder.

The 4.9-million circulation newspaper did not reveal how the photograph was taken.

Britain's Daily Mirror newspaper said a French magazine Paris Match also will publish the photo. No British newspapers have published it, so far.

Refugees criss-crossing the globe

GENEVA — More than 20 million people fled their homelands over the last two decades and the tide of refugees is unlikely to recede soon, a United Nations study says.

In 1970, there were 2.5 million refugees around the world, said the report issued Tuesday by the International Labor Organization, the International Organization for Migration and the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees.

Now, an average of 10,000 people become refugees every day to escape persecution, oppression and war, the UNHCR said.

The figures do not include people who technically are not refugees because they have not crossed an international border. In the former Yugoslavia alone, war and ethnic terror have displaced more than 3 million such people, the report said.

Some people do go home, it said, citing successful voluntary repatriation efforts in Afghanistan, Cambodia, Central America and Mozambique.

Cubans: Disillusionment spreads

By The Associated Press

HAVANA — The man sitting amid banks scattered on a downtown sidewalk was once a soldier for Fidel Castro and in better times used his economics training to analyze data at the National Bank.

"I was one of those who went to Angola" when that southern African nation fought Portugal for independence during the 1960s and '70s, he said, giving his name only as "Carlos."

"When I came back, I returned in my old job at the bank, but you can't live on what you earn there," he said.

Unfortunately, he's not doing much better at his new job. "Now everybody is taking books from everywhere to sell," he said glumly. "Even books from libraries."

After the collapse of the Soviet Union and three years into a recession that Castro's communist government euphemistically calls a "special period," many Cubans say life is more difficult than ever.

They wonder if — not when — things will get better.

Thousands are fleeing on ramshackle rafts they build themselves, often after selling their last possessions, sometimes using wood from their own homes, most trying to evade U.S. Coast Guard cutters and float to Florida.

Cubans who stay behind don't do so happily, and aren't sure they're making the right decision. They grumble about state policies that are cornerstones of Castro's socialist revolution.

After Castro took power in 1959, he set up a distribution system whereby Cubans were required to buy food, clothes and other goods from state stores. Not just any store. Each family was assigned to a particular store.

Today, those stores are lined with mostly with bare shelves, and Cubans with miserly state salaries don't have the cash to shop elsewhere. Many feel cheated because the so-called "diplomat stores" that charge in U.S. dollars also are run by the state.

"Here, anyone who isn't a foreigner can't live," said Maira Hernandez, a 27-year-old housewife. "In the diplo-stores, you can find everything, but in the state stores, where we Cubans have to go with our coupon book, there's nothing."

"It's not possible to keep two kids well fed on the rations I receive," said Diana Diaz, a 22-year-old mother, looking embarrassed as she stood with her sleepy children outside a tourist hotel. "Give me a dollar, please, I beg you."

While anti-Castro discontent is hardly open and there's not an opposition leader in sight, Cubans' ties to their government nevertheless seem to be wearing thin.

These days, Castro hardly is mentioned in conversations, and young adults appear to have little interest in trying to promote change from within. They get out or get by.

Some refer to the government as "Liborio," a fictional character used by Cubans to represent the government as a way to distance themselves from their leaders.

"Liborio has enough (resources) to spend, and those who are well-connected are doing OK," said Esteban Gonzalez, a 45-year-old who said he used to volunteer for state jobs, but no longer.

"That's why no one feels bad about stealing to get something to sell, to allow you to buy life's basic necessities," he said.

Gonzalez no longer looks forward to the secure retirement he was promised.

"It seems I'll work until I die because the way I see it, everything is going to get worse," he said.

Disillusionment is widespread.

Cubans on beaches about to flee their country on homemade rafts that they know are unsafe listen to U.S. radio reports, unwilling to leave the fateful decision in the hands of a government they don't trust.

Britain tries to soothe protestant fears

By ROBERT BARR
Associated Press Writer

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — Addressing a bastion of aggressive Protestantism, a British Cabinet minister said the majority has nothing to fear from negotiations with Catholic parties on the future of Northern Ireland.

Sir Patrick Mayhew told members of the Orange Order on Wednesday that they have a "cast-iron guarantee" that no settlement will be imposed against the wishes of a majority of Northern Ireland's people.

The Orange Order is the province's largest Protestant organization, with 80,000 to 100,000 members. The order's name recalls William of Orange, the Protestant king who defeated the Catholic James II in 1690 and its celebrations of old Protestant victories each July are a major irritant to Catholics.

The senior branch of the order, the Royal Black Institution, is led by James Molyneux, the senior Protestant politician in Northern Ireland. He has kept quiet during the peace overtures.

As the Irish Republican Army cease-fire entered its eighth day today soldiers in Belfast switched from helmets to berets, a slight but symbolic change of easing tensions. They remained heavily armed.

"It is fair to say that the IRA cease-fire has held and our soldiers and policemen have experienced a welcome change in the atmosphere in republican areas," Mayhew said Wednesday.

"That much is welcome and every day it continues can bring us closer to concluding that it is meant to last."

Vice President Al Gore indicated during a stop at Shannon, Ireland that he accepted the judgment of Irish Prime Minister Albert Reynolds that the IRA's 24-year campaign is over.

But Prime Minister John Major, who was in the Netherlands on Wednesday, sounded annoyed.

The start of the Sanford Recreation Department men's fall softball season has been pushed back until the week of Sept. 12th. The SRD will take entries until Friday, Sept. 9, at 5 p.m.

In addition to the regular slowpitch leagues, there are also plans to start a modified fastpitch league on Monday nights at Chase Park.

Those interested in learning more about the league, which is a cross between slowpitch and fastpitch, are invited to come out to Pinhurst Park Tuesday, September 6, at 6:30 p.m.

The entry fee for all of the softball leagues, which run for 10 weeks, is $250 for teams already registered with the ASA and $265 for teams not yet registered with the ASA.

A $10 or $15 fee is also required for any non-Sanford resident. The $10 fee is for individuals, while a whole family, from two members on up, can pay a $15 fee. The non-resident fee is good for an entire year, from October 1 through September 30.

For more information, call (407) 330-5897 between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Marlins seek new AAA site

MIAMI — The Florida Marlins hope to reach an agreement with Charlotte or Buffalo as their new Triple-A affiliate.

Major-league teams seeking minor-league affiliation have until Sept. 25 to work out arrangements for next year. The Marlins want to avoid returning to Edgewater, which has been their Triple-A home for two years, because it's too far away from Miami.

Besides Charlotte and Buffalo, the Marlins' other possibilities are Tucson, Las Vegas, Tacoma and Calgary.

Tigers in St. Petersburg?

ST. PETERSBURG — If the Detroit Tigers fail to get a new stadium to replace their current home, the team could be interested in relocating to Florida.

A member of the team's board of directors, however, stressed in an interview with The Tampa Tribune that the club's preference is to remain in Detroit and not move to St. Petersburg.

City records obtained by the Tribune show the Tigers requested extensive demographic and operational data about the area and St. Petersburg's ThunderDome.

No. 7 Jana Novotna beat No. 4 Mary Pierce 6-4, 6-0 to advance to the women's semis against No. 1 Steffi Graf, who beat Amanda Coetzer 6-0, 6-2. Arantxa Sanchez Vicario and Gabriela Sabatini will play in the other semifinal.

Sophomore helps rally 'Hounds by Spruce Creek

From Staff Reports

PORT ORANGE — When you're the only sophomore on a varsity team opening its season on the road, not much is expected of you other than to sit, watch, and learn.

But after the Lyman Greyhounds dropped the first game of their best-of-three boys' volleyball match to the host Spruce Creek Hawks Wednesday evening, Lyman coach Norm Lewis brought 6-foot, 2-inch sophomore Kevin Crager off the bench early in the second game.

All Crager did was help the Greyhounds rally for a 12-15, 15-10, 15-13 win over the Hawks.

"What really sparked us was the play of Kevin Crager off the bench," said Ready. "He came in when we were having a little trouble and gave us a real big lift. In the second game alone, he had four kills, two blocks, and two assists."

Fabian Torres contributed nine assists to the Lyman attack while Curtis Fenney collected nine kills as the Greyhounds opened their 1994 campaign with a victory.

"We're off to a much better start than last year," said Ready. "The kids played hard and really stuck together after losing the first game."

Ready also praised the play of hitters Brad Lewis, Jason Cronert, and Mike Drael, who had in deal with some sizeable obstacles presented by the Hawks.

"We had real good net play from Lewis, Cronert, and Drael," Ready said. "Spruce Creek is real big at the net. They have one player that's 6-7 and another that's 6-6. They (the Hawks) did a good job of blocking at the net. We had to make some changes and mix some things up to get away from the blocks."

The Greyhounds (1-0) will open the Seminole Athletic Conference portion of their season a week earlier than scheduled, traveling to Lake Mary for a match next Monday, Sept. 12.

"We were supposed to play on the 10th, but we're having an open house at Lyman that night and so is Lake Mary," explained Ready. "That's why we moved it up a week."

The additional match will make for a busy week for the Greyhounds, who also have matches scheduled with first-year Volusia County schools Port Orange-Allanric (Tuesday) and Deltona-Pine Ridge (Thursday) next week.

SANFORD — They had to withstand two second-half comebacks — including one that forced overtime — but The A.C. Boys had enough to sweep a doubleheader Wednesday and clinch the championship in the Sanford Recreation Senior Summer Basketball League at the Sanford Middle School Gymnasium.

In the first game, The A.C. Boys built a 37-28 halftime lead and hung on to defeat Sanford AAU 66-60. After the Recks shot down C.E.I. Roofing 56-47, The A.C. Boys came back in the nightcap to beat the Runnin' Rebels 74-70 in overtime.

Kent Pritchard paced The A.C. Boys' attack, scoring a game-high 19 points in the win over Sanford AAU and collecting 33 points against the Runnin' Rebels.

Now 9-2, The A.C. Boys have an insurmountable 3½-game lead over both Sanford AAU and the Runnin' Rebels, who are tied for second at 5-5. They're followed by the Recks (4-5) and C.E.I. Roofing (1-9).

Five games remain in the season. Next Tuesday, the Runnin' Rebels meet the Recks at 6:30 p.m., Sanford AAU faces C.E.I. Roofing at 7:30 p.m., and The A.C. Boys play the Recks in the 8:30 p.m. On Thursday, the Recks and Sanford AAU play at 7 p.m. before the Runnin' Rebels and C.E.I. Roofing tangle at 8 p.m.

Silent sticks doom Toucan Willie's

From Staff Reports

OVIEDO — There are some days (and the occasional night) when you might have been better off staying in bed.

Toucan Willie's suffered through one of those nights Wednesday at the Oviedo Sports Complex, giving a most inoffensive exhibition during a 9-3 loss to the Frat House in Oviedo Wednesday Men's Class C Slowpitch Softball League play.

Collectively, Toucan Willie's scored just one run in the game's first six innings and collected all of five hits. Two of those hits came off the bat of Ryan Alkire, who went 2-for-3 with a double, single, and run scored.

The only other hits for Toucan Willie's were doubles by Troy Keasinger and Joe Brandon and a single hit by Pete Arcamone.

Lance Abney and Brandon each scored a run for Toucan Willie's while Kenny Tuttle, Abney, and Keasinger each were credited with an RBI.

Now 1-1, Toucan Willie's will play again next Wednesday at 8 p.m. against Froggers.

Casselberry pilot posts first win of the season

By PAUL MARSEGLIA
Special to The Herald

SAMSULA — Casselberry's Jeff Anderson weathered an early-race challenge from Jerry Jones and went on to win the Modified feature event last Saturday night, Sept. 3, at New Smyrna Speedway.

Anderson, who started on the pole, led every circuit to notch his first win of the season.

"Jerry's car and mine are pretty equally matched but tonight, for some reason, I was stronger," said Anderson. "We've had some good finishes lately, but not as good as we would have liked, so we've been putting in a lot of extra hours on the car and it's paying off."

Jones, last week's feature winner, was followed by Joe Middleton, Danny Bancroft, and Wayne Parker.

Osteen's Bobby Sears avoided a three-car pileup on lap six to win the Mini Stock headliner.

Racing into turn one, Gene Van Alstine, Ted Vulpius, and Jared Allison made contact with all three cars drilling the outside retaining wall. None of the drivers were injured, but all three cars went behind the wall for the rest of the night.

Sears, who was in the process of working his way up through the field, took the low groove to avoid the melee.

"The track was a little slick tonight because of the earlier rains," said Sears, the defending FASCAR Mini Stock champion. "The guys were racing hard for position and just got caught up. We were lucky to get by the accident and not get involved. Some nights, you're not that lucky."

On lap 10, Sears moved into second place. Three laps later, he moved to the inside of Harland Sanford and took over the lead. Sears held on for the win with Sanford finishing second ahead of Brian Van Alstine, Kevin DiMeco, and Keith French.

In the Limited Late Model main event, Allen Rhodes went green flag to checkers for the victory.

Rhodes, who started on the pole, took the checkers three car lengths in front of Joe Strehle. Rounding out the top five were Andy Saffioti, Claude Collignon, and Curt Towers.

Gary "Hot Shoe" Balough outtraced DeLand's Tony Ponder to win the 25-lap Late Model feature.

Ponder jumped to the early lead and by the end of the second lap, had an eight to 10-car advantage over the rest of the field. His lead was short-lived, however, as Balough, who started the race from the sixth position, took command on lap six.

Despite repeated challenges by Ponder, Balough maintained his advantage.

"We lost one last night by a bad call, but tonight, there's no doubt in anyone's mind who won," said Balough, who is six victories away from having a 50-win season. "We won this one."

"Racing is racing. You win some and some of the ones you should have won slip away from you."

Balough was making reference to controversial call at Orlando Speedworld the night before, when he was sent to the back of the pack for allegedly rear-ending Pete Orr and Ricky Wood. Orr went on to win Friday's feature with Balough working his way back to finish fourth.

Rounding out the top five behind Balough and Ponder in Saturday night's race were Wood, Craig Reynolds, and Pat McClain.

Barbara Pierce claimed the top spot in the Sportsman main event. She was followed by Art Chapman, John Witt, Dale Clouser, and Bill Loomis.

In the Bomber feature, Chuck Vola claimed the checkers, finishing in front of Jeremy Fitch, Bobby Stevens, Mac Pelkey, and Billy Belflower.

Matt Rauscher won the Run-About feature while Scott Jarvis finished first in the Four-Cylinder Enduro.

Balding strikes a young female

PETER GOTT, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 28-year-old daughter has been diagnosed with alopecia. She's on medication and receives steroid shots to the affected areas. I've heard that stress has a lot to do with this disease. That might explain why she's been so afflicted, as she's under a great deal of stress. Any light you can shed on this condition would be appreciated.

DEAR READER: The cause of alopecia (balding) in women is often difficult to identify. Genetic factors play a role, as do medical conditions (including hypothyroidism) and skin disorders, such as eczema. Also, stress may contribute to hair loss in some individuals.

If your daughter can learn more effective ways of coping with stress -- with stress counseling, for example -- her alopecia may improve. However, she will probably achieve more success by being under the care of a dermatologist, as I suspect she already is. Cortisone (steroid) injections into affected areas of the scalp are not always successful, but are certainly worth a try, because there is no consistently effective therapy for this condition.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband and I both suffer from heel spurs. I had no idea they could be so painful. We're only in our late 50s and our activity has been curtailed by the problem. We've been to foot specialists and are using orthotic inserts. The doctors are reluctant to operate on the spurs because of the rate of failure and the long recovery period needed after surgery -- apparently two months for each foot. Anti-inflammatory medication is helping, but I don't know for how long. What would you suggest?

DEAR READER: If your heel spurs (calcium deposits in the tissues of the heels) have not responded to orthotic devices, you may be helped by cortisone injections into the painful areas. If the injections fail, you'll either have to put up with the pain or consider surgery to remove the deposits.

I suggest that you seek a second opinion from an orthopedic surgeon. In my experience, surgery is usually successful and will not severely hamper your activities for more than a couple of weeks. Copyright 1994 NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

The second session of the Ninth Worldwide Bridge Contest, held Saturday, June 11, and sponsored by Seiko Epson Corporation and France Telecom, contained a few interesting deals. The one in today's diagram caught my eye.

If you open with a pre-empt and it goes all pass, normally partner has a hand like North's: a void in your suit and good defense. Such is life. But sometimes you make the contract anyway.

West leads the heart queen. After winning with the ace, what should East return at trick two? If the hearts are 4-3-3-3 round the table, another heart will be best. Yet this is unlikely. And, as South is marked with the heart king, West surely has the spade king. So East should switch to the spade seven, leading the low card to avoid blocking the suit.

Now declarer is in a quandary. If he plays on trumps, he gets home when the suit breaks 3-3. But that will happen only about one time in three. Alternatively, South plays a heart to his king and takes the 50-50 club finesse. If it wins, he has a discard for a spade loser and can afford to lose two trump tricks. (Hopefully the defenders cannot produce a promotion to win three trump tricks.) But if the club finesse loses, the contract will be two down instead of one.

In the event, taking the club finesse and making three diamonds for plus 110 was worth 66 matchpoints out of 100. Playing on trumps and going minus 50 gave North-South 26 points. And minus 100 would have been worth four points. So the club finesse was a worthwhile risk.

If in doubt, go with the percentages.
