

ALEXANDER KORDA'S FIRST MUSICAL PRODUCTION

THE GARTY GIRLS

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE: When Rene Martin's chauffeur speaks Jeanette Dupont, on her way to a rehearsal at the Theatre Comique, he gives her a lift to make amends. The car suffers a minor collision, but Jeanette takes a cab to her destination to escape delay. She is berated for being late and walks off the stage in a huff. Later, Jeanette, promoter of the show, is denounced by creditors in front of her backer who walks out. The chauffeur comes to the theatre in search of Jeanette, and chorus girls learn who the owner of his car is. Everybody is sure that Rene Martin and Dupont are conducting a love affair. Especially Jeanette who shouts: "Find her! Bring her back! Martin's a billionaire. We're saved!"

Chapter Two

There was a trying half-hour in Jeanette's office as he charged from one room to another in search of Jeanette Dupont's address. Nobody had thought of her as anything but a chorus girl, nobody expected her to return and nobody knew where she was. Then suddenly Jeanette Dupont stood in the door, as if in answer to Tibaud's prayer.

"I think you've got something. I'm going to make you the star!"

"Clear out, you two," he ordered Clarence and his secretary. "I've come back to apologize." Jeanette began. "I'm afraid I lost my temper."

"And why shouldn't you? I like a girl with spirit."

"Well, will you forgive me and take me back?" Jeanette asked eagerly. "I know it's a lot to ask after I was so rude, but I'll be willing to do anything. I can sing. And I can really dance. Look!" She threw her coat over a chair and started a difficult routine.

Tibaud took advantage of her preoccupation to sneak out of the room and rummage about in the filing cabinet for a contract form. He returned to find her breathlessly ending her steps.

"Come and sign here," he spoke.

"What?"

"Come and sign your contract. I'm going to give you a part."

She approached the table with unbelieving fascination. "A what?"

"I'm going to take a chance. I think you've got something. I'm going to make you the star!"

"Things never seemed sane to Jeanette after that. As she left the rehearsal, she was not surprised to discover an affable young man, pushing his way energetically to her side. He showed her a catalog of expensive automobiles. "Which of these two do you like?"

"Oh, I like them both," she answered and he tipped his hat and hurried off.

Jeanette tried to puzzle out the reason for the sudden, giddy reversal of all the things in her life. The apartment was in luxurious disorder. Madame Bernard was presiding over boxes of the most beautiful things. "Oh, my dear," she began. "I've been such a naughty girl, and I brought a few things for you to look at."

"But I already owe you three hundred francs," Jeanette protested. "Nonsense! What do you think of this? Accept it. And this... and this..."

When Bernard had gone, there was only Miki who surveyed Jeanette with an amused look.

"Everybody's gone mad," Jeanette appealed to her friend. "I've been given a contract, and now Bernard..."

"And you can't understand why?"

"No."

"I suppose the name of Rene Martin means nothing to you?"

Then at the look of surprise in Jeanette's eyes, Miki suddenly cried out: "Jeanette, you don't mean to say you don't know Rene Martin?"

"I certainly don't."

Miki had begun to shriek with laughter. Between gasps she blurted the story out. Jeanette was furious, helpless. She was determined to expose the whole mockery.

Miki took a more rational view. "Listen," she reasoned. "You've been telling me that if you only got the chance you could become a star. Well, here's your chance. If you believe in yourself, you'll go and be a success, no matter how you arrive at it. And if you let this chance go, you may never get another one. They thought that was the last sentence that silenced Jeanette's protests.

Rene Martin's sparkling, well-conducted brokerage offices were a hive of well-conducted business. He had surrounded himself with faithful retainers who might have been a little too prim or austere for ordinary taste, but who knew how to run the business. They thought that Martin, angular and long-jawed, was efficient and incisive, but that a twinkle of humor in his eye made him unlike themselves.

That was why there were almost a hundred clerks of honor as bills marked "For Miss Dupont" were to find their way to his desk. "What are these?" Martin asked Marcel, who wore a gold watch chain and had a face like a faithful mastiff.

"I don't know, sir."

"One dozen stockings, one satin negligee..." Martin read. "Why are you looking at me like that? You don't suppose?"

"Oh, no, Mr. Martin, there must be some mistake. I know you couldn't."

"What do you mean I couldn't?"

"I mean wouldn't," Marcel answered in confusion.

Martin resumed his way through the bills. "There you go, looking at me in that way again. I tell you I never even heard of the girl."

"Well, if I were you, sir, I should put it in the hands of the police."

"And get involved in a scandal. No, no, this matter must be handled with delicacy. After all, this might be a joke. Get me Miss Jeanette Dupont at the Theatre Comique, please. I would like to speak to Miss Jeanette Dupont. She won't be there until tomorrow."

"Let me get in touch with her for you," pleaded Marcel.

"Don't be silly," Martin retorted with a slight show of temper. "I must handle this myself!"

Key West Greets First Crossers Of Overseas Highway

KEY WEST, Mar. 30.—(AP)—With a rumba band at the city gates and American and Cuban flags decking the dusty streets, Key West welcomed last night the first visitors ever to reach here direct by automobiles.

The overseas highway, picturesque $3,600,000 PWA project spanning 80 miles of tiny coral keys and long water gaps between here and Florida mainland, was thrown open to traffic, although still incomplete, bringing Key West within a few hours drive from Miami, 170 miles away. Motorists formerly had to take a 40-mile ferry trip.

Over the highway's glistening white concrete, unbeckoned yet by the oil and grime of traffic, streamed some 200 extra whose occupants thronged every available hotel room.

Perseping of city officials, hurrying from one impromptu speaking place to another—formal opening exercises were deferred until July 4, when the road will be finished—predicted the highway would prove the economic savior of this city, once one of the largest in the State but pererly-stricken now since its sponge and cigar industries have collapsed.

Mayor Willard Albury and others envisioned a lucrative stream of tourists to follow those who came yesterday, attracted by the unique ride over the keys where waters of the Atlantic Ocean and Gulf of Mexico meet.

The highway afforded a continuous panorama of natural beauty—vistas of pastel-hued waters extending to the horizon in patches of mauve and aquamarine, with an occasional gull or pelican darting after a fish.

Deposed TVA Head Was Chosen Over 150 Applicants

WASHINGTON, Mar. 30.—(AP)—The best qualified man we could find in the country.

That was the White House description of Dr. Arthur E. Morgan when, in 1933, President Roosevelt appointed him chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority, first big pillar in the New Deal's planned economy structure.

Morgan became accustomed to struggle and disappointment early in life. He fought the handicap of ill health. His schooling was curtailed because his slight eyes popt. But the charge that he was a "fellow traveler" in the most bitter politics he ever tasted.

Morgan's apparent lack of a political ally with Dr. Morgan. He has emphasized the "uplift" program for the folk of Tennessee's valleys and hills to make them ready "for the changed world brought about by the reclamation of their lands."

An excerpt from his diary, written when he was 18, reads:

"On looking backward (this the last day of the year) I think I see moral but not mental or physical improvement."

At 20 he wrote: "I am rather too discontented for my own good, I think. Many impulses and emotions conflict, and it is hard to tell what is the right course. I have tried very hard to make exact right, and not right as it is popularly interpreted, my guide."

Supporters of board members David E. Lillenthal and Harcourt C. Morgan contend Dr. Morgan's uncompromising zeal for carrying out a program as he envisioned it made him intolerant.

Backers of "A. E." assert he has made a characteristic conscientious struggle for democratic principles.

When President Roosevelt chose Dr. Morgan from 150 possibilities to head TVA, the educator had long since attained distinction as a flood control engineer and as a unique contributor to the knowledge of education.

In 1933 he was serving his 13th year as president of Antioch College, Yellow Springs, Ohio. He had increased the college enrollment in a few years from 60 to almost 300 students by alternating classroom study with work in stores, factories, offices and laboratories of co-operating business firms throughout the country.

President Morgan edited the semi-monthly "Antioch Notes." Some years ago Franklin D. Roosevelt's name was put on the subscription list.

Mr. Roosevelt liked Dr. Morgan's "frank, pointed and sensible remarks about life and human beings." He proceeded to learn more about the idealist, and the TVA appointment was a consequence.

Dr. Morgan was born in Cincinnati, grew up in the Mississippi river backwoods and at 19 was graduated from high school in St. Cloud, Minn. Delicate in health, he worked outdoors and slept in a tent in the North Woods when the mercury registered as low as 30 below zero.

Eye trouble prevented continuation of his studies after high school and he worked his way to Colorado, via lumber camps, farms and print shops. Returning to St. Cloud three years later he began a surveying career which brought him recognition as an engineer.

University of Colorado in 1923. He married Miss Urania Jones in 1904. She died the next year. He was married to Lucy Middleton Griscom of Woodbury, N. J., in 1911. He had a son by his first wife. A son and a daughter were born of the second marriage. The Morgans also have an adopted daughter.

Playing With Dynamite Has Been Sam Russell's Job For 31 Years

WILMINGTON, Del., Mar. 29.—(AP)—Playing with dynamite is a job for Sam Russell. He's been handling explosives for 31 years.

Jittery Work?
"Well," he says, "when there are a lot of men on the job, it's a moderate one. It's not a very hot job. Men even smoke, which is against a heated, serious platter, all right. It's better to have a small trained group."

Russell is tall, lean, tanned to a leathery hue. He takes his work calmly, explaining it's like any other work, except that nitroglycerine gets into your pores and pumps the heart faster. Men who work with dynamite get "n-heads" or dynamite heads. To avoid this, Russell says, negro workers in the South nibble the dynamite sticks.

Try To Blast It Up
He says blasters act on hunches, plus experience. A general rule is a stick of dynamite to a foot of ground. A better method, however, is to figure out the shearing and crushing strength of the rock to be blasted.

"Then we know how much energy or force we have to supply to overcome it," he explains. "It offers so much resistance; you're trying to bust it up. You don't always try to move it—you try to smash it.

"But you can't overdo blasting, particularly when you have to figure on buildings. You must do the job, and no more. That requires judgment and close figuring."

That Dynamite Man
Russell's work has taken him all over the country and to South America and Canada. He figures he has handled "10 or 15 million pounds of dynamite." He is a graduate engineer who started out on field work. He has been called in on such big blasting jobs as the Hudson River tubes, New York City subways, and dredging jobs in New York harbor, Alexandria Bay, Buffalo harbor, the New York Barge Canal and Honolulu harbor.

His wife, he says, didn't like it at first when he went out on a blasting job, but "she's gotten used to it."

Russell is 54. Field workers call him "that dynamite man."

Citrus Board Urges Joint Advertising

MISSION, Tex., Mar. 29.—(AP)—Officials of the Florida citrus commission, here on a goodwill tour, advocated to Texas growers yesterday the joint advertising of grapefruit by Texas and Florida to move heavy crops in prospect during the next few years.

John C. Massey, of Providence, Fla., chairman of the commission, and his party, met with the Texas citrus growers' association last Tuesday night.

The growers voted to ask Texas commission of agriculture J. R. McDonald to appoint a Texas committee to coordinate use of packages holding in excess of one and three-fifths bushels.

This, they said, would be the first step in a cooperative program with Florida where the citrus commission has banned the use of containers larger than the standard box, which holds one and three-fifths bushels.

Deaths from automobile accidents in 130 major cities of the United States during the first 10 weeks of this year showed a 21 per cent decrease compared with the corresponding period of 1937.

Elk Thriving In Their "Last Stand"

By "DING" DARLING Why it is we haven't stuck to the good Indian name for some of our splendid native species, I don't know.

Europe, what we know as a moose is called an elk. But everybody says "elk," so elk it is.

The magnificent American elk once ranged pretty well all over this part of the continent now occupied by the United States.

The slaughter of elk in 30-mile-square quantities was easy when the snow was deep because they stick in compact herds, a habit that exposed the buffalo to virtual extermination.

Canned Strawberries 2 quarts strawberries 2 cups sugar

Wash carefully, drain and cap round, fresh berries. Never allow berries to stand in the water when preparing them.

None but freshly picked berries should be preserved. They should be gathered in shallow trays or baskets, not in deep vessels which allow them to be bruised and crushed.

Strawberry Juice Use the small, so-called cull fruit, though fresh, sound and ripe. Wash, crush and heat slowly to simmering point.

Juice was sealed. If bottles are used, wash carefully and sterilize. Fill with hot juice, cap and process. It is best to lay the bottles on sides when processing.

Fruit juices are excellent for use in gelatin desserts, sauces, ice creams, sherbets, etc. If canned later for jelly making:

been appropriated for domestic herds which monopolize the old natural winter feeding grounds of the elk. Here and there, notably in the Jackson Hole country, the nucleus of the Yellowstone elk herd is cared for through the winter months by artificial feeding and pasturing on the elk ranges maintained by the U. S. Biological Survey and the State of Wyoming in cooperation.

These provisions plus those of the National Park Service will insure the elk against extinction but they are entirely inadequate to increase the existing population. The elk has a place in the Wild West Week poster stamp series because it is one of the outstanding victims of civilization. A hundred million is what the naturalists figure the elk population to have been in this country when the white man began to take charge.

In view of the fact that the State of Wyoming estimates the economic return from every elk taken in season by the sportsmen as approximately $100 and that a head of beef, the elk's chief rival for existence, is lucky to bring half that amount, it might be good business in raise more elk, and less beef in some quarters.
