Burglars Warned Use Of Booty Could Be Fatal

A Stromberg-Carlson spokesman today warned burglars who stole six metal grates from the firm's Sanford storage area off 25th Street that use of the grates could be fatal.

Ron Jackson, Stromberg public relations manager, said the grates, measuring 4-feet by 6-feet each, are plated with the chemical cadmium, a metal which is dangerous when heated. "The grates definitely should not be used as grills for cooking since the toxic qualities could be imparted to food and cause serious illness or even death," Jackson said.

The steel gratings, originally manufactured by Stromberg for the U.S. government, were to be part of an antenna system for radar and have been stored at the Sanford facility for years, Jackson said. The gratings look like raw steel, he said, and have no identifiable markings. "They look like they would be ideal for conversion into smaller pieces for use on a grill, but they are coated with the chemical which when heated has a reaction," he said.

Jackson said the storage yard at 2300 W. 25th St. was broken into sometime between 5 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. June 26. An inventory showed that the gratings were missing. He refused to divulge the other items which may have been taken at the same time.

"We are not permitted to get into other items. We are dealing here with government property," Jackson said. "We are trying to caution those who took the grating of the hazards," he said.

Jackson asked those with information concerning the gratings to call the Sanford Sheriff's Department.

Sgt. Bill Bernosky of the Sanford Police Department said today that the breaking and entering was discovered by a security guard at the storage facility. — DONNA ESTES

Not A 'Believable Trend'

Unemployment Down

WASHINGTON (UPI) — June's unemployment rate dropped slightly to 7.3 percent, but the decline is not a "believable trend" because of large technical swings in the figures, the Labor Department reported today.

The 7.3 percent rate, after seasonal adjustment, was a return to the jobless rates of February to April. May's rate had increased to 7.6 percent.

The monthly measurement of jobless rates showed the biggest shrinkage in the civilian labor force on record, 1.2 million in June. That was apparently due to an earlier than usual end of the college school year, which confused the seasonal adjustment process, said Bureau of Labor statistics analyst Jack Bregger. The result was an unemployment rate that seemed to go down.

"It's not a believable trend," Bregger said.

In addition to June's record drop in the civilian labor force, the Labor Department household survey showed a similar 840,000 drop in employment, more than during the sharp recessions of last year and the mid 1970s.

Bregger said, "840,000 is incredibly large ... essentially a correction for increases in earlier months."

Wednesday, Treasury Secretary Donald Regan said he expects joblessness the rest of this year to climb "tenths of a percentage point, not a full percentage point."

Unemployment traditionally rises in June as many young people leave school to enter the labor market, a factor compensated for in the government's seasonal adjustment formula for the month.

But this year, many colleges ended the school year in early May, and students had already secured jobs by June. As a result, the government's seasonal adjustments over-corrected and drove the total June unemployment rate down.

The figures showed the sharpest drop in unemployment occurring among 20- to 24-year-old men. The unemployment rate for white workers declined over the month, and the rate for black and other workers edged up slightly.

People aged 18 to 24, who make up only one-fifth of the labor force, accounted for four-fifths of the seasonally adjusted drop in total employment, more evidence of the skewing of calculations for June.

Without seasonal adjustment, the figures would reflect a more broad-based decline in employment.

Bregger said his department had no choice but to stick with the figures, despite the obvious discrepancies. "We were certainly not going to fudge the data just to make it look right," he said.

"Seasonal adjustment later this year will revise these figures so they won't look so bad," he said.

The unemployment rate for blacks reached 15.3 percent, up from May's 14.8 percent, after seasonal adjustment. Workers of Hispanic origin had an unemployment rate of 10.2 percent.

The unemployment rate for black and other minority teenagers shot up to 38.8 percent from May's 33.8 percent, but was influenced by the seasonal adjustment aberration for all young people for the month.

People unemployed 15 weeks or more increased in numbers during June, while the number unemployed less than 15 weeks declined.

The Labor Department said the number of discouraged workers — those who want to work but say they have given up looking for a job — declined by about 100,000 from April through June but still well above levels before last year's recession.

Average hourly earnings increased 0.7 percent from May to June, the Labor Department said.

Marriage-Minded Should Consider Philly

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Single men and women interested in "lasting relationships" should move to the City of Brotherly Love, rather than New York or Washington, a study by a dating service says.

Nearly 100 percent of Philadelphia's single men and 75 percent of single women want to get married, and Philadelphia residents tend to be more flexible, realistic and patient in their relationships, according to a survey released Wednesday by the New York-based dating service

Godmothers.

Godmothers director Abby Hirsch said the survey of 300 men and women living in Philadelphia also showed 75 percent of the men did not consider beauty the most important trait in a woman. Less than 20 percent, the study said, thought a woman's career status was vital to the relationship. Hirsch said the "nesting instinct" was stronger in Philadelphia than in New York or Washington, noting, "If you want a lasting relationship, move to Philadelphia."

Track Owners Must Post Bond...Or Else

By BRITT SMITH and TOM GIORDANO

Unless an appeals court issues a favorable ruling by Monday, the principal corporate heads of the newly-created Seminole Park dog track in Casselberry will have to post a $471,000 bond or close down.

The lawyer for the park's owners said today if push comes to shove, the bond will be posted.

"We're keeping that track open one way or the other," said David Strawn, Seminole Park's attorney.

The track has been embroiled in a legal tangle since last summer when its owners announced plans to convert from a harness racing track to a dog racing facility. It began its racing season in early May under a 1980 law permitting the conversion.

That law, however, was attacked last summer as unconstitutional by lawyers representing the Sanford-Orlando Kennel

'We're keeping that track open one way or the other.'

— Seminole Park Attorney David Strawn

Club and the Daytona Beach Kennel Club.

In mid-June, Circuit Judge Kenneth Leffler ruled in the challengers' favor and ordered the converted track closed. Leffler said in essence the law permitting the conversion purported to be a general law, but was in fact a special or local law benefiting solely the Casselberry track. That, he concluded, is unconstitutional.

The state, which had joined in the lawsuit siding with Seminole Park, also joined in appealing Judge Leffler's ruling declaring the conversion invalid.

The state said it has a vested interest in the matter since it stands to lose millions of dollars in tax revenues should the track close. It also said it is acting to protect the integrity of duly-passed laws by the legislature and to defend the law's constitutionality.

On June 23, Judge Leffler ruled that since Seminole Park and the state are appealing the matter, a $471,000 bond should be posted to protect the Daytona Beach Kennel Club from possible financial losses suffered as a result of competition with the Casselberry track. Their racing dates are almost identical, May through September.

Judge Leffler said the state could either put up cash, post a surety bond or enter into a written agreement to indemnify the Daytona track against any losses.

The state balked, however, saying it cannot, by law, pledge its credit. That question is now before the 8th District Court of Appeals in Daytona Beach. The state is asking it set aside Leffler's conditions, according to Mitchell Franks, assistant state attorney general.

And, in the latest development, Judge Leffler has now ordered the two major corporate heads of Seminole Park, Jack and Bill Demetres, to post the $471,000 bond by Monday or shut down the track, according to Strawn.

Strawn said, however, they will wait for the appeals court decision to see if it rules in favor of the state and if, in so doing, the language of its ruling indicates no bond should be posted pending the outcome of the appeal on the question of whether the conversion was unconstitutional.

"If the ruling comes by Monday and it's the way we want it, we may not have to post a bond, but if the ruling doesn't come by then, or does and is unfavorable, we'll post the bond because we're going to keep this track operating," Strawn said.

Court Rules: Marriage No Defense Against Wife-Rape

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — The 5th District Court of Appeal has ruled Florida law does not protect men from being prosecuted for sexually assaulting their wives.

The unanimous opinion issued Wednesday was written by Judge Frank Upchurch and praised by the National Center for Women and Family Law.

Phyllis Gelman, spokeswoman for the organization, said the decision was a landmark ruling and that Florida now joins Massachusetts and New Jersey as pioneers in this area.

The ruling came in an appeal by the state of a lower court dismissal of rape charges against Larry Smith, 29, of Orlando. He was arrested in February 1980 after his 27-year-old wife, Carrie, complained she had been kidnapped and then driven in her husband's car to a motel near Lakeland and raped.

She said she was raped again in the back seat of a car behind a motel at Lake Buena Vista.

She told the court she had been threatened with a beating if she did not comply. Mrs. Smith had previously filed for divorce and it was granted nine days after her former husband's arrest.

Smith's attorney, J. Russell Hornsby, had argued the marital exception historically has been part of the state's criminal law on rape. Orange County Circuit Judge Thomas Kirkland had agreed and dismissed a charge of sexual battery against Smith. But Upchurch said no man can be exempted from prosecution if he has raped his wife.

"Clearly, no person in this state can justifiably claim a legal right to impose his or her sexual will upon another person, including his or her spouse, over that person's unmistakable objection."

Funding Will Keep Migrant Clinic Operating

By SYBIL MITCHELL GANDY Herald Staff Writer

Block grant funding will keep the Central Florida Migrant and Community Health Clinic in Sanford alive and well after the present federal grant runs out in December.

Legislation which passed the U.S. House of Representatives June 26 provides that states are given a lump sum earmarked for the health facilities, according to clinic Administrator Bill Schomberg.

Florida's allotment will be divided among its 32 migrant and community health clinics according to size and projected needs, he said.

Although Schomberg and other clinic principals were supportive of another bill which would have retained federal grant funding, they are confident that new block funding will suffice.

Although no specific allotment is projected yet for the local clinic, Schomberg said, Seminole County residents who use its services have no need to fear the facility's closing.

Located at 3rd Street and Oak Avenue, the migrant and community health staff treats between 40-50 patients each day. Some who come in for medical treatment are seasonal migrant farm laborers. But most regular patients are rural poor from Sanford and the outskirts of Seminole County.

"Patient fees provide thousands of dollars in supporting funds to keep the clinic open," he said.

"Although the amount varies, depending on the nature of the care and a person's income, people still get the satisfaction of not feeling like they are taking a hand-out," he added.

Yvonne Brooks of Sanford holds her three-year-old niece, Courtney Davis, while migrant clinic nursing director Charcie Byers gives her the results of Courtney's physical.

According to Schomberg, not much of a transition will take place during this first year of transfer of block grants. The state will have similar guidelines for the 32 clinics.

Administrators expect that services will be expanded, though. Presently, the facility, in addition to regular weekday appointments offers courses between September and May on diabetes, hypertension, obesity and other widespread conditions.

"We want to not only provide continuous care for our patients, but we are interested in educating them in the things they should know about diets and additional care for their illnesses," Schomberg said.

"The patient comes first with everyone on the staff. Our medical director, Dr. Joseph Azelvandre, makes sure of that," Schomberg added.

These courses are obtained through an arrangement with Seminole Community College and carries up to 30-35 students for each class, the administrator said.

A satellite Orviedo facility, which closed at the end of May, could possibly be reopened - if Schomberg's request for additional funds at the organization's regional office in Atlanta comes through.

Clinic administrators and patients aren't the only ones who want the Orviedo facility reopened. Schomberg has a letter from Orviedo Mayor Thomas Morgan encouraging the concept of public health for his city.

In addition to the full-time physician and 2 part-time doctors, another full-time doctor will join the Sanford staff in mid-July, Schomberg said.

This expansion not only anticipates a wider range of services to be offered in the future, but the up-coming school term will bring hundreds of parents with small children entering public school for the first time into the facility.

"The law requires that these children have a physical before they can be admitted. During that last week of August, it's so crowded because parents bring their children in for physicals at the last minute," Schomberg said.

"We just can't get to everybody at once and some are late getting into school," he added.

The administrator hopes the situation will be better this year.

Bonds Assure Widening Of Howell Branch

The reconstruction and widening of Howell Branch Road, near Casselberry and installation of a drainage system along the road should begin early in 1982, according to a spokesman for the county public works department.

The construction was scheduled since $3 million in county bonds for the project were sold Wednesday through the state Department of Transportation. The 30-year bond issues pledging the county's second cent of gasoline tax revenue bear an interest rate of 9.75 percent interest, said Eleanor Anderson, director of the county's office of management and budget, today.

The reconstructed road and other improvements will be done on the three-quarter mile stretch of Howell Branch Road from Horatio Avenue at the Seminole-Orange county line to State Road 436 east. Included in the work will be construction of a new intersection at Howell Branch Road and Lake Howell Road.

Now that the bonds have been sold, the county will acquire the additional right-of-way necessary for the project. Much of the right-of-way has already been acquired through donation by property owners.

The construction project is to be let out for bids. It is expected to take about three months to complete acquisition of the right-of-way.

15 Prisoners Stage Dramatic Breakout

EASTON, Pa. (UPI) — Two inmates overpowered three unarmed guards, unlocked most of the cells at the Northampton County Prison, and escaped in a prison van with 13 other inmates, officials said today. One of the escapees was armed with a .45-caliber revolver.

Authorities said the two masterminds of the jailbreak opened as many as 80 of the prison's 100 cells housing 250 prisoners, but all but the 13 refused their offer of freedom.

The three unarmed guards were the only corrections officials on duty and the mass breakout was not reported for 30 minutes, giving the escapees "a hell of a head start," Warden A.S. Di Giacinto said.

Plane Crash Kills Eight

NORTHAMPTON, Pa. (UPI) — A small aircraft carrying eight people slammed into Blue Mountain in light rain and fog just minutes after takeoff late Wednesday, killing all aboard — including two children.

The single-engine Cherokee Piper bound for Connecticut crashed at the base of the mountain along the Appalachian Trail in Northampton County about 10:30 p.m. EDT, shortly after taking off from the small airport about 10 miles north of Allentown.

"They were pretty torn apart on impact," one state policeman said of the crash victims. Their identities were not released.

They will stay with an Augusta couple, also new friends, who will feed them and provide transportation to and from Talmadge Memorial Hospital — where their daughter was in intensive care.

Food Stamp Crisis Averted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Prompt action by Congress and the concurrence of President Reagan will keep 22.9 million Americans in food stamps through Sept. 30.

Reagan signed a bill Wednesday raising the ceiling on food stamp spending for fiscal 1981 by $1.7 billion to $11.48 billion.

Without the action, Agriculture Secretary John Block would have been forced to inform states that food stamp money was running out and sharp cuts would be necessary through Sept. 30, the end of the current fiscal year.

Court Opens Auto Interiors To No-Warrant Searches

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In giving authorities major new power to conduct warrantless searches, the Supreme Court said police may search the entire passenger compartment of an automobile whenever they arrest a motorist.

The justices held in a 6-3 ruling Wednesday police must be able to immediately search a car for weapons and contraband.

The decision provoked a vehement dissent from the court's two liberal justices, and one warned the ruling "carves out a dangerous precedent."

The New York Civil Liberties Union lawyer who argued the case, Richard Emery, charged, "Innocent citizens will be affected by this ruling. Their cars will be rummaged through and their privacy will be violated."

Justice Potter Stewart wrote the majority opinion, declaring, "When a policeman has made a lawful custodial arrest of the occupant of an automobile, he may ... search the passenger compartment of that automobile."

Dissenting Justice William Brennan — joined by Justice Thurgood Marshall — argued: "The court today substantially expands the permissible scope of searches ... by permitting police officers to search areas and containers the arrestee could not possibly reach at the time of arrest."

Stewart said the "relatively narrow" confines inside a car "are in fact generally, if not inevitably, within the areas into which an arrestee might reach in order to grab a weapon."

But Brennan insisted, "By approving the constitutionality of the warrantless search in this case, the court carves out a dangerous precedent that is not justified."

Justice Byron White filed a separate dissent in the case.

In a case that focused on who decides when political campaigns begin, the justices ruled candidates for federal office have an "affirmative right" to go on national television.

The 6-3 ruling, in a case involving President Carter's effort to buy time to announce his bid for re-election, declared the three major networks failed to provide Carter with "reasonable access" to the airwaves.

In the television case, the high court upheld an appeals court decision that CBS, ABC and NBC had violated the Federal Communications Act. The networks had argued that being forced to sell time whenever a candidate wanted infringed on their First Amendment rights. But Chief Justice Warren Burger, delivering the court's opinion, said federal law created "an affirmative right of reasonable access to individual candidates for federal elective office."

In provisions added to the 1971 Federal Election Campaign Act, Congress intended to grant "a new right of access to persons seeking election to federal office," the court held.

The majority rejected the networks' contentions that "mandatory access" infringes the free speech rights of broadcasters by violating their editorial discretion to decide when the presidential campaign begins.

Congress' effort "to assure that an important resource — the airwaves — will be used in the public interest...properly balances the First Amendment rights of federal candidates, the public and broadcasters," Burger wrote.

Carter's campaign asked for a half-hour prime time in the first week of December 1979 to announce his re-election bid. Each network refused on grounds it was too early in the campaign and said by granting Carter's request, they would be required to honor similar requests from other presidential candidates demanding equal time. This would disrupt regular programming, they said.

The high court's ruling has no practical effect on last year's presidential campaign, but it could have significant impact on future federal elections, notably the 1984 race for the White House.

In other action Wednesday, the court: — Decided a second search-and-seizure dispute from California, with a four-justice plurality concluding "impermanently" closed containers found in a car trunk may not be searched without a warrant.

— Settled a controversy spawned by the winds of a hurricane, ruling, 8-0, that state courts may resolve cases stemming from offshore drilling operations on the outer continental shelf.

In the New York search case, the court reversed a ruling that had thrown out a man's conviction because police — after a trooper stopped a car and arrested four occupants — did not get a warrant to search a jacket found in the car.

Prosecutors argued — and the high court agreed — the jacket was not within the "immediate" control of the trooper.

On Finance

SCC Gets Good Report Card

The District Board of Trustees of Seminole Community College received generally high grades for financial management in a report issued by the Office of the Auditor General.

The report covered conclusions made after an audit of the board's accounts and records for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1979, and June 30, 1980.

The audit had two main purposes: "to express an opinion" on the financial statements for the two fiscal years, and to report violations of law and other matters required by Florida Statutes "that may be determined by audit tests."

Among policies singled out for praise was the board's investment program, which showed "substantial improvement" during the audit period.

The report noted funds "not immediately needed for current operations or capital outlay requirements were placed in certificates of deposit. Competitive bids for each investment were offered the highest interest rate. Monies needed to meet current requirements were held in a savings account and transferred to demand accounts when needed to cover checks issued."

Among its recommendations for improvements, the report noted, "Our tests of compliance with established procedures revealed that none of the student files for students with delinquent obligations selected indicated any restrictions of record. Our testing also disclosed several instances where students (veterans) who were granted 60-day deferrals for one or more academic terms received credit for some or all courses taken; but who had not made payment for either term. College personnel were provided the details of these exceptions. The Board should take steps to correct these deficiencies."

Board members during the two fiscal years were Earl S. Weldon, president of the college; James Wendell Agee (vice-chairman to July 10, 1978; chairman from July 11, 1978); John Daniels, chairman to July 10, 1978; Beverly P. Freeman, vice-chairwoman from July 11, 1978; W. Vincent Roberts, and Carolyn P. Stenstrom.

Coast Guard Locates One Missing Boat

NORFOLK, Va. (UPI) — The Coast Guard has located one of two pleasure boats feared lost in Tropical Storm Bret Tuesday.

Lt. John Kercher said the 40-foot motor-sailer Valiant Lady was about five miles off the Virginia coast near the Virginia-North Carolina border early Thursday morning. The craft, with six people aboard, was moving under its own power and was expected in Norfolk at about noon.

"We found her with a communications check," said Kercher. "The Coast Guard group in Cape Hatteras, N.C. raised her on the radio. She was in no distress and there was no need for further assistance."

He added that everyone aboard was in good health.

Radio contact was re-established at about 12:30 a.m. EDT.

Kercher declined to release the names of the people on board the Valiant Lady until relatives are notified.

Effects Of The Interest Crunch

Nowadays, if one wants to buy a new home, one is likely to find that one can only get a mortgage loan for a two or three-year period. After that time, the homebuyer has to refinance his loan.

That's an astonishing and shocking change from the days when one easily obtained a 20 or 30-year loan at a fixed rate.

The president of a mortgage company in the West recently said, "In my business, it is almost impossible to qualify prospective homeowners for any type of mortgage loan. Young, married people are particularly hurt and are not able to participate in home ownership. Those who must borrow are extremely vulnerable to the viciousness of high interest rates, whether it be to buy a home or to run a business."

This sums up the situation. Young people, who want a stake in our middle class society, are in the worst position they have been in since the Great Depression. Small businessmen are in danger of being driven out of business as a result of their inability to finance inventories. Only the largest companies are well-positioned to survive the storm, but even they face serious difficulties. Several large corporations are in danger of collapse, for one reason or another.

The United States must be very careful not to follow the course set by Prime Minister Thatcher in Great Britain. Mrs. Thatcher entered office with millions of Britons believing she would lick inflation.

Unfortunately, the Thatcher government has placed too much stress on monetarism, on eliminating inflation by reducing the money supply. In theory, this was sound. But the approach has been too theoretical. British business is suffering an unprecedented wave of bankruptcies. They can't borrow the money they need for inventories and expansion.

The United States also is experiencing a very high rate of bankruptcies. Only in the energy and minerals rich areas is there real prosperity. In the older industrial areas, the slump is severe. The continuing weakness of the auto industry is a major factor, as is the halt in new residential housing. The auto slump is caused by the flood of foreign cars, chiefly vehicles imported from Japan.

The Reagan budget represents a tough attack on federal spending, but even more drastic measures are needed. Inflation can be tackled by stern fiscal means, by reducing budget deficits, and pressuring the unions to ease exorbitant wage demands. Unfortunately, the administration apparently has decided to hold up any campaign against monopoly unionism. If the administration means business, it will end its cozy relationship with the Teamsters and insist on repeal of the Davis-Bacon Act, which establishes unrealistically high wage levels.

The administration and the Congress also should place much more stringent restrictions on Japan's shipment of goods to the United States. European nations have responded much more effectively to the Japanese trade offensives, insisting that Japan take voluntary measures.

The interest rate situation should receive priority attention in the White House and Congress. The rates must come down if prosperity is to be restored and confidence in our system is to be maintained. If young people conclude that they can't get a stake in the community through home ownership, they will be pulled in a dangerous direction.

A disillusioned middle class isn't likely to elect a conservative administration in 1984. That's a political fact of life that conservatives should recognize and act upon.

Is Florida caught in a crime wave?

If you use the standard statistical measure of such things — the State Department of Law Enforcement's (DLE) annual "Crime In Florida" report — the answer would seem to be "Yes!"

Of course, the phrase "crime wave" is relative and subject to varying interpretation. But even if you are of the opinion that there is no "wave," you must admit that the waters are a might choppy. The whitecaps are big enough to surf on, and a storm appears to be brewing.

Since 1977, the number of serious crimes has been rising at an almost geometric rate. From 1976 to '77, the volume of what the DLE considers major crimes — murder, rape, robbery, burglary, larceny, aggravated assault, and auto theft — rose 3.6 percent. By today's standards, those were truly the good of days.

From 1977 to '78, the crime volume went up 6.6 percent. Then, in 1979, the figure leaped to 12.1 percent, and up to a full 18 percent last year. If the pattern holds, we can expect the 1981 increase to be in the neighborhood of 24 percent.

But John Q. Public doesn't need anyone to tell him which way the crime rate is going. It's rising faster than the cost overrun on the Space Shuttle. In fact, Miami now has the dubious distinction of leading the nation's large cities in per capita murder, supplanting such traditional homicide capitals as New York, Chicago, and Detroit.

The race wasn't even close. Miami recorded

78.1 murders per 100,000 residents in 1980. Second place went to Detroit with 46.1. Houston was next at 41.2, then Los Angeles at 34.6, Chicago at 29.1, and New York with 25.8 killings per 100,000 population.

Sensing the danger, Miami area residents have begun their own arms race. Federal authorities say roughly 51,000 handguns were legally purchased last year in Dade County, an average of about 140 a day.

Nowhere in the DLE report was there any good news. The number of offenses went up in all seven of the major categories. The total number of serious crimes last year in a state with 9.6 million people was 803,509. That was 122,613 crimes (18 percent) more than in 1979.

Despite the overall gloomy picture, the DLE report did manage to deflate a couple of widely-held myths: namely, that kids and blacks commit most of the crime. At first glance, it would appear that Florida's youth did indeed play a major role in the soaring crime rate. DLE figures show that 37.3 percent of last year's 435,222 arrests (which includes everything from murder to loitering) were of persons under the age of 21. About 22 percent (95,239) were under 18.

Are our kids running amok? Probably not. Criminologists say that teenage crime tends to be overstated. Young people, they claim, usually commit crimes in groups. To clear two burglaries, for example, police might arrest a single adult for one of the offenses, and four teens for the other. A careless reading of the numbers could lead to the incorrect conclusion that 80 percent of all burglaries are committed by juveniles.

And in the area of violent crime, while packs of predatory youths may stalk some streets, the DLE claims older criminals tend to commit the more serious offenses. Of the 1,113 persons arrested for murder last year, only 140 of them (about 8 percent) were juveniles. The remaining 973 had passed their 18th birthday into adulthood. Similarly, less than one-third of all the persons arrested for robbery in 1980 were under the age of 18.

While kids may have been saddled with an unfair share of the blame for the spiraling crime rate, they haven't been alone. Blacks have gotten a bum rap too. But DLE statistics reveal that of those 435,222 arrests made last year, 320,085 (73.5 percent) of them involved white folks. Roughly 26 percent (113,999) were blacks. That's almost a 3-to-1 difference. The remaining arrests were of Indians, Orientals, and various other races.

In the final analysis, knowing "who" actually commits the crime may make no real difference unless it tells us something about "why" they did it. But as the DLE figures clearly suggest, that answer has proven most elusive.

While the search goes on, criminologists struggle with the more immediate problem of how to stem the rising tide of crime. Tougher sentencing, more citizen responsibility, and strengthening of the family are oft-cited suggestions, but as yet there is no consensus.

Reagan Again In 1984?

WASHINGTON (NEA)— Last year most political professionals assumed that Ronald Reagan's 1980 campaign for the presidency would be his last regardless of its outcome. By 1984, they pointed out, Reagan would be 73 years old.

Now the president's closest aides are saying not that he might run for a second term but he will definitely do so. The political professionals, however, are accepting these declarations with several grains of salt.

For the past month or so, Lyn Nofziger, the president's chief political operative, has been telling any reporter willing to listen that his boss is certain to run for and win a second term no matter who the Democrats put up in opposition. Then James Baker, the White House chief of staff, confirmed in a nationally televised interview that Reagan would seek re-election in 1984.

But professionals in both political parties and in the press say that it is far too early to evaluate whether Reagan should or will run again and whether he can win if he does.

The first consideration is Reagan's age and health. His youthful appearance, vigor and speedy recovery after his March shooting belie the fact that he is 70 years old and will be 73 by the time of the next campaign. The Oval Office has taken a great physical toll of most of its occupants.

Jimmy Carter was more popular among the American people at this point in his term than Reagan is today. The bottom dropped out for Carter when it became apparent that he did not have the cure for the nation's ills; the same could happen to Reagan.

The professionals say that Reagan is gambling his political future on the success of his economic-recovery program of tax and budget cuts. If his proposals are adopted but fail to produce the desired results by 1983, Reagan could be in as deep political trouble as was Carter in 1979.

Why, then, are Reagan's operatives saying so unequivocally that he will run and win in 1984? Because they know that in this town nothing is quite as lame as a lame-duck politician. Thus, they are trying to defuse immediately any notion that Reagan will not be around for another seven years.

Reagan is in the midst of a major battle to get his economic program through Congress. He also wants to see the Republican Party take control of the House next year. To succeed on both scores, he needs a unified Republican Party.

Unity could crumble quickly if various factions in the party thought that they would be choosing a new standard-bearer in 1984. The party could split into moderate and conservative camps, with the moderates lining up behind Vice President George Bush and the conservatives splintering even further behind such candidates as Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada and Rep. Jack Kemp of New York.

A Better Coffee Cup?

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Education Editor

Scorched lips, tongues and gullets due to gulping red hot coffee were on the minds of engineering students at the University of California, Berkeley.

So they invented a new coffee cup. "The cup cools the coffee down quickly to drinking temperature then holds it there for 20 minutes or more," said Shawn Buckley, professor at the helm of the "inventing" class.

Inventing mechanical engineering students dub it "The Hot One."

"No more coffee-burned lips and mouths," Buckley said. "That was their goal."

The teacher, an inventor himself and the son and grandson of inventors, got his start at the University of Pittsburgh.

He said it takes lots of tenacity to make it in inventing — a point he stresses to students in the "innovation and entrepreneurship" class.

The new coffee cup was developed by Steve Franzsek, Karl Huber, Scott Roth and Ken Williams as part of their senior project. They studied coffee cooling in foam cups — initially too hot — and in ceramic cups which don't stay hot long enough.

Their design incorporates a unique heat-absorbing layer sandwiched between an insulating cover and a coffee-holding liner.

Buckley said the layer quickly cools the coffee down to drinking temperature, and keeps it there for a long time. The inventing students estimate one version of the cup will cost pennies in production, making it suitable for commuters and take-out restaurants alike.

Projects developed by other groups in the course include:

- A self-actuating fire extinguisher to automatically put out stove-top fires.

- A constant-heat barbecue with a raising grill to keep steaks from scorching.

- A kit which converts a conventional oven into a convection oven to cook meals 30 percent faster.

- A portable electrode cleaner for welders and a computer control kit for an astronomical telescope.

Buckley said the course is part of a trend to teaching the business aspects of innovation to inventors, rather than inventing to business students.

He said similar courses are offered at the University of Utah by Prof. Steve Jacobson and at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology by Prof. Woodie Flowers.

Buckley taught at MIT for seven years before moving west.

He numbers among his inventions a solar panel (rights bought by an oil company) and an aerodynamic device that keeps cornering race cars on the road, permitting faster speeds.

"It sucks the car down onto the road," he said, "and is used in about all the Indianapolis and European formula one cars."

Buckley said he sold Lotus, the car maker, on backing development of the system to permit racers faster speeds. That brainstorm was the inventor-engineer's project for his doctorate degree.

His latest invention is a robot that inspects things on an assembly line.

How does the robot get rid of a bad product? "That's a no big deal," Buckley said. "An air jet would blow it off probably."

Buckley said he and a student invented an aluminum bicycle frame. It is being manufactured.

"It is the most expensive bike, $4,000," he said. "But it is very light and very strong."

Buckley said it looks as though the student inventors of the novel coffee cup have a clearshot at a patent.

At the start of the "inventing" class, Buckley said each of the 25 students submits a project. Then the class decides on a few to work on — students splitting into teams.

Among the projects rejected this year:

- An automatic device to water plants when a person's on vacation.

- A pocket combination tool to scrape skis and use as a screwdriver.

- A plastic cleat to help walk up hill on downhill skis. Keep it in backpack, lay it down and step on it to transform the ski. To restore ski for downhill, just remove cleat.

The world may need these things as much as it needs the proverbial better mousetrap, Buckley allowed.

But ground rules in the course say only a few of the projects can be worked on.

WILLIAM STEIF

Worth Making Trip For

When I sit down to my typewriter at home there is, at one side of the desk, a plastic-covered postcard from the Egyptian Museum in Cairo.

It makes me think of that most enchanting city — its noise, smells, food, dirt, sweet people and glorious architecture. Above all, it makes me think of Cairo's vitality.

But I never realized until the other day how much that vitality owes to the Mamluks, a name you may never hear in four years at college.

Everything we Americans learn, it seems, stems from western civilization. When you study the Middle Ages you learn about the Crusades, Gothic cathedrals, Dante, the Medici, Joan of Arc, da Vinci, Machiavelli, Columbus, Vasco da Gama and the start of the Protestant Reformation.

But there was another Middle Ages, in Islam, and it coincided precisely with our Middle Ages. It was the Middle Ages of the Mamluks, who from 1250 to 1517 controlled an empire that extended from southeastern Turkey through Syria, Lebanon and Palestine south to Mecca and Jeddah on the Red Sea and west through Egypt into Libya and northern Sudan.

The Mamluks expelled the last Crusaders from the Near East and defeated the Mongols. They controlled east-west trade, grew rich and powerful, patronized the arts on a scale that made the Medici look like pikers and made their capital, Cairo, the Near East's wealthiest city, a focus of artistic and intellectual ferment.

All this comes clear in a major new exhibit that has just opened at the Smithsonian's Museum of Natural History in Washington. It's called "Renaissance of Islam: Art of the Mamluks." The 126 objects include illuminated Korans that make the Bible illuminations of medieval monks look naive.

The exhibit has brass, glass, ceramics, ivory-inlaid woodwork, carpets and other treasures. Photos detail key Mamluk buildings in Cairo. Suddenly, you become aware that the Arabs we scoff at have a rich culture that measures up to the West's — and sometimes surpasses it.

"That's all very well for Washington," you say. "But how about me in Chicago?" — or wherever.

The news: The Mamluk exhibit will stay in Washington only through July 19. Then, because it was organized by the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Services (SITES) it will hit the road. So far, six dates have been booked for the next two years.

The show will play the Minneapolis Institute of Arts, New York's Metropolitan Museum, the Cincinnati Art Museum, the Detroit Institute of Arts, the Phoenix Art Museum and Hartford's Wadsworth Atheneum. Negotiations are underway with at least two more big-city museums.

How The Oil Companies Cheat

WASHINGTON -- With earnest zeal, Interior Secretary James Watt is moving to open up more federal land for oil exploration. His intention is to spur domestic energy production.

But it will also spur something else — the theft of billions of dollars' worth of the public's oil by drilling companies that cheat on the royalties they're supposed to pay.

Extracting oil and gas from federal land is no Mickey Mouse operation. About 13 percent of our domestic crude oil and 30 percent of our domestic natural gas are taken from public acreage leased to private companies. Last year alone, nearly $2.7 billion in royalties was paid to the government for the privilege of pumping oil and gas from public land.

But because of mismanagement by the U.S. Geological Survey dating back at least to the 1950s, as much as 10 percent of the royalties owed to Uncle Sam go uncollected each year, government auditors estimate. The Geological Survey concedes it's even worse, estimating that more than $1 million a day in royalties is lost.

If Secretary Watt wants to find out about this sorry situation, he might talk to George Kinzel, an engineer in the USGS office at Thermopolis, Wyo., until his retirement last year. Kinzel monitored the collection of royalties in the Thermopolis district, and in a series of internal memos he warned that the collection problem was getting worse.

One big reason is that the information the government uses to calculate royalty payments is unverified data from the oil companies that is rarely audited. With a touch of sarcasm, the frustrated Kinzel wrote in one memo last August:

"Perhaps we are not smart enough to get proper information from the royalty statements which we got from the accounting section. . . . Therefore, we cannot tell if royalty was paid."

It's more than just sloppy paperwork, Kinzel indicated in a complaint about the way oil was handled in the field. "The industry field people have gotten into bad habits and the USGS has not kept on this field problem consistently over the years."

One of these "bad habits" is the under-reporting by company employees of the amount of oil waiting to be transported from field tanks to pipelines. As far back as 1972, another USGS engineer, R.L. Alexander, at Newcastle, Wyo., complained about this problem.

Alexander noted wide discrepancies in the amounts of oil he measured and the amounts recorded just 40 minutes later of the same oil by an employee of a pipeline company. "Assuming this is company policy, and I am assured by numerous pumpers and other personnel that it is, the total loss annually from the hundreds of tanks they gauge is quite large," Alexander reported.

Alexander wrote that he hoped to "obtain more evidence of this common type of larceny." But instead he was transferred. Suggestive for Rep. Benjamin Rosenthal, D-N.Y., told my associate Tony Capaccio the problem has gotten worse since Alexander's complaint.

It's obvious that if the Geological Survey has been unable to deal with royalty cheaters for the past 20 years or more, the situation can only deteriorate if Secretary Watt opens up still more federal land for exploitation. With even looser supervision, the royalty cheaters will be able to steal far more of the public's oil without getting caught.

Satellite May Help Migrants

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — Proper use of the Landsat satellite could give state officials advance information on where migrant workers are most needed, reducing duplication and costs of state services, experts say.

Sociologists at the University of South Florida have worked for a year analyzing information from the earth resources satellite as it passes over the state every 18 days. They will present their report to state Secretary of Labor Wally Orr July 23.

The report will include recommendations that could lead to more cooperation among state agencies, reducing duplication and expense in handling migrant family needs, said Dr. Harvey A. Moore, director of the Human Resources Institute at USF.

"There is a need for more cooperation between the State Employment Service, the Department of Labor and the HHS (Health and Rehabilitative Services),"

Moore said. "All three are involved in counting the number of migrant workers in the state, but all have different ends in mind and count different ways," he said.

The USF team, working under a $33,000 Board of Regents' STAR (Service Through the Application of Research) grant, determined citrus acreage in Florida could accurately be determined by use of infrared photography from the satellite.

Moore said the research team determined through analysis of satellite information the amount of citrus acreage in Florida, and when that information was checked with estimates by the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the Florida Citrus Commission, the USF estimate was in the middle.

"That was good," he said. "The satellite won't pick up very young groves."

"We wanted to see if we could identify citrus values in a space photograph and see if our count agreed with those of the agricultural people," Moore said. "We found out we're right in the middle."

Moore said knowing the average amount of fruit a laborer picks, the team estimated how many picker days were required to harvest the crop. Again, he said, the estimate was between those the USDA made on the basis of acreage and boxes harvested, and the Florida State Employment Service, which made biweekly counts.

Moore said the migrant labor force has been hard to count in the past because it was so transient, many were aliens who tried to avoid being counted and because of the constant influx of refugees.

There used to be an established stream of migrants going from state-to-state and they could be counted, but now they tend to stay within a state.

"There has been a big change from interstate to intrastate movement."

Spacecraft Being Readied For Its Second Mission

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — An aluminum pallet holding the space shuttle's first cargo is now in place on the orbiter Columbia.

The five-unit payload assembled by Johnson Space Center scientists was loaded into the shuttle's bus-sized cargo bay Wednesday. The package includes hardware for environmental sensing and imagery experiments.

NASA spokesman Mark Hess said a special crane was used to move the U-shaped pallet into the spacecraft which is currently being readied for its second mission Sept. 30.

Astronauts Joe Engle and Richard Truly will carry a total of seven experiments into space.

Plane Crash Investigated

CLEARWATER, Fla. (UPI) — Federal investigators probed the wreckage of the Mooney 210 single-engine airplane today, hoping to determine what caused it to crash Wednesday, killing its lone occupant.

The pilot was identified as Stan Arthur Finegold, 21, of Lakeland.

Airport Manager Jim House said Finegold was making his landing approach when he apparently banked too sharply and the four-seater plane crashed nose first short of the runway.

Murder Probe Launched

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (UPI) — Broward County Sheriff's deputies are trying to find who handcuffed a 19-year-old Jamaica man, shot him and left his body in a state park.

Sheriff's spokeswoman Judy Maffei said the shooting was the result of "a drug deal turned sour."

Rory Michael Halaall, from Jamaica but living in Coconut Creek, Fla., was found Tuesday by a ranger at the John Lloyd State Park, Hollywood police spokesman Fred Barbetta said Wednesday.

Nuclear Unit Shut Down

CRYSTAL RIVER, Fla. (UPI) — Florida Power Corporation's $23-megawatt nuclear generating unit will be out of service for about two weeks as technicians work to correct problems with two vital cooling fans in the containment building.

The unit was shut down Tuesday night after both fans had stopped working and temperatures in the containment building began to climb toward a level where damage could have occurred to monitoring and instrumentation gear they were supposed to protect.

Company spokesman Larry Shriner said Wednesday temperatures had climbed from the normal 120-degree level to 250 degrees when it was decided to begin a cold shutdown of the unit.

Smuggling Trial Nears

MIAMI (UPI) — The first trial in "Operation Grouper" — the government's wide-ranging undercover investigation of big-time drug smuggling — is almost ready for a federal jury.

U.S. District Judge Eugene P. Spellman is expected to charge the jury today in the trial of Eduardo Garcia, president of a Miami-based steamship brokerage firm, and two other defendants.

Garcia, 50, is charged with conspiracy to import marijuana and three counts of attempted importation of marijuana, for which the maximum penalty is 20 years in prison.

Scuba Diver Drowns

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI) — A woman who drowned while scuba diving in the Gulf about 15 miles west of Egmont Key Wednesday was identified today as Ruth Twinnan, 40, of St. Petersburg.

The woman was diving with three other people shortly before noon when she used hand signals to tell fellow diver David Kunkel she had an ear problem.

Kunkel said he led her to the surface near the bow of their 30-foot boat and then dived to bring up the other two divers. He said when they surfaced the woman had disappeared.

Capitol On Way To Restoration

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — Ladders, paint cans and drop cloths still litter the old Capitol, but it now sports a glistening white cupola as evidence of the first major step in completing the restoration of the building to the way it was in 1902.

"It's like it's home again," said Department of General Service official Tom Raker, whose department is overseeing the project. Once finished, the Capitol will serve as a museum and working office building.

A special crane from Jacksonville was used to hoist the six-thousand-pound, 30-foot cupola one-hundred-and-35 feet in the air to the top of the building's dome where it was attached to four giant metal beams.

Return of the copper-plated cupola to the solid copper dome pretty much completed work on the roof. Remaining outside jobs include final stucco and painting work and the finishing of the two porticos.

The restoration project is a rarity for DGS. It's on time and within the $7 million budget.

"The official completion date is May 2, 1982, but I imagine we'll finish three or four weeks ahead of time," Raker said.

"It's been a real good project."

"It's going up a lot easier than it came down," Raker said of the cupola. "We weren't sure it would stay together when it came down. We know it's in good shape going back up."

Tallahassee consulting engineer Billy Bishop said in a report a couple of years ago the dome and cupola were in such bad shape, a good strong wind might blow them over.

The first thing DGS did after the 1978 Legislature decided to restore the 1902 Capitol was spend $60,000 installing steel support beams to reinforce both dome and cupola.

The restored Capitol will be separated from the 22-story new Capitol by a park and will be used as a museum, public gathering place and working office building.

It will include restored House, Senate and Supreme Court chambers, a bench used by justices on the high court for decades and other original or period furniture.

This year's Legislature passed a law giving itself first crack at the useable office space, although Mrs. Bob Graham already has made a pitch for an office in the old building.

The original Capitol replaced a log cabin statehouse built in the 1820's and was opened in 1845, the year Florida became a state. It remained virtually untouched until the expansion project completed in 1902.

The 1902 project was designed by North Carolina architect Frank Milburn, noted for the many Southern Railway stations he built throughout the South and several county courthouses.

The 1945 building was expanded to include new House and Senate chambers on each end and given the dome and cupola, popular features of monumental government buildings at the time.

Kerr Scores On Wild Pitch

Altamonte Trips Jax

Playing into extra innings has become a habit for the Altamonte American Legion Post 183 crew.

Wednesday night marked the sixth time Post 183 has had to work overtime this summer and the extra work paid dividends as they nudged Jacksonville 6-5 with a run in the bottom of the ninth to win their opener in the DeLand Firecracker tourney.

Catcher Brian Holzworth opened the ninth with a line single to left. Holzworth moved to second on a sacrifice by Jim Chiodini and scooted to third on a Doug Chiodini fly ball to deep center field. Jeff Kerr pinch ran for Holzworth and scored the winning run on a wild pitch. Knuckleballers Rick Marcello of Altamonte and Jacksonville's Sam Higgs were matched in a pitching duel early. The Rebels scored unearned runs off Marcello in the second and fifth innings while Altamonte tallied its first run off Higgs in the bottom half of the fifth.

Jacksonville opened up a 3-1 lead in the sixth when catcher Don Chaveous crashed a two out, three-run homer off Marcello.

Altamonte rallied with four runs in the bottom of the sixth to chase Higgs. With runners on first and second and two out, third baseman Jerry Winterhalter delivered a run scoring single to left closing the gap to 3-2.

Higgs apparently had worked out of trouble fanning John Reich but the ball scooted past Chaveous to load the bases for leadoff hitter Bob Parker.

Parker drilled the first pitch to left for two Altamonte runs. Left fielder Dave Martinez followed with another single to score Reich with the tying run.

Parker notched the win in relief allowing only two singles in the final three frames. Winterhalter had three hits in four trips to the plate while Martinez collected a pair of singles and two RBIs.

Wever, Sounds Shackle O-Twins

Nashville Sounds' pitcher Stefan Wever may be new to the Southern League, but Wednesday night at Tinker Field the gigantic right hander hurled like a grizzled veteran.

In the 23-year-old's second start he combined with Curt Kaufman and Dan Led Duke to shackle the Orlando Twins on five hits for a 7-3 victory before 741 partisans.

Tonight, the 5-4 Twins try to move back to the .500 mark by sending newcomer Bob Mulligan against veteran Roger Slagle at 7:30 at Tinker.

Saturday the O-Twins invade Sanford Memorial Stadium for an 11 a.m. "Firecracker Special." Tickets are $2 for adults, $1 for children and 50 cents for Little Leaguers accompanied by their coach.

Wednesday night the O-Twins bats resembled Little Leaguers against Wever. The 6-foot-7 right hander was touched for an unearned run in the opening frame and a line-drive, two-run double by Randy Bush in the fifth inning.

Bush's shot to left center followed a single by Tim Teufel and a double by Steve Douglas. It brought the Twins within 4-3, but they couldn't get any closer.

The Sounds had punched across three runs in its share of the fifth, driving starter Jack Hobbs (4-5) from the mound in favor of Jose Reyes.

Hobbs plunked Don Mattingly with a pitch to force in the innings' first run before Manager Tom Kelly opted for Reyes. Reyes fanned Willie McGee, but Ted Wilborn crashed a double down the left field line to score the final two runs for a 4-1 lead.

Nashville added insurance runs in the seventh on a double by McGee and the ninth on a Reyes wild pitch and a Wilborn single. Wilborn had three hits on the night and drove in three runs.

While Wilborn was taking care of the at-bat work, Led Duke silenced the O-Twins over the final three frames. His only blemish was a walk to Scott Ulger.

Kissimmee Kicks Up Silver Spurs Friday

KISSIMMEE—Features both new and old add interest to the Silver Spurs Independence Day Rodeo, beginning Friday, July 3 for a three day schedule. Shows will be held at 8 p.m. Friday, July 3, and at 2:30 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, July 4 and 5.

Country western music by Joan Williams and her "Free Spirit" band, and the unique Quadrille—a square dance on horseback—will all be a part of the festivities of the 68th edition of the largest rodeo in the Southeastern United States.

Rawl Overstreet, "Big Boss" of the Spurs, says the show should be A-1. More than 300 other Spurs members will also be doing unpaid work to produce this summer's show, and almost as many entrants are expected to compete for some $25,000 entry fees and prize money. Nationally-ranked professional cowboys will compete in the six rodeo contest events—bull riding, saddle and bareback bronc riding, steer wrestling, team roping and calf roping. Florida's leading cowgirls will again be competing in the Barrel Race.

Rodeo clown George Doak, known throughout the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association circuit, will add to the bull riding thrills. Doak has worked Spurs rodeos for more than 10 years, and is a favorite with crowds at the arena, while protecting bull riders as well.

Shows will be held at the Silver Spurs Stadium on U.S. 192-411 between Kissimmee and St. Cloud near Turnpike Exit 65. The rodeo owns 50 acres for free parking and has 12,000 covered grandstand seats, all reserved, with tickets priced at $4, $5, and $6. Reservations can be made by phone or mail, or in person, through agencies in Altamonte Springs.

'Supporting' Connors Faces Borg

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI)—Poor Jimmy Connors.

Since he first won the singles crown at Wimbledon back in 1974, he has been forced to play a supporting role to Sweden's Bjorn Borg, and last year also to John McEnroe, who squares off today against Australian Rod Frawley in the other men's semifinals.

The odds heavily favor a repeat of last year's final between Borg and McEnroe, who last year eliminated Connors in the semifinals.

But history and hardheaded bookmakers don't make much impression on third-seeded Connors, who displayed his iron determination to regain the Wimbledon crown when he came back from two sets down Tuesday to defeat India's Vijay Amritraj and reach the semifinals.

Today, he has the chance to dethrone Borg, but would still have to contend with secondseed

McEnroe, who should comfortably dispose of unranked Frawley.

"If I am to win the tournament, I have to beat Borg and McEnroe," Connors said. "If I should beat Borg and not win the championship it will not be good enough."

The fiery McEnroe has beaten Frawley in both their previous meetings, but the Australian who has never played singles on Wimbledon's Center Court before, promised to "come out swinging" and try to upset the New Yorker.

"I haven't come all this way for nothing," he said. "I hope to give him trouble."

The women's final Friday will be Chris Evert-Lloyd's chance to avenge only her second clay-court defeat in eight years. She was dumped by Czechoslovak Hana Mandlikova in the French Open semifinals earlier this year.

Evert, beaten in the finals for the past three years, dropped only four games as the swept past fellow-American Pam Shriver in the semifinals Wednesday.

Evert said she had not yet thought about the possibility of losing a fourth Wimbledon final, but she will have no easy task against Mandlikova, who displayed her breathtaking talent in dumping fellow Prague native Martina Navratilova, 7-5, 4-6, 6-1.

"Hana's got every shot in the book, but she's moody," conceded Evert. "At her best, she's brilliant."

On Friday Mandlikova, holder of the Australian and French Open titles, will be watched by her parents. They are traveling from Prague to see their daughter play in the Wimbledon final, the third leg of the "Grand Slam" of the world's four major crowns and a dream come true for the young star.

"Now I am here," she said. "It is in my head now I can win big titles, and I can win Wimbledon."

Trevino Hopes Against 'Western' Lightning

OAK BROOK, Ill. (UPI)—Lee Trevino is a superstitious man and he's hoping lightning doesn't strike twice at the Western Open at the Butler National Golf Course.

Trevino's last appearance at the $300,000 PGA stop, which begins today, was five years ago. It was one he will never forget.

"Everything about that day was three. It was three o'clock, hole 13, Friday the 13th and I was in a group of three," Trevino said.

At that moment, Trevino was struck by lightning and he was hospitalized for two days. He insisted the incident did not cause him to skip the Western Open in the interim but acknowledged it did have an effect on his life.

"Scared of it, you bet. I think a lot about it. Lightning is very dangerous," said Trevino, who will be seeking his first Western Open title. "But that's not why I haven't come back. It was the condition of the fairways."

The fairways at the 7,097-yard, par-72 course have been improved so much in recent years the tournament—the oldest stop on the PGA tour—has attracted the likes of Trevino and Jack Nicklaus to this year's event.

Tom Watson, the leading money winner on the tour again this year with $334,842 and three titles to his credit, cited the improved condition of the course for the stellar field, which includes eight of the top 12 money winners this year.

Jarrett Looks To Fill Father's Shoes At 400

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Glenn Jarrett is one of those second-generation stock car drivers who've been waiting a long time to fill the shoes of famous fathers.

Glenn's father, Ned, won NASCAR Grand National championships twice in two divisions. Like Ned, Glenn started racing in late-model sportsman competition, waiting for the big break on the Winston Cup circuit.

It may come, Saturday, July 4th, in the Firecracker 400 at Daytona International Speedway.

The 30-year-old driver from Conover, N.C., will be behind the wheel of a Dodge Mirada built and maintained by Norman Negro, himself the son of a former Grand National competitor. Jarrett has driven in eight Winston Cup events in the past four years, with his best finish being 12th in the 1980 LA Times 500.

Why will this ride be any better? "Norman has put together a good, competitive car," Jarrett said. "He's put a lot of work into getting ready for Daytona. While the Mirada is not as aerodynamically suited for Daytona as the Fords and General Motors products, I think I have a chance for the first time to hang in there with the front runners and prove myself."

It won't be easy for Jarrett and other young hopefuls entered. In addition to the NASCAR regulars like Richard Petty, Dale Earnhardt, Bobby Allison, Darrell Waltrip, Ricky Rudd, Terry Labonte, Harry Gant and Neil Bonnett, there will be former Indianapolis 500 winners A.J. Foyt and Johnny Rutherford in the field.

"I'm not expecting miracles, but I am shooting for a Top Ten finish," Jarrett said. "I'm hoping the Firecracker 400 will be a spring-board for the future."

The Firecracker 400, starting at 10 a.m. Saturday, will climax Summer Speedweek at Daytona. The Champion Spark Plug six-hour endurance road race runs from 6 p.m. until midnight on Thursday, July 2nd, and the Paul Revere 250 Camel GT road race begins at midnight on July 3rd, following Daytona's famous fireworks display.

Lowe's Finds 14 Heads Better Than One

By SAM COOK
Herald Sports Editor
Fourteen heads are better than one. At least that's what Sanford's Lowe's women softball team feels when it comes to having a coach.

"We're a very close team," said one of the 14, Betsy Chavis. "We have no coaches, we sit down together and decide what it will take to win a softball game." And who ever said women had any trouble making up their minds?

This team has its mind made up to win softball games. So well, in fact, that Lowe's is 20-0 for the season. It has outscored the opposition 251-49 in league play in Sanford.

Upon conquering the home town rivals, Lowe's turned its minds to tournaments. Last Saturday it swept through the Angelo's Mice tournament at Red Bug Park in five games.

Saints finished second, The Hustlers third and Watkins' Paint picked up the fourth spot.

Along with sweeping the 15-team tournament, Lowe's Ladies picked up most of the awards too. Former Seminole softball coach Betty Turner was tabbed the top pitcher.
The veteran right-hander turned in two sparkling shutouts as Lowe's knocked off the Saints 2-0 Sunday morning and then whitewashed them 3-0 for the championship. Turner was backed by errorless fielding in the second game.
Linda Lewis, an infielder-second baseman, delivered the big hit for Lowe's in the 2-0 victory. Lewis tripled home the first run and scored moments later.
Third baseman Sherri Bledsoe ensured the victory with a leaping stab at third to save two runs from scoring.
In the title tilt, Melva Soriano and Marcy Kona chased home the three runs for Lowe's. "We just seem to work well together," understated Chavis. "We were very proud to represent the city of Sanford."
Other Lowe's awards included; Becki Simpson (best outfielder), Melva Soriano (best hitter and fielder), Deena Flamm (best infielder) and Anne Grieme (best first baseman). Grieme also took home the most valuable player award.
Lowe's reached the semifinals by beating Jack Sier's 6-4 and walloping Watkins' Paint 12-1. In its third game, Lowe's bombed the Navy 10-3.
The tournament, organized by Casselberry's Mickey Norton of Angelo's Mice, also had an Olympics for running and hitting.
Grieme picked up her third award of the day by hitting the ball 203 feet and three inches. Flamm won the running contest by circling the bases in 12 seconds.
Other team members include Collen Myers (second base), Carol Bledsoe (catcher), Ivory Whitaker (catcher), Lisa Galm (outfielder), Betsy Chavis (outfielder) and Judy Walthers (outfielder).

Miller Or Not, Futility Prevails At Strike Talks

NEW YORK (UPI) — Marvin Miller did not say if he would be present when representatives of the players and owners meet today in another attempt to end the major-league baseball strike but, apparently, it doesn't matter.

After the executive director of the Major League Players' Association made his first appearance at the bargaining table since the strike began June 12, both sides emerged from a 3½-hour meeting Wednesday — the first negotiations since last Friday — with the same feeling of futility which has prevailed since the walkout began.

The parties remain miles apart on everything except the belief no end is in sight to the strike, which enters its 21st day today. Miller's return did little to narrow the chasm separating the players and owners.

"Well, the point has been made," said Miller. "Some owners said we could reach a settlement if they could talk to the players alone. They did for the last two weeks and no progress was made.

"The issue is not whether I attend the meetings. It wouldn't have mattered if I was here."

The issue remains compensation for free agents and the owners did make a new proposal Wednesday — one chief owners' negotiator Ray Grebey claimed was a "significant move" and Miller termed "outrageous."

MIDNIGHT QUESTION

Can Anyone Stop Redman, Lola?

Can anyone stop Brian Redman and his undefeated Lola? That is the No. 1 question facing the Camel GT drivers as they head into the second half of the International Motor Sports Association season.

Redman unveiled the Chevrolet-powered Lola at Laguna Sea Hanceway in Monterey, Calif., in May and he has not lost a Camel GT race in the Bob Garretson-prepared auto since. In addition to Laguna Seca, he also was victorious at Lime Rock (Conn.) Park and Mid-Ohio (Lexington, Ohio).

The three straight triumphs lifted him into first place in the GT point standings in his bid to win the Camel GT title for the first time. He presently leads defending champion John Fitzpatrick by 19 points (98-79).

Redman skipped the IMSA event at Brainerd, Minn., to compete in the 24 Hours of LeMans. But the English driver has returned to the United States and he will seek his fourth consecutive win in the midnight ride of Paul Revere on July 4 at Daytona International Speedway. The 250-mile race will start at 12:01 a.m.

Fitzpatrick feels if he can eliminate the small mechanical problems that have been slowing his Porsche Turbo during the last two months he can stop Redman's unbeaten skid. "We have run with Brian when our car is running up to par," says Fitzpatrick, who moved to the United States last year from England to compete full-time on the Camel GT Series. "We just need a little luck and I think we can beat the Lola."

While Fitzpatrick still has faith in his Porsche, John Paul Jr. has switched to a Lola of his own in an attempt to win his first race of 1981 and beat Redman.

Paul, who stands fourth in the point race with 57 points, won the pole at Brainerd in his new Lola. But engine problems killed his victory aspirations at the three-mile road course.

"By the time we get to Daytona, we hope to have all the little bugs worked out," says the 21-year-old, who is expected to be the sport's next superstar. "We need a couple of wins to get into the hunt for the championship and hopefully, Daytona will be one of them."

The Paul Revere 250 is the ninth race on the 16-event calendar and Paul realizes that if Redman maintains his streak for another two or three races he will be almost impossible to overtake in the battle to see who wins the $25,000 that goes to the Camel GT champion.

Bobby Rahal, a former teammate to Redman on the Cooke-Woods team, is third in the point race with 73 points. Rahal hopes to drive the Porsche that Danny Ongais was scheduled to run at Daytona before his fiery wreck in the Indianapolis 500. Rahal teamed with Redman to win the 24 Hours of Daytona earlier in the year before he was dropped from the team.

Italian driver Gianpiero Moretti completes the top five with 40 points and the Porsche chauffeur hopes to boost his total by 20 with a victory in the 250-mile event over the 3.84-mile road course.

Hurley Haywood and Mustang-driving Klaus Ludwig, who won the Brainerd event, are tied for sixth with 36 points. The rest of the top ten includes Garretson and Al Holbert with 30 points each and Ted Field with 29.

Points on the Camel GT Series are distributed as follows: 20 for first; 15 for second; 12 for third; 10 for fourth; 8 for fifth; 6 for sixth; 4 for seventh; 3 for eighth; 2 for ninth; and 1 for tenth. The pole winner earns a one-point bonus.

In the GTO division, David Cowart is the runaway leader with 124 points and he will be seeking his seventh straight win in his BMW at Daytona. Al Unser Jr. is second with 70 points.

Mazda teammates Lee Mueller and Walt Bohren are 1-2 in the Camel GTU point standings (120-96). Both drivers have won three races this year.

If Cowart and Mueller continue to occupy the No. 1 spots in their respective divisions, they will earn $10,000 each from the $125,000 Camel GT point fund.

Dooley: Winning Isn't Everything, Unless You Can Do It Over And Over

NEW YORK (UPI) — Vince Dooley has had his time in the sun. Now that he's back in the shade, and had time to reflect on it, he realizes winning isn't everything — unless you can keep doing it over and over.

Here's a man who did it all only six months ago, achieving what nobody else ever did by guiding the Georgia Bulldogs to their first national college football championship in 89 years.

His team won all 11 of its regular season games, then made Notre Dame its 12th straight victim in the Sugar Bowl to emerge No. 1 not only in the country but in the entire universe.

Now, with a brand new season approaching, he's getting some heart-warming messages from Georgia's overanxious alumni. Messages like: "Gee, that was a lotta fun" ... "How come we never did it before?" ... "Let's do it again."

Dooley is beginning his 18th year as head coach of the Bulldogs and he knows all about human nature. Give people a winner, and they look for you to do it again. Do it again, and they accept it almost as a matter of course.

Milton Richman
UPI Sports Writer

"It could be a difficult year," he says. "Anything less than winning every game won't be good enough."

The Bulldogs, with Herschel Walker, their All America freshman tailback, leading them, came very close to being the perfect football team last season. However, even with Walker back and a more experienced Buck Belue returning at quarterback, they might not be quite as good this season as they were last. Dooley was given some advance notice of that upon greeting his players the first day of spring practice.

Absent were seven of Georgia's defensive players from last season and six players from the offensive unit. Plus the team's two regular kickers. They all had graduated.

Dooley talked about those holes that will have to be filled while he was here to address more than 50 of the nation's top high-school athletes named winners of the Hertz No. 1 awards. Walker and Belue both won those awards while they were still in high school, although Walker received his for his outstanding performance in track rather than football.

O.J. Simpson also spoke to the youngsters during a special panel discussion Wednesday and when Dooley was introduced to them, he talked about the importance of preparing themselves for when their athletic careers would be over.

He talked pretty much the same way to Herschel Walker earlier this year when the Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League came around waving a contract for what was said to be as much as $750,000 in front of him.

You can tell how much Dooley thinks of Walker by the way he speaks of him.

"He, as much as anyone else I can think of, represents the role model of someone preparing himself for that time when his athletic career is done," Dooley says. "O.J. Simpson is an excellent example of a player who did the same thing. Herschel is a serious student."

Before Walker met with Montreal officials to listen to what they had to say, Dooley met with him to point out some things he felt he should know.

"I merely warned him about the NCAA rules, the fact he could not accept anything from Montreal without jeopardizing his college career," Dooley explains. "He assured me he understood the rules."

After Walker came to his decision, he visited with Dooley in the coach's office at Athens, Ga., again.

"Coach, I was born in this country and I see no reason to leave it to make a living," he said. "The college experience is important to me. I'm staying."

"You made the decision I thought you'd make," Dooley said.

Dooley honestly admits that before last season started, he didn't foresee the Bulldogs going through the whole season undefeated.

Annual Problem For Police

Laws Against Fireworks Hard To Enforce

United Press International
It's Fourth of July season again and the land is resounding with the booms of illegal M-80s, ash cans, Silver Salutes and the newest craze, "the super-blockbuster" — all banned under laws as difficult for police to enforce as Prohibition.

"It's like trying to enforce litter laws or Prohibition," said a police official in New York City, where it is not uncommon to see children hurling lighted firecrackers out of tenement windows, despite a state ban on all fireworks.

"What can you do if there are 400 people all lighting firecrackers on the block?"

A total of 16 states have laws completely banning unauthorized use of firecrackers and fireworks, including sparklers, and most other states have bans on the larger firecrackers. In many states, cities and counties also have their own laws limiting firecrackers.

In addition, the federal government has banned interstate commerce for all of the big crackers and has registration rules designed to keep such popular holiday explosives as M-80s, ash cans and cherry bombs out of the hands of youngsters.

In New York state's Nassau County, the police bomb squad said firecrackers are such a problem they annually hold a display to underscore the dangers.

At this year's display, a policeman put a watermelon on the shooting range and fired into it with a .44-caliber magnum, the most powerful handgun on the market. The melon broke into four pieces.

Then a "super-blockbuster" — the newest firecracker craze in Nassau County — was placed in another watermelon and detonated. The melon was shattered into small pieces, its remains strewn across the range.

"That's the newest goodie to rear its ugly head, that's what the kids will be playing with this year — a tube crammed with powder readily capable of destroying a mailbox," said bomb-squad detective Thomas Gilligan.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission in Washington says fireworks-related injuries jumped 18 percent last year from 1979 and reported deaths increased from six to 10.

Law enforcement officials say supplies of powerful illegal firecrackers are plentiful, with the big explosives being produced in "shanty" bootleg factories in the South or being brought up from Mexico.

One apparent illegal fireworks factory exploded last April in Newport, Ky., killing two men and injuring 25 others.

Jackson To Fight For Voting Act

WASHINGTON (UPI) — "We will go across this nation like a plague, using every means at our disposal," said the Rev. Jesse Jackson, head of Operation PUSH. "We will negotiate, we will litigate, demonstrate, and will cogitate."

With these words, the head of the Chicago-based civil rights organization signaled his followers to take to the streets to demonstrate in support of extending the 1965 Voting Rights Act.

Jackson laid out his plans Tuesday at a news conference after meeting privately with Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., to urge the Senate Judiciary Committee chairman to support a proposed extension of the act's key enforcement provision.

He referred to the "preclearance" provision requiring states or subdivisions with past histories of voter discrimination to get prior federal approval of any election law changes. Unless extended, the provision expires next year.

"We are going to try to set the climate that makes it very clear that our right to vote is non-negotiable," Jackson said. "In this period of states rights and deregulation, we cannot afford to have voting rights tampered with."

Jackson said the provision is not adequately enforced in many states, especially in the Deep South, where gerrymandering, annexation and switching to at-large elections are used to dilute the black vote.

He added that without such enforcement, the act itself "is little more than an Indian treaty."

Jackson said he urged Thurmond to support a 10-year extension. Thurmond has said he will support the provision only if it is made to apply equally to all states.

"His concern was that South Carolina not be singled out," Jackson said. "Our concern is that regional pride should not take precedence over racial justice."

No More Crybabies?

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — A psychologist says he may have hit upon something that could revolutionize parenthood — a way to stop babies from crying.

Infants will stop crying when they hear a recording of their own walls, says Dr. Russell D. Clark III of Florida State University and a fellow psychologist who was once his student who are preparing to publish the results of their study.

"I'd like to make every mother in the world happy," said Clark.

"It's incredible that an infant as young as 20 hours can discriminate his own cry from that of another, especially when many adults don't recognize their own voices on tape," the psychologist said in an interview Tuesday.

"How they do it is the $64 question," said Clark, who said psychologists, pediatricians and hearing experts could not explain it.

The infants only responded to the distress of another infant, he said. They did not respond to tapes of the cries of an 11-month-old baby or a chimpanzee.

The findings will be published this year in Developmental Psychology.

Clark and Dr. Grace B. Martin, a member of the faculty of Armstrong State College in Savannah, Ga., made the discovery by chance. They were experimenting to find out if sympathetic distress — getting upset when other people are upset — is a learned or innate response.

They tested newborn infants under a day old, "most of whom could not have learned very much and probably never had heard another baby cry," Clark said. He explained "very little crying goes on in a nursery" because "most of the time, the babies are sleeping. Their cries are high and far apart so sounds are muffled."

The research was conducted with 80 babies at Savannah Memorial Medical Center last summer.

Different crying infants were recorded and the tapes played back to both calm and crying babies, Clark said. The result supported the innate distress response theory: babies cried when they heard another baby cry and babies who already were crying, cried even more.

But the same crying baby, upon hearing himself on tape, immediately quieted, Clark said.

And while calm infants cried when they heard another baby crying, they quieted when they heard themselves and remained quiet after the tape was turned off.

Tobacco Seen As Major Cause Of Cancer Deaths

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States regulates 102 substances suspected of causing cancer but not tobacco, which a congressional study says is responsible for more cancer deaths than any other single substance.

"Public health laws exclude tobacco from regulatory action because smoking tobacco is viewed as a personal decision, and one in which Congress has decided not to intervene," said a report released Tuesday by Congress' Office of Technology Assessment.

"The government limits its responsibility to informing smokers and potential smokers of the hazards of cigarettes, conducting behavioral studies on ways of affecting smoking habits and supporting research on low tar-nicotine cigarettes."

Helen Gelband, an OTA research associate and one of the report's authors, estimated 30 percent of all cancer is preventable, largely by stopping smoking. Other cancer-causing factors that can be controlled, she said, are asbestos, excessive alcohol consumption and unnecessary radiation exposure.

The OTA report said cigarette smoking is the major cause of lung cancer in men and women and largely responsible for the recent rapid rise in female lung cancer rates. Smoking, the report said, also is associated with cancer of the larynx, oral cavity, esophagus, bladder, kidney and pancreas.

"Tobacco is known to contribute more heavily to the number of cancer deaths than any other single substance," the report said.

The report, an assessment of technologies used to evaluate environmental causes of cancer, said the government has 10 laws aimed at restricting human exposure to cancer-causing agents.

The OTA report said 57 of the 102 regulated substances suspected of causing cancer are covered by more than one law. Despite the current antiregulatory mood in Washington, the report said Americans still favor health and environmental regulations.

"The majority of people want protection against carcinogenic risks, and at the same time want to reduce regulatory costs and burdens."

Subway Victim May Have Died Of Fright

TORRINGTON, Conn. (UPI) — A former college honor student who was stripped naked and chased onto New York City subway tracks by a jeering Times Square mob literally may have died of fright, not electrocution.

Charles Coury, 27, said Tuesday New York medical officials told him his brother, Gerald, 26, may have died from "heart stoppage" brought on by the terror of the pre-dawn chase.

New York police have said the younger Coury died instantly Saturday after he leaped onto the subway tracks, touched one hand to the electrified third rail and screamed, then put both hands on the rail and cried out again.

But Charles Coury said pathologists told him an autopsy did not conclude his brother was electrocuted and indicated there were no burn marks on the body. He said the autopsy did show a slight blockage in an artery leading to the heart.

"After he was beaten up and pursued by 40 people throwing things at him ... he was so terrified and his heart stopped," Coury said.

Coury also said pathologists told him there was no sign of drugs or alcohol in his brother's body.

A spokesman for the New York Medical Examiner's Office confirmed an autopsy was performed but said no findings would be released until results of additional chemical tests were completed.

"Obviously, we are working as fast as we can to get the results in this case," the spokesman said.

Coury said the medical examiner's office released his brother's body and a funeral was planned Friday in Torrington.

Singles' sharing meetings — a time to share frustrations as well as successes. Thoughts and ideas are exchanged. It is a time to really open up; to laugh or to cry or find new strength from others who care and understand.

Class Organized For Single-Again, Single-Parents

By CAROLYN FELTS
Special To The Herald

A private secretary, a plumber, an electronics assembler, an airplane mechanic, a retired service man, a computer operator, an auto mechanic, a teacher, a swimming pool contractor ... and so on.

What do all these people have in common? They are all single (most divorced), some widowed, some unwed mothers, all looking for the same thing ... happiness and contentment in their lives.

Several are fathers who have custody of their children. Most are members of a recently formed Single-Again, Single-Parents Class at Ravenna Park Baptist Church, Country Club Road in Sanford.

It is because of the concern for the many people in the community who are in this category that the pastor, Gary DeBusk, formed this class.

Enrollment started with eight people and has grown to 26. They meet at 9:45 a.m. Sunday for Bible study and to discuss the special needs and problems of the single again person and single parents.

Visitors from other churches and denominations who have heard of this class have come to see for themselves. Outside the class there are sharing meetings held each month at a voluntary member's home. There are guests every other month such as lawyers, counselors, pastors, and others who have the knowledge to answer questions and lead discussions on topics of interest to the group.

When no speaker is present a tape series is used — "Faith, Risk And Intimacy in the Single Life" — prepared by Christian counselors Keith and Andrea Miller. The tapes are always followed by much lively discussion by both the men and the women.

This is a time to share frustrations as well as successes. Thoughts and ideas are exchanged. It is a time to really open up; to laugh or to cry or find new strength from others who care and understand.

At these "sharing meetings" men and women learn to communicate again, to feel better about themselves; to find answers they have been searching for — sometimes in all the wrong places.

New friendships are formed, self-confidence is rebuilt, and some are able to say what they feel, for the first time in a long time.

It is certainly a time enjoyed by all with meetings sometimes not breaking up until midnight.

There is also a social meeting planned each month, some to include the children. Some of these events have been: a pizza party, a day at Rock Springs, a day at the beach, a trip to Wet 'N Wild with 46 attending!

The latest activity was a camping trip with boating, water skiing, cooking and eating and lots of just plain fun. A Fourth of July barbeque is planned to include the children.

Costs are kept low and transportation can be provided. Child care is available at no cost for adult meetings.

All single again-single parents are welcome to attend any of these meetings. There is no age limit. Members of all churches are welcome but also those who presently are not attending any church.

The teachers and leaders of the class are Charlie and Betty Willis who were both "single again" for five years of their lives.

From their former marriages they have a total of eight children and four grandchildren. They both are able to understand your feelings for they have "been there."

In Betty's words: "The class is blessing our lives beyond words. I feel humble that the leaders of the church called us to lead this class. I like to think that perhaps God was preparing me for just this ministry as He led me through the struggles of my single-again years. We truly love each class member and can feel their love in return."

There are no fitting words to describe this group — its growth, its companionship, the fun they have together, helping each other learn to deal with life as it is now and the love each has for the others.

It is fun and fellowship and forgetting problems for a little while; rebuilding their lives and learning to be happy again.

If you would like to be a part of this group or have any questions call Betty or Charlie at 323-2791 and find out what you've been missing.

'Giving' Is 'Taking Away' In Bitter Mother's Mind

DEAR ABBY: I'm tired of hearing that unwed mothers give up their babies because they want them to have a better life. Here's what happened in my case:

When I was 15, I was raped by my brother-in-law. (My sister was pregnant with her fourth baby in five years.) I was afraid to tell anyone the truth, so I lied and said I wasn't sure who the baby's father was.

My parents called me a "whore," and when they dropped me off at the home for unwed mothers, they gave me orders to "get rid of the bastard or don't come home."

From the minute I arrived at the home for unwed mothers, everyone started to work on me to give my baby up for adoption. "You can't earn enough money to care for it properly. Who will take care of it while you work? You'll be branded as 'immoral' and no decent man will want to marry you. You owe it to the child to give it a home with two parents."

I had this drummed into my head until I finally signed the adoption papers. The very next day I changed my mind, but they said it was too late.

It's been 22 years, and every day of my life I think about that beautiful little boy I supposedly "gave away." But God knows I never gave him away. He was taken from me.

EMPTY ARMS
DEAR ARMS: Unfortunately you (and your child) were born too soon. Today, no woman is "worked on" to give up her child. In fact, counseling is available in order to help the unwed mother make a choice she can live with. And in many states, the adoption is not final until six months after the papers have been signed.

DEAR ABBY: My son is getting married, and the bride's parents are paying for the wedding. The bride's mother asked me to please keep my guest list down to 30 people because of the cost, so I did.

Now I have a lot of people mad at me because they weren't invited. We have a large family, Abby, and 30 people won't even cover all our relatives, let alone some friends we would like to invite.

I always thought the groom's side was entitled to have as many guests as the bride's, even though it's customary for the bride's family to pay for the wedding. I heard they have over 100 guests from their side. Is this fair? We know that the bride's family is not rich. Neither are we, but we would gladly help out by paying for about 50 more guests. Do we dare suggest it?

GROOM'S MOTHER
DEAR MOTHER: Why not? It's a silly, unfair, outdated custom that makes no sense today. Tell the bride's mother that you'd like to invite more people and you will gladly pay for them. How can she refuse?

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago you had a letter in your column about a man who made love with his socks on. It interested me because my husband always comes to bed with his socks on. It's no earth-shaking problem, but I find it rather annoying. I've tried to break him of the habit, but so far I haven't had much luck.

Could it be a regional thing? My husband is from Kansas.

DEBBIE
DEAR DEBBIE: Possibly. I checked with some Midwesterners and was told that the men who come to bed (and make love) with their socks on do so only during the winter months. And in the summer, they sleep in their shorts.

DEAR ABBY: This question has been on my mind for years. How can you discourage people who seem unable to talk to you without grabbing, touching or patting you? I find this very irritating.

H. IN BLUFFTON, OHIO
DEAR BLUFFTON: Most people who grab, touch and pat do so unconsciously. If your unreciprocated reaction and drawing away don't communicate your irritation, try the more direct route — the verbal one.

HOROSCOPE

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

For Friday, July 3, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY
July 3, 1981

Greater responsibilities are likely this coming year but, by the same token so are your chances for larger gains. Be cheerful regarding your duties.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Socializing with business contemporaries could prove rather lucky for you today. In a congenial atmosphere, deals might be put together that wouldn't otherwise fall. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're likely to be the one who stands out the most in any gathering today. Your warmth and good humor will draw others to you, like the flame that attracts the moth.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) The aspects continue to indicate you are fortunate in receiving benefits through others. However, what's occurring may not be totally evident now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You will make a welcome addition to any social gathering today. Don't be surprised at all the attention you may get from members of the opposite sex.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Lady Luck continues to tilt the odds in your favor concerning your ambitions. Keep aiming high. Don't settle for second best.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You have the ability today to sort out complicated situations on which friends can't get a handle. Others are likely to seek your suggestions and counsel.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Someone with whom you've had an advantageous arrangement in the past could be very lucky for you again at this time. Stay with winners.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Usually you prefer to function independently, but today your best results are likely to come from situations requiring team effort.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Larger rewards than usual are likely today from things you transform into something more useful and functional. Use your inventiveness.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Try to arrange some type of activity today that includes old friends you've not seen much of lately. Perhaps you can get together for a cookout.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Being with a sizable group could prove to be a lot of fun today, especially if you are performing the host or hostess role at your place.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your restlessness can be soothed today by selecting companions who enjoy moving around and doing different things. Avoid those who are too fond of routine.

Brain Damage Caused By Stroke

DEAR DR. LAMB — We lost my mother-in-law when she was 88. The cause of death was listed as a pontine infarct. We had never heard of it before but the hospital personnel told us it was quite common in her age group. She was a strong vital person until she was 85. She was from the old country and in her 60s she did concrete work and built a driveway.

When she was 85 she had a sudden loss of hearing in one ear. She had trouble swallowing and got weak. She often fell in spite of her quad cane. Then she was hospitalized for pneumonia and when she was recovering she had a "massive stroke to the brain stem" and died four days later. Do pontine infarcts occur often in older people? What causes them? Does the tendency run in families? Others in her family lived to be in their late 80s and 90s.

DEAR READER — It is always hard to let people who are close to us go. Apparently your mother-in-law had some problem with brain function when she first suddenly lost hearing in one ear. That was probably related to changes in the arteries to her brain — most likely fatty-cholesterol deposits that obstruct the arteries and cause strokes. A pontine infarct is simply an anatomical designation of the area of the brain that can be damaged in a stroke. This is the area where the nerve from the ear enters the brain. The brain stem is a larger area of the bottom part of the brain.

Regardless of the location of brain damage, most strokes are caused by obstruction of one of the arteries to the brain from fatty-cholesterol deposits, as explained in The Health Letter number 16-4, What You Need to Know about Strokes. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1861, Radio City Station, New York.

NY 10019. Strokes are particularly apt to occur in women over 75 and are the second most common cause of deaths in that age group of women.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 16 years old and have noticed that my breast development has been stunted. I am a male who exercises daily and I'm in excellent physical shape. My underdeveloped breast plates, as they are called, cause me great anguish and have started an inferiority complex for me. Please tell me what kind of exercise I am missing or anything that could be of some help.

DEAR READER — Those "breast plates" are the pectoralis major and minor muscles over the front of the chest. While there are some refinements to this concept their main function is to pull your arm forward and round your shoulders forward. Hold your right arm straight out to your side shoulder high. Put your left hand over the right chest muscles. Now move your right arm forward so your hand is directly in front of you. You should have been able to feel your right chest muscles contract as you make this movement.

You need to make these and other movements that swing the arms and shoulders forward against resistance. There are a number of exercise devices for this or you can go to an exercise facility and use machines to exercise your chest muscles against resistance. If you follow a proper exercise program designed for these muscles, they will enlarge. Developing these muscles also improves a person's ability to do the crawl stroke when swimming, as this stroke uses these muscles.

It doesn't look as if there is any way for South to go down at four spades. He must lose a heart and a diamond and eventually will attack clubs. The only way for him to get two club tricks is to play West for the queen and as West has that card, every South but one made four spades.

The losing South was debited 228 IMPs while the East-West opponents gathered in a 228 IMP profit.

The losing South started with three rounds of trumps while discarding a diamond and a heart from dummy. Then he led his eight of diamonds. West played the nine and dummy's 10 lost to East's jack.

East led his king of hearts. South took the ace and led a heart back. East played the queen and 10. South ruffed and now dummy's nine of hearts had become a potential winner.

South led a club, commenced with nature a while and called for dummy's king to wind up in the ash can.

His play was bad. You don't expect your opponents to give you a needless extra chance and South should have looked the gift horse in the mouth and not gone wrong in clubs. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Dentists Urged To Cut Use Of Routine X-Rays

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A national conference says dentists should stop taking routine X-rays without a specific reason because they add unnecessarily to the patient's bill and radiation exposure.

Conference Chairman Robert A. Goepf, professor of dentistry at the University of Chicago, said dental X-rays provide substantial benefits to the patient, but are overused and should be taken only when required.

"Traditionally, X-ray examinations in dentistry were done mainly on the basis of timely intervals," Goepf said. They often were done every six months or on a patient's first visit to the dentist, even before the oral examination.

"This has been taught for several decades in dental schools. Now we come to appreciate that we have to refine the use of such examinations and make it consistent with the nature of the problem that you're looking for," said Goepf.

Goepf said at Wednesday's conclusion of the three-day conference sponsored by the National Center for Health Care Technology that X-rays still are required periodically to search for hidden cavities.

Dr. Stuart C. White, chairman of oral surgery at the UCLA School of Dentistry, said some children may require X-rays more often than every 12 months, depending on the condition of their teeth and family history. But he said adults in good oral health may require them only two to three years.

White, who headed a conference workshop on the subject, said many cavities progress slowly and show no appreciable change in two to four years.

It has been estimated about half of all Americans visit a dentist each year. One recent study said about 80 percent receive X-rays.

The Food and Drug Administration reports Americans spent $730 million in 1978 for dental X-rays. The report said dental X-rays contribute only about 3 percent of the average total radiation dose to an adult's bone marrow each year, but unnecessary exposure should be eliminated.

Dr. Lauriston S. Taylor, honorary president of the National Council on Radiation Protection and Measurement, said the radiation levels used in dentistry "are so low as to pose little, if any, risk."

"Nevertheless, because any exposure to radiation might possibly cause harm, X-rays should be used only when the patient is expected to benefit."

Dr. Patricia W. Laws, professor of physics at Dickinson College in Carlisle, Pa., and a conference participant, said people "should really question having a dentist who routinely gives X-rays every six months."

The conference conclusions, which will be published and distributed widely in a few months, also called for an end to the taking of dental X-rays purely for administrative purposes, such as protection against possible malpractice charges or to aid in training students.

Studies Suggest Procedures For Breast Cancer Victims

BOSTON (UPI) — Women need not undergo radical mastectomy — the disfiguring and painful removal of a breast and underlying muscle — to be rid of small, single breast cancers, a study published today said.

If they do undergo mastectomy and they are over 50, a separate study shows they may be able to cut their chances of a relapse in half with a three drug chemotherapy regimen.

Both studies were reported in the New England Journal of Medicine. The first, a follow-up of patients operated on in 1973, was conducted by the National Cancer Institute in Milan, Italy.

The researchers found patients who underwent surgery to remove a quarter of the breast were 50 more likely to suffer recurrences than patients who underwent conventional radical mastectomies. The life expectancy of the two patient groups also was similar.

In the other study, researchers reported a combination of three specific drugs in chemotherapy reduced the recurrence of cancer two years after mastectomy by up to 64 percent in post-menopausal women. The results of the study, involving 68 institutions across the United States and Canada, are important because the greatest danger of breast cancer recurrence is two years after surgery.

Breast cancer is the leading cause of cancer deaths among American women. The American Cancer Association estimates 77 percent of all cancers discovered in women occur in the breast.

Radical mastectomies are now performed in only about 15 percent of the cases, Dr. William Wood, medical director of the Cox Cancer Center at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston, said. Seven and a half years ago, however, mastectomies were performed about half the time. They still are the prevalent form of treatment in Europe, he said.

Researchers in Milan selected 349 patients who underwent radical mastectomy — removal of the breast, underlying chest muscle and lymph nodes under the arms — in 1973. They also followed 353 women who underwent the more conservative treatment of quadrantectomy — removal of only the quarter of the breast affected by cancer — plus dissection of the lymph nodes under the arms.

All the women had cancers less than 2 centimeters — fourth of an inch — across.

The researchers found cancer returned in three mastectomy patients and one of the other patients. Their life expectancies also were similar.

"On the basis of this study, radical mastectomy appears to involve unnecessary mutilation in patients with carcinoma of the breast measuring less than 2 centimeters," the doctors wrote.

The drug study, involving 1,883 patients, found a certain three-drug combination reduced treatment failure by 64 percent in a group of women whose cancer had spread to four or more lymph nodes. The failure rate was cut by 51 percent in women of 50 whose cancer had not spread significantly.

Women under 49 were less responsive to the treatment, the study said.

The drugs were tamoxifen, a synthetic anti-estrogen which competes with estrogen in binding with cancer cells, Lphenylalanine mustard and 5-fluorouracil.

"The treatment looks promising," said Dr. Bernard Fisher, head of the National Surgical Adjuvant Breast and Bowel project, which conducted the study.

The name and address of the attorney for the personal representative are set forth below.

All persons having claims or demands against the estate are required, WITHIN THREE MONTHS FROM THE DATE OF THE FIRST PUBLICATION OF THIS NOTICE, to file with the clerk of the court a written statement of any claim or demand they may have. Each claim must be in writing and must indicate the basis for the claim, the name and address of the creditor or his agent or attorney, and the amount claimed. If the claim is not yet due, the date when it will become due shall be stated. If the claim is contingent or unliquidated, the nature of the uncertainty shall be stated. If the claim is secured, the security shall be described. The claimant shall deliver sufficient copies of the claim to the clerk to enable the clerk to mail one copy to each personal representative.

All persons interested in the estate to whom a copy of this Notice of Administration has been mailed are required, WITHIN THREE MONTHS FROM THE DATE OF THE FIRST PUBLICATION OF THIS NOTICE, to file with the clerk of the court a written statement of any claim or demand they may have. Each claim must be in writing and must indicate the basis for the claim, the name and address of the creditor or his agent or attorney, and the amount claimed. If the claim is not yet due, the date when it will become due shall be stated. If the claim is contingent or unliquidated, the nature of the uncertainty shall be stated. If the claim is secured, the security shall be described. The claimant shall deliver sufficient copies of the claim to the clerk to enable the clerk to mail one copy to each personal representative.
