Sniper opens fire at Fort Bragg

From Staff and Wire Reports

FORT BRAGG, N.C. — A sniper reportedly opened fire today on soldiers exercising at Fort Bragg, killing one and wounding at least 15 others.

A Sanford woman received a phone call early this morning from her daughter, telling her of the shooting, and assuring her that she was safe.

Linda Carol Wilson, formerly of Osteen and Sanford, who has been stationed at Fort Bragg for approximately four years, had been allowed to skip this morning's exercise session, and told her mother she was still in bed at the time of the shooting.

The shooting occurred about 6:30 a.m. in the barracks and office area of the elite 82nd Airborne Division where soldiers routinely perform calisthenics before starting work.

"A suspect was arrested and is in custody," base spokesman Gene Sexton said.

The suspect was a soldier, but no further information was immediately available on the

Red Ribbon Month: Making a commitment

Kids nix drugs, alcohol

SANFORD — While some students just talk about being drug free, some students are willing to put it in writing.

Students at Crooms Academy in Sanford and schools across the district have decorated their classrooms and the hallways around campus in celebration of Red Ribbon month.

At Crooms, students in each homeroom signed banners that covered their classroom doors with a pledge to remain free of the influences of drugs.

They said they have taken the theme of this year's celebration ("Real Life is Drug Free") to heart and are making sure they don't do drugs so they can live life to the fullest.

School officials said they have been working hard this month to help give students the information they need to live a life free of chemicals.

Study asks for commission's suggestions

By MCK PFERAUF
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Seminole County Commissioner Win Adams was the first to examine the results of a courthouse study yesterday afternoon. He indicated there was no specific recommendation presented at this time.

Individual commissioners are scheduled to review the findings during the next few days. While both Adams and Commissioner Pat Warren were scheduled yesterday, the meeting with Warren was postponed when the paperwork reportedly reached the county offices later than had been expected.

The question is whether or not to move the judicial operations of the Seminole County courthouse out of downtown Sanford, to Five Points in the extreme southern end of the city.

Keith Reeves, president of Architectural Design Group, who prepared the latest study had earlier indicated that it was still in the rough-draft form. He said it wouldn't be finalized until each

Senate set to join House as GOP reshapes government

By ALAN FRAM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Senate is poised to bless watershed Republican plans for constricting social spending, cutting taxes and balancing the budget, a day after a jubilant GOP muscled a similar package through the House.

With assurances of victory by Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., the Senate planned to vote today on the measure, which promises to erase federal deficits by 2002 while reversing decades of ever-expanding reach by the government.

It would revamp Medicare, Medicaid and a mountain of other programs, trim projected federal spending by about $1 trillion over seven years and lop $245 billion off the tax bills of Firefighters from Sanford and Seminole County were called to 2021 Sipes Avenue in Midway yesterday morning to quell a house fire. The call was first made regarding a stove fire, but eventually involved the entire structure. Fire officials say the occupants of the house escaped unharmed. A propane tank, located behind the structure, was removed before the flames hit that area.

Man is grandsons' father

BARTOW — Genetic testing shows a 99.35 percent probability a man is the father of his adopted daughter's two children, prosecutors said. A 53-year-old Frostproof man is charged with two counts of engaging a child in sexual activity, sexual battery and possession of a firearm by a convicted felon. The daughter, now 19, has sons ages 1 and 4. The man has been held in Polk County Jail since his arrest in May on $26,000 bail. In court in July, Circuit Judge Robert Young ordered the man to undergo blood testing for comparison with his daughter's and her sons' blood. A Florida Department of Law Enforcement laboratory tested the blood and DNA for similarities and sent the test results to the State Attorney's Office this week. Russell Knowles, executive director of the State Attorney's Office, said Thursday "the DNA shows a 99.35 percent probability" the man is the father. His trial date has not yet been set.

Left for dead

TAMPA — A jury convicted two men of kidnapping and beating a woman who was left for dead after being abducted from a mall and taken to Albany, Ga. Jermaine A. Young, 21, and Willie James Colbert Jr., 20, both of Albany, were found guilty Thursday of carjacking, kidnapping, conspiracy to commit carjacking and kidnapping, and using firearms during a crime of violence. They could face life in prison. Sentencing is set for Feb. 2. Donna Jean Anderson was entering her van in the parking lot at the Town Center Mall in Port Charlotte when she was kidnapped by six suspects and taken to Albany on Nov. 16, 1994. The Venice mother of two was nearly drowned when the suspects tried to drive her van into the Flint River. That failed when the van ran off the left side of the boat ramp and got stuck bumper-deep in mud. After that she was dragged out of the van and beaten in the head with a brick, stomped on and choked with a couple of belts before she was left for dead, prosecutors said. Anderson, 39, testified Tuesday against the two men.

Deal cut to avoid electric chair

MIAMI — Convicted killer and cocaine trafficker Robert Young has cut a deal with prosecutors, pleading no contest to the contract murder of powerboat king Don Aronow in exchange for avoiding the electric chair. Young, 47, pleaded no contest to a charge of second-degree murder and was sentenced to 19 years in prison. He already is serving 17 years for a kidnapping in Broward County and murder in Dade County. The terms will be served concurrently. Part of the deal approved last week ensures Young will never testify against Benjamin Barry Kramer, who allegedly paid Young $60,000 to kill Aronow eight years ago and is awaiting trial. "Bobby is not a rat," said Young's lawyer, Kayo Morgan. "He is not a cheese-eater." Prosecutors said they can get a conviction against Kramer even without Young. Kramer, who is serving a life term for unrelated federal drug and racketeering convictions, is likely to go on trial next summer. "We have a very good case," said Dade Assistant State Attorney Penny Brill. Aronow, 59, was killed outside his USA Racing office. He was a wealthy millionaire speedboat designer. He was shot as he left his office, shortly after visiting a rival boat dealership owned by Kramer.

Driver escaped jail time

JACKSONVILLE — A Neptune Beach teen-ager who killed her best friend in a drunken driving accident will be allowed to keep her driver's license and escape jail, conditions requested by the victim's family. If Kimberly Wheeler, 17, fulfills the conditions of her five-year probation, a manslaughter conviction will be removed from her record. She must complete a driving course, abstain from alcohol and drugs and devote 250 hours to lecturing about the dangers of drinking and driving. She also must pay $9,590 in restitution. Ms. Wheeler was speeding on May 23 when she lost control of Aman's car and struck and light pole and several cars. Ms. Aman, 19, died in the collision. Three other passengers were injured. Ms. Wheeler's blood-alcohol level was .09. Under Florida law, a blood-alcohol level of .08 is considered intoxicated.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

STOP measure cleared for ballot

By JACQUE HALLIFAX
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Crime victims reacted with joy and relief when the state Supreme Court cleared the way for a petition drive against early prison releases to make the ballot next year. "Wonderful!" Jane Hutchings of Fort Myers said. "Oh, I'm so excited. Fantastic. You have wonderful news. ... Oh, I can't believe it!" Roxann Grimstead of Hollywood reacted to Thursday's ruling with somber gratitude. "Just 'God, thank you,'" she sighed. Both Hutchings and Grimstead are members of Stop Turning Out Prisoners, which is collecting signatures to add a provision to the state constitution that would keep inmates behind bars for 85 percent of their sentences. Both women are also the mothers of murder victims. The man convicted of stabbing Hutchings' 22-year-old daughter 37 times six years ago had been out of prison eight months after serving six years of a 20-year prison sentence. The man charged with killing Mrs. Grimstead's 17-year-old daughter in January 1994 had been released from prison after serving four years of an 18-year prison sentence. Florida's high court cleared STOP's measure for the ballot but did not judge its merits. However, the ruling means STOP can move ahead with its signature campaign, unlike last year when the court rejected another version of the measure. The citizens' initiative properly deals with only a single subject and the ballot summary clearly describes the amendment. Florida's high court ruled a unanimous decision. The opinion came just a few weeks after oral arguments and after a new state law that requires inmates to serve 85 percent of their sentences took effect. Although the proposed amendment does the same thing as the new law, the constitution is far safer from attempts to weaken the requirement, supporters say. STOP has many more names to gather before the amendment can go before voters. Elections officials must verify 429,428 signatures by mid-August. So far, the state Division of Elections has been notified of nearly 69,000 signatures. STOP said Thursday it has collected more than 150,000. "STOP will move forward with the petition drive despite our lack of money to fund it," STOP Director Kathleen Finnegan said in a statement released by the group's office in Punta Gorda. STOP has run on a financial shoestring, and at one point this spring had just $11. Last year, the campaign raised more than $50,000 from a handful of corporate sponsors and dozens of individual donors. The proposal has been revised since July 1994, when the court ruled it could not go before voters because its ballot summary was inadequate. At that time, the court was concerned the measure didn't explain how it would treat criminals sentenced to life in prison. That problem has been fixed. Justice Charles Wells wrote Thursday. State Sen. Charlie Crist, R-St. Petersburg, said he would try to get the Legislature to place the measure on the ballot, something he tried unsuccessfully to do last year. "It's that important to public safety that it ought to be part of the constitution," Crist said. A measure can be placed on the state ballot by the Legislature or by a citizens' initiative.

Officials confirm HIV through human bite

By The Associated Press

WEST PALM BEACH — State health officials urged the public not to panic after federal officials reported a 91-year-old man had contracted the virus that causes AIDS when he was bitten during a robbery. "Many, many, many bites have been investigated, but this is the first time the HIV virus has been transmitted to the victim," said Palm Beach County health department director Dr. Jean Malecki. "The woman had blood in her mouth, and her severe, brutal bites caused extensive tissue damage and bleeding in the patient," Malecki said. "We are looking at this as a bloodborne transmission, not transmission through saliva." The case is the first blood-to-blood transmission through a human bite of HIV. It was confirmed through testing by Roche Molecular Systems in Alameda, Calif., which compared the strain of HIV found in the blood of both Elmer Hutto, now 92, and Naomi Morrison, whose gums were bleeding at the time of the August 1994 attack. The results "are consistent with person-to-person transmission," Roche senior scientist Barbara Bowman wrote Oct. 12 to Dr. Marcia Kallah, chief of molecular biology in the HIV/AIDS division of the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta. "We found that the DNA sequence showed a similar strand," said CDC spokeswoman Michelle Bonds. "We have not confirmed that the route of transmission was a bite." The agency was still investigating, she said. State officials seemed certain.

"It was the first transmission by a bite," said Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services spokeswoman Michelle Lugo. Hutto reported the incident to West Palm Beach police, and they arrested Morrison five days later. After being picked out of a photo lineup, she confessed, police said. She is serving a 10-year sentence for aggravated battery, robbery and burglary of a vehicle. Hutto's daughter, who asked that her family's name not be used, said Thursday her father was "not doing too well," but declined to elaborate on his health. The victim's grandson said, "Our family feels that it's time people be educated about this. We wouldn't want any other family to go through what we are if it could be prevented." State officials emphasized the rarity of factors that combined for the first such diagnosis in more than 15 years of AIDS reporting. "The good news is that, over the years, we have taken hundreds of calls from police officers and children saying they were bitten" and none has resulted in transmission of HIV, said Tom Liberti, an epidemiologist who administers Florida's office of disease intervention. He added it is unlikely infection would occur at a day care center. Of 200,000 live births in Florida each year, fewer than 300 babies are HIV-infected. Most of these children receive regular medical attention and social workers monitor their cases. "There are not that many HIV-infected kids in day care to begin with," Liberti said.

What's up in the NFL?

Hot Locks, Week Nine: Two for the price of one

By BRADY LESSARD
Herald Correspondent

Well, here we are in Week Nine and I couldn't be happier. I had a brutal Monday night as my LOCK OF THE WEEK failed to come through for the first, and hopefully last, time of the year. I let emotion get involved with my selection of the Buffalo Bills, and that is always a fatal mistake. When Thurman Thomas went down in the first quarter I knew it was over. The Bills' offense has been destroyed by injuries, and the Patriots needed to win. The Niners came out of the bye week strong and thrashed the Rams in St. Louis. Green Bay put a beating on the Vikings that they won't soon forget, and Kansas City prove that Denver has a long way to go.

Washington, Carolina and Jacksonville all rolled to upset victories. The Jaguars are actually in contention for their Division, and will remain so as long as Brunell stays healthy. Cincinnati, on the arm of Sanford Native Jeff Blake, stunned the Pittsburgh Steelers at home. Watching Blake throw the "Bomb" is a beautiful thing. His ability to arc the ball into his receivers amazes me, and many defensive backs in the League. The parity that the NFL is enjoying results from free-agency. As long as players can go to the money, the fans will benefit from a higher level of competition.

Focusing on Florida's teams: let's talk about the Dolphins. As I warned my readers last week, the Jets were fired up for their meeting with the Dolphins. My friend was so convinced the Dolphins would win, he bought me lunch. Needless to say, he regretted purchasing my "all-you-can-eat" rib feast.

The Jets are still the worst team in the league, but they have a way of playing the Dolphins tough. Miami's squad has two things going for them as they play Buffalo. First, Marino is back at the helm, which requires no explanation.

My beloved Bills are so beaten up, I've called HRS to investigate. This game is absolutely huge for the Dolphins, and they should win. If they don't, they have no chance at post season play.

Let's talk about my team. The Bembere was more like a g r e a t h a i r m e t, as the Bucs allowed the Falcons to come in and steal a win. The offense once again failed to pull their weight and counted on Mink and the rest of the defense to score. If Diller can't get it together, I will come out of retirement. I am getting sick of the excuses. We have an excellent defense, the fans are back. It's time to produce. Going to Houston this week will not be any easier. The Oilers played for pride in a 38-35 loss to the Bears on Sunday. I don't want anyone to panic, but if the Bucs lose this week, they will be looking very similar to teams of past.

Let's take a look at Sunday's schedule and find some winners.

DALLAS (-11) at ATLANTA. Dallas is coming off a bye week which means they'll be ready. The Falcons are coming off an unimpressive win, and aren't near as good as their record. Dallas will stomp, not just stop Jeff George.

Cowboys 31 Falcons 10

DETROIT (-8) vs GREEN BAY. I used to bartend for Packer's QB Brett Favre. He is a very cool kid. The pack has been successful stopping Barry Sanders before, but he still scares me. Detroit's coach has a way of winning at home when he needs to, and that scares me. "Big Al" is listed as questionable due to an injury he suffered in the postgame celebration last week. He'll play.

Packers 20 Lions 17

CLEVELAND (-9) vs CINCINNATI. The Browns continue to self-destruct and it makes me happy. They think a new quarterback will solve the problem. It won't. Blake and the Bengals win back-to-back AFC Central match ups.

PHILADELPHIA (-4) vs ST. LOUIS. This one is simple the Rams aren't as good as some people thought, but the Eagles have no business giving anyone points.

Rams 21 Eagles 17

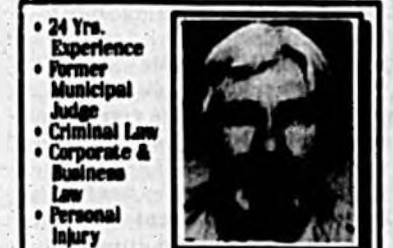

PITTSBURGH (-10) vs JACKSONVILLE. Hasn't a n y o n e been watching? Let me give the same advice as last week. "Take the points and run, don't walk, to the bank." I may start a mutual fund with my proceeds from this one.

Spring ahead, fall back

Spring forward. Fall back. That's the way we're supposed to remember how to change clocks when Daylight Savings Time begins and ends. This Sunday morning, at 2 a.m. (being Fall, naturally), we will turn our clock's back by one hour, and we find ourselves at 1 a.m.

During the Saturday night to Sunday morning period, we will have an extra hour of sleep. But Sunday night we may have to hit the sack an hour earlier in order to compensate for the change because we will be getting up at a time not immediately accepted by our body-language.

There are several reasons why we do this. Probably the biggest reason is that the government tells us we must, following the Uniform Time Act of 1966 (as amended by public law 89-359).

Another reason may be, because our bosses turn their clock's back at work. If we didn't do what everyone else is supposed to do, we would be an hour late in arriving at our jobs.

As of 2 a.m. Sunday morning, we will officially return to Eastern Standard Time. It will have the appearance of being slightly lighter when we awake, and darker earlier in the evening.

One of the serious aspects of any time change, ahead or back, is in becoming adjusted to a sudden change in light versus darkness. Routine streets and roads normally travelled in the early hours of dusk, will be driven in darkness, making it imperative that motorists be more cautious in watching for pedestrians and/or bike riders.

This change in one hour of our time is no big deal. We have done it every Spring and every Fall. Yet it's often difficult to get used to the difference. Some people with whom you work or come in contact with, may be slightly irritable than normal. Put up with it, it won't last long.

Drive with an hour's-worth of extra caution. Be considerate to others who may have forgotten the time change.

Yes, we'll all survive this, but we'll do it better if we are aware of our fellow man and woman.

One last suggestion: Turn the clock back before going to bed Saturday night. It'll save you some confusion Sunday the morning, and you may not end up wandering into church an hour before services begin.

Marriage encourages monogamy for gays

Regarding the Disney company's recent decision to extend health insurance coverage to partners of gay and lesbian employees, Florida Rep. Bob Brooks told the Associated Press, "In the long run (this policy) will result in an increased number of AIDS cases."

That is patently ridiculous. Just the opposite is the likely effect. Encouraging monogamy and commitment among gay people will lessen the number of AIDS cases. That is also why I support the idea of same-sex marriage.

Whether "homo" or "hetero" what we all have in common is that we are SEXUAL beings, and, as such, will act upon our essential natures. The only question is the social framework in which that sexuality will be expressed. Like much of the animal kingdom, human males are not instinctively monogamous, but have their appetites channeled and regulated through social institutions such as marriage. We generally agree upon the benefits of this institution for the straight majority. But we seldom consider the advantages of same-sex marriage not only for gays and lesbians, but for the heterosexual majority as well.

Marriage would encourage monogamy among sexually active gays and lesbians, with the obvious health benefits that accompany monogamous relationships. Also, it will lower the social pressures on closeted gays to marry heterosexual partners, resulting in lower divorce rates and fewer broken homes when the gay partner comes out of the closet. Finally, marriage would place gays and lesbians under the same rights AND OBLIGATIONS that benefit the heterosexual majority with respect to insurance, property and other financial matters.

What sense does it make to condemn gay people for allegedly being "promiscuous" for going from partner to partner without commitment - yet be opposed gay marriage?

Just think, with all the social support and expectations, not to mention direct financial benefits that society provides for heterosexual married couples, half still end up in divorce. How can gays be expected to develop and maintain healthy long-term relationships in the face of, not support, but attacks?

In our society people who are committed to a monogamous relationship need all the support they can get.

Meaning of the 'Million Man March'

When a million (or 800,000, or even just 400,000) people show up anywhere for a single purpose, the event indisputably deserves notice. When the demonstrators are all black, and practically all men, you can be sure that some important point is being made.

Analyses of the huge crowd that showed up for Louis Farrakhan's "Million Man March" in Washington recently indicate that it consisted primarily of middle-class blacks, and this undoubtedly accounts for the blessed fact that it didn't get out of hand - no brawls, no riots, no undisciplined behavior.

What point were the marchers making? The answer is necessarily a little vague, because no definitive manifesto, endorsed by them, was issued either before or after the event. But the major sentiments of the crowd are not in doubt: They were eager to acknowledge their own huge share of responsibility for their fate, and for that of their women and children, and to proclaim their determination to do better in the future. Their mood was not unlike that of the male Christian "Promise Keepers" who have been holding huge rallies all over the country recently.

As thus defined, the march was both a success and a positive good. Beyond that, however, it had important implications for the future of the country, in ways both good and bad.

For one thing, it unquestionably increases the prominence and clout of the march's organizer and leader, Louis Farrakhan. Now, there is simply no blinking at the fact that Farrakhan is a racist and a virulent anti-Semite, whose long-range goal is to separate the white and black races altogether. The marchers obviously knew this, and decided to ignore it. Apparently they regarded the march itself as a good enough idea to warrant their participation, irrespective of Farrakhan's views.

Understanding this, a lot of ink and hot air has been wasted since the march trying to "separate the messenger from the message." This is sound enough, if by that expression all one means is that the marchers didn't understand themselves to be endorsing Farrakhan's repellent views. But, while not endorsing those views, they were perfectly willing to join hands with the man who holds them - and thereby hangs the single most important political point of the entire event.

What point were the marchers making?

For over 60 years the Democratic Party has regarded America's black vote as its wholly owned subsidiary. Black support for Democratic candidates, from City Hall to the White House, routinely runs above 90 percent.

Yet where were the liberal Democrats at the "Million Man March"? Jesse Jackson, of course, showed up and proclaimed his solidarity with the crowd. A few individual Democratic officeholders, practically all black, did likewise. But the stunning fact is that this largest political demonstration in the history of America's blacks was conceived and carried out without either the initiative, the input, or the permission of the liberals who dominate the Democratic Party. (Their titular leader, President Clinton, led Washington altogether, pleading a prior engagement.) What does that suggest about America's political future? It doesn't bode well for liberals.

It's just plain scary for us

BOSTON—Forgive me if I scare you, Bob Dole says I mustn't do that. The presidential contender talked this week about a "transparent campaign to scare Americans." One day, he said, we're scaring seniors, the next day it's farmers, the next it's children.

But the problem is that Congress has been rolling over an entire lifespan of programs for the most vulnerable Americans. The remaining progressive on or off Capital Hill feel like roadkill.

One day it is children and the next it is seniors. It's all happening so fast and furiously that Americans haven't been scared enough. In the rush of hit-and-run policies coming out of Washington, it's hard just to focus on one piece of the puzzle.

So try this piece today, the last in the puzzle of life cycle politics: nursing homes. Try focusing on the 1.5 million elderly Americans who have ended up in these homes. On the federal standards that have made these places safer and have also ended up in the direct line of congressional rush hour.

If the Medicaid proposals pass as they are written, the Congress will have deregulated nursing homes and undone its own reforms. We will be fast-forwarding to the past.

Any journalist who has been watching this Congress can come up with a list of stories that will fill the newspaper in 1998 or 1999. One of them is sure to be about nursing homes where the elderly are bound to their chairs, drugged or found lying in their own waste.

This was a scandalous staple as late as the 1980s when studies showed abuse and neglect of the elderly disabled even in state-certified homes. In 1987 the Congress, with the votes of many of these same members, agreed that a stronger federal role was needed. They passed a law setting standards for quality care, a success story by almost every measure.

What has that regulation meant in human terms? Catherine Hawes, one of the senior policy analysts in this field calculates a few of the improvements this way: 250,000 fewer people tied up, 30,000 fewer people with bedsores, 29 percent fewer people with permanent catheters.

Now Hawes, who grew up as a Tennessee Republican, says with dismay, "I don't think people knew that the Contract with America said I'm going to tie up your grandmother."

This assault on federal standards is not just part of the Republican hostility to government regulation. Nor is it based on a belief that families should care for the elderly.

In America, one out of every three people over 80 will spend some time in a nursing home. The average patient is admitted at 83 with some four chronic diseases. Two-thirds are cognitively impaired, mostly with Alzheimer's. Two-thirds are incontinent. Half Forgive me if I scare you, Bob Dole says I mustn't do that.

have no living relative nearby

They have outlived their health, their husbands? wives, sisters, brothers and maybe even their children. And many have often outlived their incomes as well.

Despite our stereotypes, most long-term care in America is provided by families. But when children can't take care of their aged parents, it may be because "the children" are in their 60s and 70s. When they can't afford to pay, it may be because they are working to put their kids through school and want to avoid becoming a burden to their own children.

So at moments of crisis, families discover that only Medicaid does what we think Medicare does. It pays for nursing homes. After an elder has spent down her money and become impoverished (perhaps for the first time in her life) by ill health, Medicaid picks up the bill. Nearly half the dollars that go to nursing homes come from Medicaid.

What does this have to do with endangered regulations? Under the new proposals, at the end of seven years Medicaid will be reduced by 30 percent a year and Medicaid pays half the nursing home bills. You do the math. There's no way to leave nursing homes untouched.

It doesn't take a synic to see the deal that is being made here. Hawes explains it this way: "The Congress is saying to states and nursing homes, we'll give you less money and we won't look too closely. We'll cut costs, you cut quality."

There may be ways to cut nursing home costs without providing such an incentive for neglect. But in the coming wrangles over how states will spend fewer federal dollars, the people who live in nursing homes won't make a formidable statehouse lobby.

This is the way it is now. Another attempt will be made in the Senate to save the regulations. But without public protest or presidential veto we are about to remake an old nursing home horror story. This isn't a scare tactic. It's just plain scary.

Congress, please, stop the inanity!

Wanting to do my part to help balance the budget, I have come up with an idea to reduce spending.

Article I of the Constitution requires that a member of Congress be at least 25 years old and a citizen of the United States for seven years. What we should do is amend the document to require that they also have balanced personalities.

Do you realize how much we would save if oddballs, blockheads and buffoons were eliminated from the public payroll and forbidden to run for office? The marble halls would be half empty, and we'd save millions in salaries and benefits.

Heck, we'd save that much with Jesse Helms alone.

Think about it: Should a Foreign Relations Committee chairman who introduces the prime minister of Pakistan as the prime minister of India be rewarded with a big pension?

No way. Bye-bye, Jesse. Should a senator who serenades us from the floor with "Old McDonald Had a Farm" be taking money from the taxpayers?

Absolutely not. Goodbye, AID'Amato. Should a House majority leader who calls the president's wife a Marxist and refers to a fellow legislator as a "fag" be blessed with high-paid inside work, courtesy of you and me?

No way. Sayonara, Dick Army. You get the idea, I'm sure; but you would be surprised, I am equally sure, at how deep the layer of inanity really is.

Rep. Randy "Duke" Cunningham, R-Calif., is a former fighter pilot and an instructor at the Navy's "Top Gun" school. But his primary opponent in the 1990 elections noticed something bizarre about him. "Get this guy out of the pilot seat," the opponent said, "he can't find his way down the hall." Last May, Cunningham took the floor to condemn "homos in the military," then said he did not realize it was a derogatory term. Recently, he described the pregnancy rate in Chicago public housing projects as being more than 100 percent. How so? He was asked. Well, he said, some women got pregnant more than once.

Rep. Dick Chrysler, R-Mich., (no relation to the auto company) wants to legislate the Commerce Department out of existence, including the National Weather Service. Cable TV's Weather Channel could do the job, he said. Commerce Secretary Ron Brown was constrained to point out to him that the Weather Channel gets its information from the Weather Service.

Rep. Barbara-Rose Collins, D-Mich., has an annual staff turnover rate of 100 percent. According to The Weekly Standard magazine, she has demanded that staffers do her laundry, pick up her dog, wash her car, clean her apartment, pack her luggage, take off her shoes, put on her slippers. She has the third worst attendance record on the Hill, behind a lawmaker who had a liver transplant and another who was being tried for statutory rape.

Rep. Helen Chenoweth, R-Idaho, is openly supportive of the militia movement, "black helicopter" paranoids, anti-U.N. fanatics, and the John Birch Society - which, you may recall, once branded Dwight Eisenhower a communist. She is joined in the House by another militia defender, Rep. Steve Stockman, R-Texas, who received a fax from a militia activist last April warning that a federal building in Oklahoma would be bombed and sent a courtesy copy to the National Rifle Association.

Correction

The photo caption on page 8A of Thursday's Sanford Herald reported incorrect information. Shown was a large crowd at the Seminole County Retired Senior Volunteer Program open house at Seminole Community College. The building at which the function was held was incorrectly identified as having been occupied by RSVP on a temporary basis. RSVP's Gloria Black clarified that the building was sold to RSVP by the college a year ago for $10. Black said the Seminole RSVP is the only one to own its own building.

The Herald regrets this error.

Budget

many families and businesses.

The legislation embodies the chief pledges the GOP made in its dramatic election victory last year, when it lambasted Democrats for letting government grow too large and intrusive.

"For 60 years, the ship of state has sailed consistently in the wrong direction, to the left," said House Majority Leader Richard Armey, R-Texas, just before his chamber approved the package Thursday by 227-203. "With this vote today, we'll crank this ship around. We'll turn this ship around to the right."

Voting yes were 223 Republicans and four Democrats; 192 Democrats and 10 Republicans were opposed.

President Clinton, who says the legislation's cuts are too harsh, will veto it when House-Senate bargainers send him a finished version, perhaps next month. That will set the table for bargaining between the two sides that will decide whether the year ends with a compromise deficit-reduction measure or partisan finger-pointing.

For now, partisan finger-pointing is in vogue. Senate Democrats launched a series of amendments to what they considered the bill's soft spots, seeking to shrink GOP cuts in Medicare, Medicaid, education and the earned income tax credit for low-wage workers. They were turned back in every instance, but not before Democrats sought political points.

"Republicans have overreached," declared Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass. "They've been caught red-handed. Their cuts in Medicare are too harsh and extreme."

Some GOP amendments were successful. One by Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., approved 99-0, restored $5.9 billion in reductions in student loans. That was part of a deal Dole reached with Republican moderates that also eased cuts in Medicaid and Medicare. The leader also agreed to restore most nursing home standards for Medicaid patients, which the original version would have killed.

Another amendment by Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., would require states to provide Medicaid coverage for disabled people as defined by the federal government. The provision, approved 80-39, was opposed by Dole and GOP governors, who wanted to let states decide who qualifies as disabled.

The Senate voted on 20 amendments Thursday in a session that stretched past midnight, and planned votes on dozens of others today.

"This is not a good day to be absent, nor will tomorrow be a good day to be absent," Dole joked.

There was little joking as Democrats said separate comments made Tuesday by Dole and House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., showed that each wanted to eliminate Medicare, not simply overhaul the health-insurance program for the elderly. Polls have shown that GOP plans to carve $270 billion in savings out of Medicare through 2002 are among the least popular parts of the Republican budget.

"Let's be very clear the smoking gun is now here," said Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D. "The Republicans want to kill Medicare."

White House spokesman Mike McCurry went further, telling reporters, "Eventually they would like to see the program die and go away. That is also what they would want to see happen to seniors, too, if you think about it."

Republicans said their goal was to improve Medicare and maintain its solvency. McCurry's remark infuriated Dole and Gingrich, who jointly called for the press secretary's firing. Gingrich called the remarks "reprehensible" and "beyond the pale of American politics."

With the results obvious before the vote, the one-day debate in the House was almost anti-climactic.

Republicans congratulated themselves for championing a politically risky package that would shield future generations from huge federal deficits.

"Our knees never buckled," said House Budget Committee Chairman John Kasich, R-Ohio.

But Democrats accused their political rivals of trying to impose a plan that hurts the most helpless Americans while bestowing tax bonanzas on the wealthy.

"It's morally wrong, it's economically wrong, it's the wrong thing for our country," said House Minority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo.

Before approving the GOP plan, the House voted 356-72 to reject an alternative by conservative Democrats aimed at balancing the budget without tax cuts and with smaller reductions in Medicare, Medicaid and other programs.

commissioner had the opportunity to study his findings and possible provide some input.

"I haven't made up my mind one way or the other," Adams said after examining some of the report. "At this point, I'm keeping all of my options open."

Adams said he met with Reeves and architect Bruce Andersen, who had been involved in creating the latest papers on the subject.

"I didn't see the actual figures on the cost of a move versus downtown expansion," he said, "but I understand the city (Sanford) is considering the possibility of making some proposals to us to keep the court facilities in the downtown area."

Adams said he doesn't know at this time whether the city will offer some financial incentives or land. Both would be needed for any massive courthouse expansion if the facility remained downtown. If it were moved to Five Points, the land is already available, although the need for financing construction of a building would still be required.

"What I want to see," Adams said, "is that the city brings this to the table for discussion so we can take a look at more options."

Commission Chairman Randy Morris is slated to discuss the study with Reeves and Andersen on Tuesday, with Commissioners Daryl McLain scheduled for next Wednesday, and Dick VanDerWeide on Thursday.

Reeves could not immediately estimate when the study will be finalized.

"At Fort Bragg, we've got 43,000 soldiers assigned here and you've literally got tens of thousands of people in gray uniforms out doing PT (physical training) at that time within five miles of each other," Schad said. Reports on the number of injured ranged from 15 and 17. Soldiers were taken to Womack Army Hospital and civilian hospitals were put on alert to help with the casualties.

One soldier was dead on arrival at the Army hospital and one wounded trooper was taken to Duke University Medical Center in Durham.

Week, fell in the midst of intercession break this year and the school district made the decision to let schools celebrate the event throughout the month of October.

Some schools participated in poster contests and essay competitions. Others have decorated their campuses with red ribbons and they have encouraged students, teachers and administrators to wear the ribbons showing their support for the drug free life.

The district as a whole has done little in terms of a county-wide celebration this year, but they are continuing their efforts to teach drug-free living throughout the year.

"We try to teach the students how to be drug and alcohol free at every opportunity," said Edie Valentine of the school district's curriculum services department.

The drug-free message is a part of the district's curriculum from kindergarten through 12th grade.

The incidence of drug use is lower in schools across the district, officials said.

A drug sniffing canine deputy and other equipment that can detect the presence of drugs is contributing to the decrease on campus, security officials said. Education on the dangers of drugs may be helping students say no to the temptation to try drugs or to use them.

"But as long as we have even one student using drugs, we have too many," security chief Wolfgang Halbig said.

While the red ribbons may go away at the end of the week, the school district hopes to keep the spirit of drug free living alive in the students across the district.

they would. At home they have beaten the likes of Dallas and Detroit, both better teams than the lowly Giants.

"Shine 28 Giants 18

MINNESOTA (-4) vs CINCINNATI

This game is huge for both teams. Can the Vikings get their team together after the way Green Bay violated them? The Bears have more heart, but the Vikings probably have more talent. Minnesota is backed into a corner, and they are at home.

Vikings 16 Bears 13

Every week I issue what I consider to be the best pick against the spread in the schedule. This is the game that after research and contemplation, I feel most confident about releasing as my LOCK OF THE WEEK. At 8-1 this season, I guess I shouldn't feel guilty, but I do. To make amends for last week, I have decided to release a special DOUBLE LOCK OF THE WEEK. That's right. Twice the fun, twice the cash. This offer is not available in stores.

Let's start with Cincinnati (+8) over the Browns. The Bengals have had a couple of extra days rest, and with a new quarterback, the Browns will need a couple of days to heal.

Rounding off the DOUBLE LOCK OF THE WEEK, I love the "Shine (-3) over the Giants.

Youngsters should win this one by a large margin.

Good luck this week and save the sink repairs for February.

NATIONAL BRIEFS

School bus driver recounts horror

FOX RIVER GROVE, Ill. — A school bus driver told investigators she faced a red light and heard no warning on a railroad crossing before a commuter train slammed into her bus and killed seven students.

Investigators are trying to determine why the bus carrying 35 students sat at the traffic light Wednesday with about 3 1/2 feet of its rear in the path of the train that barreled through at up to 60 mph.

The driver, Patricia Catencamp, told investigators the traffic light at the crossing never turned green, she didn't hear any warnings from students, and never saw or heard the train.

"There was a lot of chaos on the bus," National Transportation Safety Board member John Goglia said Thursday night as the on-scene investigation wrapped up. "She did not hear a horn."

Talk show flap

WASHINGTON — They're all talking on daytime TV: oversexed teens, philandering husbands, prostitutes and porn stars. Politicians who want to shush this chatter call it "cultural rot."

Talk show hosts call it real-life entertainment. And, they say, viewers love it.

"People watch to have a good time," said host Jerry Springer. "Human beings love to talk about their personal lives, other people's lives, relationships."

Former Education Secretary William Bennett hopes to persuade people to quit watching, and to persuade corporations to quit producing trashy television. He's adopted the issue alongside his crusade against violent and sexually degrading rap music lyrics.

Hell House draws criticism

ARVADA, Colo. — A church-sponsored haunted house shows scenes that go beyond scary: a gay man with AIDS in a coffin, a woman covered with a blood-soaked towel having an abortion, a depressed teen-ager shooting himself in the head.

"The message is about the decisions people make, and the consequences," said Paul Velliquette, pastor of The Abundant Life Christian Center, a Pentecostal church.

The scenes, criticized as outrageous and insensitive, were shown for the first time Thursday night to hundreds of people who waited an hour in line and paid $5 each.

The "Hell House" is one of several church-sponsored haunted houses around the country this Halloween that have grown from a 1972 project known as "Scaremare," designed by the youth division of the Rev. Jerry Falwell's church in Lynchburg, Va.

Selena fans celebrate second time

HOUSTON — Selena devotees say the woman convicted in her murder got the punishment she deserved — life in prison.

"She'll suffer within those years," said Melissa Santos, a fan among the celebrants outside the courthouse Thursday as Yolanda Saldívar was sentenced.

"It won't bring Selena back, but it's some satisfaction," she said.

After nine hours of deliberation over two days, the panel gave Ms. Saldívar, 35, the maximum punishment. Jurors did not impose the $10,000 fine sought by prosecutors.

Ms. Saldívar won't be eligible for parole until 2025.

On Monday, the same 12 jurors found the former fan club president guilty in the March 31 shooting death of the 23-year-old Grammy-winning singer at a Corpus Christi motel.

Mom calls outer space

By The Associated Press

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Earth to outer space: This is mom.

Columbia commander Kenneth Bowersox heard briefly from his mother Thursday during a space-to-ground interview with Indianapolis TV station WISH. She wasn't calling to check on him, just to say hello.

"Hi Kenny. This is mom," said Jean Bowersox of Bedford, Ind. "You look great ... I'd like to be there, but you know that's the impossible right now. But later on maybe I'll get to take a trip with you."

The call, arranged by the station, was a surprise for Bowersox, whose crew is on one of the longest shuttle missions ever planned. The seven astronauts were launched Oct. 20 and aren't due home until Nov. 5 after 16 days.

"That was great. Thanks a lot," he said. "It's nice to hear my mom's voice up here."

The crew performed more fluid and crystal-growth experiments Thursday.

NASA lost radio contact with the shuttle for a total of more than an hour Thursday because of an equipment failure in New Mexico.

Mission Control saw the two communications blackouts coming and warned the astronauts. Mission operations representative Jeff Banile said electronics equipment at the Tracking and Data Relay Satellite station at New Mexico's White Sands Missile Range probably experienced a power outage.

The communications blackouts happened on back-to-back orbits. The first lasted 36 minutes, the second 27 minutes.

NASA said the problem did not affect the laboratory experiments.

Lions repeat, but Rams will also advance

Cindy Liljenquist (left) had three service points and eight kills, while Shannon Munns contributed eight service points, including five straight to open the winner-take-all third game, as the Oviedo Lions repeated as the Class 6A-District 4 champion at Lyman High School Thursday night.

By BARY COATMAN
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — Oviedo won the Class 6A, District 4 girls volleyball title Thursday with a 15-10, 9-15, 15-10 win over Lake Mary. The Lions will host a subregional match Tuesday against the District 3 runner up, while the Rams play at the District 3 champion.

The Rams took a 3-1 lead to open the match, but Michele Lowe had three service points to give the Lions a 4-3 lead. Leah Harkewicz then extended Oviedo's lead to 5-3, but the Rams would deadlock the action 5-5 and 6-6 as Sarah McWeeny and Jeannie Manz collaborated on three service points.

"Beating Lake Mary was a struggle," said Oviedo coach Anita Carlson. "It wasn't our best performance, and we had trouble serving in the second game. I would much rather go into the next round as a winner. This team needs the home court advantage psychologically. We just need good execution in the next round."

Lowe and Becky Goldberg then racked up three service points each, while Cindy Liljenquist added one more, to put Oviedo ahead 13-6. Two service points by Manz and one each by Monica Camardese and Debbie Duber pulled Lake Mary within 13-10. Lowe then closed out the game with two service points.

Lowe had two service points, while Goldberg, January Rook and Michelle Cutter each had one to stake Oviedo to a 5-0 lead in game two. Duber then collected five service points, followed by one each from Manz and Stephanie Dale, but Lake Mary ahead 7-5. Lowe then pulled the Lions to within 7-6, but Duber and Dale then extended the Rams lead to 13-7.

"This was a double edged sword," said Lake Mary coach Cindy Henry. "We knew that if we lost we would still play in the next round, but we LONGWOOD — Host Lake Mary defeated Boone 15-2, 15-8, and later downed University 15-8, 13-15, 15-4 in Thursday's action at Volleyfest '95. The tournament will continue Saturday at Lake Mary High School.

Lake Howell defeated Colonial 15-7, 15-9 in its first match of the night, but fell to Dr. Phillips 15-12, 8-15, 15-13 in its second match. Seminole fell to University 15-2, 15-13 in its first match of the night, and was eliminated by a 15-11, 15-7 loss to Boone.

Lake Howell will play Boone at noon to open Saturday's action, while Lake Mary takes on Dr.

Phillips at 2 p.m. The Rams and Panthers, both 21-1 teams whose only losses are to each other, play the tiebreaker for the right to go to the winner's bracket finals.

"Volleyfest '95 has built into the tournament we expected it to be," said Lake Mary coach Bill Whalen. "The four first round winners are traditionally strong, Lake Mary and Lake Howell are ranked No. 1 and No. 2 in the Seminole Athletic Conference, and Dr. Phillips and University are one-two in the Metro. There was really exciting play in the second round, and the fans should get their money's worth Saturday."

Thursday softball race still up in air

SANFORD — An upset can sure mess things up.

Two weeks ago, M.A. Erectors had built a two-game lead in the Sanford Recreation Department Men's Thursday Night Fall Slowpitch Softball League and looked well on its way to a repeat of its Spring League championship.

But Nobles Construction, which also won a Thursday title in the spring, pulled off a clutch 10-7 upset at Chase Park to hand M.A.

Protect children during Halloween

While adults may also enjoy the celebrations, creative costumes and decorations of Halloween, the autumn holiday is especially intriguing to children. Most kids are fond of "trick-or-treating," but this Halloween tradition can be hazardous if they - and their parents - do not take precautions.

According to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC), more than three-fourths of all injuries associated with Halloween celebrations occur to children age 14 and under. But parents can take steps to ensure their children's safety without denying them the enjoyment of celebrating this holiday. The Florida Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services and CPSC offer the following Halloween safety tips:

CONSUMER FOCUS

BARBARA HUGHES/GREGG

• Examine all treats carefully for signs of tampering before allowing children to eat them.

• When purchasing costumes -- including masks, beards and wigs -- look for labels indicating the materials are "fire resistant" or "flame retardant." Materials so labeled are not fireproof, but will resist burning and extinguish quickly.

• Purchase or make costumes that are bright enough to be seen clearly by motorists. Decorate or trim costumes and treat bags with reflective tape. Children should carry flashlights when trick-or-treating.

• Costumes should not be so long as to cause tripping and falling. Children's shoes should be sturdy and well-fitting. Moms high heels are not a good idea for safe walking.

• Apply a natural mask using cosmetics rather than have a child wear a plastic mask that might block vision or interfere with breathing. Supervise children's use of Halloween makeup kits and make sure all directions for application and removal are followed. Take special care to see that makeup does not get into the eyes.

• Costume swords, knives and similar accessories should be soft and flexible.

• Young children should always be accompanied by an adult or an older, responsible child when trick-or-treating. Children should walk -- not run -- from house to house and should never enter homes or apartments.

• When driving on Halloween, be especially careful and watch out for trick-or-treaters.

A safer alternative to trick-or-treating is to attend a supervised Halloween event instead. Organized events sponsored by civic organizations, school groups, merchants associations and recreation centers can provide a controlled and secure environment for children.

With a few precautions, Halloween can be a special treat.

Mom advised to give bad boy 'thinking time'

Dear Mary:

My son is 5 years old and just started kindergarten. I love him but he has been hard to deal with since the day he was born. He was a cranky, colicky baby. When I tried to pick him up and calm him, it seemed to make him cry harder.

When he was two years old, I put him in a day care so I could go back to work. He got put out of three centers because he was so mean to the other kids and I finally had to quit work because I could not find anyone to take care of him.

I was hoping that once he started school he'd shape up, but his teacher has called me several times so far this year because he's gotten into trouble for being so mean to the other kids. I spank him when she tells me what he does wrong and he always says he won't do it again, but so far that hasn't been true. I don't know what else to do and I'm beginning to wonder if there might be something really wrong with this boy.

FAMILY COUNSELOR

Dear Boy's Mom:

I don't know whether there might be some serious problem with your son, or if he is just living down to his reputation. Before you reach any conclusions, please think about trying some new approaches. Research indicates that parents of kids who chronically misbehave often respond in a positive way to their child's negative behavior and ignore normal behavior.

Since we know that every kid needs attention, whether it is positive or negative, try not reinforcing his bad behavior. If possible, ask the teacher to contact you whenever your child misbehaves at school and you will come to school and remove him from the class for the rest of that day.

When you pick him up, explain in nonthreatening language what he did wrong and why he can't stay with the other kids, then take him home. Give him "thinking time" until the end of the school day. Don't talk to him and don't interact with him until his thinking time is over. Then, when he has completed his "time", interact with him in positive ways, find specific behavior to praise and let him hear you telling other people things you like or are proud of concerning him.

After you have tried these techniques for a period of time, if he remains uncontrollably aggressive and/or rebellious, it would be wise to have him evaluated medically and/or psychologically.

Non-working smoke detectors keep home fires burning

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have been a member of the fire service for the past 20 years. To this day, I am awestruck by the high number of needless home fire deaths and injuries that occur throughout America. Nationwide, 3,000 people die and 50,000 to 100,000 are injured each year in fire-related tragedies.

The most troubling -- and most common -- evidence found in the rubble of home fires is smoke detectors with an old battery or no battery at all. By sounding an early warning and providing critical extra seconds to escape, a working smoke detector doubles the chance of surviving a home fire.

An alarming fact is that a disproportionate number of minorities die in home fires. African Americans, for example, are three times as likely to die in a home fire as any other minority group.

As the 1995-96 president of the International Association of Fire Chiefs, and as an African American who is deeply concerned about the above statistics, I urge everyone to adopt a simple but potentially life-saving habit: Change the batteries in your smoke detectors when you change your clock back to standard time in October.

The "Change Your Clock, Change Your Battery" program each year is the most effective way I know to remind Americans to make their homes a little bit safer.

Abby, please help us by reminding your readers to change their smoke detector batteries during the fall time-change weekend, Oct. 28-29. Thank you for helping us save lives.

CHIEF P. LAMONT EWELL, OAKLAND FIRE DEPARTMENT

DEAR CHIEF EWELL: I'm glad to help. The importance of fire safety cannot be overstated. Changing the batteries in home smoke detectors provides an excellent opportunity for families to create -- and practice -- an escape route they can use in case of a fire emergency. Thank you for a timely letter.

DEAR ABBY: My sister and I disagree about a point of etiquette and need you to settle it. She says that a person should never pick his or her teeth while at the table.

I say that if one uses a napkin to cover the mouth and quickly picks at the tooth with the "baby finger," it is acceptable.

My sister strongly disagrees. She says it is vulgar and very bad manners. What do the etiquette experts say?

J.C. COSTA, WESTWOOD, MASS.

DEAR J.C.: Etiquette expert Letitia Baldrige says, "Never use a toothpick at the table, even if you feel you have a gravel pit in your mouth.

"Try drinking some water to help the situation, and if you feel your teeth are really decorated with food, excuse yourself and go the restroom or to the bathroom in your host's home.

Pastor honored at River Oaks

By SUSAN WENNER
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — Although October 8 was officially recognized throughout the religious community as Clergy Appreciation Day, John and Linda Montgomery of River Oaks Presbyterian Church were recently honored. Many churches set aside October in observance of Minister's Appreciation Month.

According to Deb Meyer, chairman of women's ministries, members desired to allot a day to express to their pastor and his wife how special the couple has been and note their good works. A breakfast kicked off the day with 70 people sharing a meal with Pastor Montgomery. Over 130 were present for the special service following the worship hour.

"The church just celebrated its fourth anniversary," said Meyer. "We wanted to show our appreciation for them."

Following the morning service Ed Thomas, executive ranch director for the YMCA and co-worker with Montgomery on various community projects, was guest speaker for the festivities. Three church members made special tributes.

Fran O'Quin presented the couple with a plaque with the inscription "In deepest appreciation to John and Linda Montgomery for unselfish commitment to the body of Jesus Christ at River Oaks

Wallace West collected money for a love offering and Deb Meyer presented a scrapbook of memorabilia and photographs for the Montgomerys.

After the overwhelming response various members noted Pastor Montgomery as saying that he appreciated the members showing their appreciation. He further mentioned that we are told in the Bible to love one another and all the glory should go to God.

Montgomery and his wife were unavailable for comment. They left on a well-deserved vacation several days after the event.

Glowing Embers enjoy presentation, trips

By GRACE STINECIPHER
Herald Columnist

SANFORD — At the October meeting of Glowing Embers, First Baptist Church's senior adult organization, a presentation was given by Cecil Tucker who recently returned from a special mission project in Vietnam.

Traveling with him were his son, John, and his teenage grandson, Brent. Heading the expedition were Walter and Pauline Routh, former missionaries in Vietnam doing mission work in the Philippines.

The Rouths were forced to leave Vietnam when it fell in 1973 to the communists, but the government has recently allowed them to return several times on short term social work visas. This enables them to also visit and encourage their long time friends there.

What the Rouths needed was a business project to allow them long term visas and the Tuckers provided this for them.

During the trip, Cecil Tucker, former Seminole County Agriculture Agent, and John, who has a master's degree in agronomy, were well qualified to instruct the Vietnamese farmers both in better crop production and also in livestock artificial insemination. This latter program will help improve the cattle throughout the country. The Tuckers passed this expertise on to the Rouths who will be able to carry on this important project in future visits.

Walter and Pauline Routh are former Southern Baptist missionaries who formed their own mission organization several years ago in order to work more directly with the people. This organization is the Walter A. Routh, Jr. Missionary Association, Inc. Some members of their board of directors are Ken McIneath, Donald Knight and Lois Butcher.

Walter Routh is a native of Sanford, graduating from Seminole High School in 1962 and later from Stetson University and Southern Baptist Theological Seminary. He and his wife are members of First Baptist Church of Sanford which supports them financially as do many other churches and individuals throughout the United States.

During the business meeting, the Glowing Embers planned a trip to a special senior fellowship and Bible study at Word of Life Fellowship in Hudson, Florida.

The Glowing Embers meet monthly for a covered dish dinner, program and a short business meeting. They also sponsor various trips and other enjoyable events. Individuals age 55 or over may participate. For more information contact the church at 322-4381. The Rev. Tom Smith is the current president of the group.

What's in a name?

SANFORD — It ever amazes me how every so often people name-drop. After a while some of those individuals whose names have been "dropped" become termed as household names.

As I looked over my personal library with book titles such as, "Don't Let the Jerks Get the Best of You, Winning Over Worry, Angela, and Let Prayer Change Your Life." I then note my collection of books by Max Lucado. With the exception of the children's books written by him, which I'd love to buy, I find myself talking about his writing as if he were one of those "household names."

Glancing at the news last night a bulletin gave attention to Judge Ito. Negative news circulates daily about O.J. Simpson.

Have you ever considered the reputation you have in the community? Is it positive like that of the Christian author Max Lucado or negative like that of O.J. Simpson?

The Bible tells us in Ecclesiastes 7:1, "A good name is better than precious ointment; and the day of death than the day of one's birth." This scripture also came to mind as I celebrated my birthday several weeks ago. I reflected about the name I have made for myself.

As I strive daily to be an example of the love and life of Christ problems arise. I find at the end of the day I continually ask God to forgive me. It seems I never seem to measure up to my expectations or at times others.

Grace is such a wonderful word. The blood of Christ can cover my name with purity even though my actions may cloud and disappoint.

What's in a name? May we all reflect the fruits of the Spirit as we go about our day so when a at dusk others can identify those words with our name.

Before I close with everyone feeling this article left readers with a negative note I'd like to share a poem titled "Nobody's Perfect."

If there are moments when your nerves get tangled.

And at times when you don't have the coolest head.

If you've been known to have your tongue get tangled.

So what you meant to say's not what you said.

If there are times you have the best intentions.

But somehow wind up looking like a klutz.

If molehills sometimes reach absurd dimensions.

And little irritations drive you nuts...

If you're always perfectly successful.

And there are opportunities you flub.

If now and then life seems a bit too stressful—

You're only human—
Welcome to the club!

Is diet the best solution to gout?

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband has had gout since he was 22. Aside from the fact that he was not diagnosed for years, he has not been helped by prescription drugs, such as allopurinol.

At one point, he was bedridden because so many joints had flared up.

About five years ago, he started a strict diet: marked restriction of fat; no meat; heavy fruit intake. He lost 30 pounds and, after a year, his gout improved. He is now relatively normal on just the diet, no drugs.

You have said that diet isn't as effective as prescription medicine in controlling gout. We think you are wrong. Diet is the answer to gout; drugs provide only a partial solution.

DEAR READER: Gouty arthritis, caused by an over-accumulation of uric acid in the body, can usually be prevented by allopurinol, a prescription drug that blocks the formation of this acid.

In patients who don't respond (by symptoms and blood tests) to full therapeutic doses of allopurinol, thought must be given to other diseases that mimic gout, such as "pseudo-gout" and "pseudo-pseudo-gout." I'm not kidding: These are also genetically determined metabolic abnormalities, for which different therapy (chiefly, diet) is appropriate.

I'm delighted that your husband's arthritis responded to diet. Could he have "non-gout" gout? Ask his doctor about this. In the meantime, I'll continue recommending standard drug therapy for gout, a common disorder.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Can you give any scientific validation to your statement that "fruit elevates triglycerides"?

DEAR READER: I cannot give you specific references but, I believe, the relation between a high-fruit diet and modest, harmless elevations of the triglyceride fat in the blood is generally accepted by the medical community. Let me again emphasize that this relation is in no way harmful and is of no known clinical significance, unlike major elevations in the triglycerides (above 500 milligrams per deciliter; normal: below 150) that are associated with heart attacks and inflammation of the pancreas.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

It is well-known that taking a ruff in the short trump hand generates an extra trick. However, sometimes declarer must find the right moment to take the ruff -- as in today's deal.

How should South plan the play in four hearts against a trump lead? North might have responded one spade, but he preferred to limit his hand immediately. However, when South continued with three clubs, North was happy to show his suit. South, with no slam interest, signed off in the heart game.

West might have led the club king. But with length and strength over length, it is often better to lead a trump.

Declarer won the first trick with dummy's king and ducked a club to West's nine. Back came the heart jack. Feeling confident, South won with his ace, cashed the club ace, ruffed a club in the dummy, played a spade to his ace and led the spade three toward the dummy. It was a blow when West ruffed, cashed the club king and switched to a diamond. Suddenly South had four losers: one heart, one diamond and two clubs.

True, South was unlucky that the spades broke 5-1. But suppose, instead of taking his club ruff, South immediately plays the ace and another spade. If West ruffs now, South makes his contract with an overtrick because there is still a dummy entry remaining: the club ruff. But when West discards, South plays dummy's last top spade, discarding his diamond loser. The club ruff, declarer's 10th trick, comes a moment later.
