Pretty Operetta

At the High School auditorium Monday night the pupils of the school, under the able direction of Miss Tift, instructor of music and drawing presented the charming little two act operetta, "Sylvia" to a select audience of Sanford's representative people.

The scene was laid in a hayfield on a Sunday, the opening act, presenting the hayfield, with the mixed chorus of girls and boys, "raking the meadow sweet with hay," while they sang, "Work with a vim," the male and female voices blending harmoniously.

One of the brightest of the choruses was "Once a Little Bluebell" by "Polly" Fern Ward and the hay-makers. Polly's sweet voice and graceful dancing adding much to the charm of the lilting song.

Ruth McDaniel as "Molly" and Fanna Reba Munson as "Dolly" were both particularly good, repeating their lines with a naturalness and accuracy, quite to the manor born.

Howland was one of the hits of the evening.

"If You Know of a Heart" as sung by Sylvia and Betty was one of the best features of the operetta. All the way through the chorus work was particularly fine, none of them better than the closing number "See the Harvest Moon is Shining."

Throughout the pretty little operetta was exceedingly good and to Miss Tift and the young students much praise is due for their excellent work and fine production.

The audience testified their appreciation by hearty applause and insistent demands for encores. Miss Tift presided at the piano. Mrs. R. C. Bower and Earl Paxton rendered several charming selections on the piano and violin that were greatly enjoyed.

The failure to secure the names of the chorists but everybody knows who they are and that they were altogether delightful, boys and girls.

French Girl Keeps Soldiers From German Clutches.

By dint of All Sorts of Courageous Ruses She Feeds and Conceals Englishmen While Teutons Occupy Place.

Paris.—The invaders would not have been so charitably disposed to a French girl had they known that for three weeks by dint of all sorts of courageous ruses she had been feeding, concealing, and keeping from their clutches ten English soldiers.

She was a servant in a girl's boarding school. When the war broke out the pupils all returned to their homes and she was left alone, for her only companion was an old deaf and partially paralyzed woman. When the Germans entered the town they went through the girls' school from attic to basement, collecting all the linen bedding they could lay their hands on.

These wounded the girl tended with the utmost devotion, in the first place, because she is tender-hearted, and in the second, because she had every reason to desire to stand well with the invaders. For her conscience was quite clear. She knew that down in the grotto at the end of the school gardens she had concealed ten "Tomnies," who had come, hungry, footsore and worn out just one hour before the Germans.

"They will be here in a moment," the English officer had said, not wishing to put the girl in danger.

"Never mind," she said, "I'll hide you somewhere, and afterwards we shall see." So she took them to the grotto. But the quarters were narrow, damp and intensely uncomfortable. Her heart bled for her proteges. Then she had an idea, the very daring of which was to insure its success. She installed her ten "Tomnies" in the unoccupied top floor of the school itself. Then came the question of the commissariat. At first she gave up her own ration to her ten refugees—but that was not enough among so many.

When the Germans, seeing her suspiciously laden basket, asked her for whom were all these provisions, she would answer, "For you wounded in the chapel." Better still, she appointed herself cook for the German ambulance, and in this capacity was able to pick up all sorts of broken victuals, so that her English were in no danger of starving.

But English soldiers do not live by food alone—they like their tobacco. Now, according to the regulations of the invaders, each inhabitant of the place had the right to buy two sous' worth of tobacco a day. She found a way to evade this regulation and to keep her ten in smokables. She organized an army of boys, who ten or twenty times a day would purchase at different shops the meager pennyworth.

But there was always the danger that the hiding place of the ten might be discovered by some German. Fortunately, their dormitory communicated by trap-doors with the ground floor of the building, and precisely with a room on that ground floor which gave on the garden. So she procured a long rope, with which she advised her prisoners to practice a sort of fire-drill. She was enthusiastic over the results.

"Just imagine," she said to her interviewer, "that my Englishmen after a few attempts were able, the whole

Only the bravery of William E. Daniel, sixteen year old son of Leo Daniel, saved the life of Warren King, 15 years of age, when the latter fell from a boat two miles from shore on Choctawhatchee bay Saturday. The two boys were accompanying Mr. and Mrs. Daniel on a trip up Choctawhatchee bay when King accidentally fell overboard. A skiff was tied behind, but young Daniel who alone witnessed the accident, could not untie the rope, so he leaped overboard with all of his clothing on. The boat was going full speed and by the time Daniel went overboard young King, who could not swim, was 200 yards in the rear, struggling in the water. Young Daniel swam to him and supported him for 15 minutes until assistance arrived.

"Orlando, the power house of prosperity." The above slogan has been adopted as the official war cry of the Orlando Board of Trade. The selection was made last evening at the regular meeting of the board, and was selected from quite a large number of slogans that were sent in to the Morning Sentinel in answer to their offer of prizes for a suitable slogan, and also for short 50-word articles on specified topics relating to the board and its work in the city.

Baby Zoe is an Orlando infant and has often amused and entertained the public here before going into her larger field. ten of them, to strap up their haversacks, get ready for all eventualities, and slide down the rope noiselessly in less than five minutes. But these desperate measures were not necessary. The Germans temporarily evacuated the place and the ten English soldiers were able to regain the allied lines in safety. They have all given her their names and addresses, and sworn that she must come to England when the war is over, where they promise her a royal welcome. One of the grateful ten is a nobleman, and a relative of King George—Lord Smith is the name given, but never mind! WOMAN ADVOCATE OF PEACE

Miss Constance Drexel, who posed especially for this photograph, is an American girl who was in France with her parents at the time war broke out. Like many other American girls and women, she immediately entered the relief ranks by nursing the wounded. In the hospital at Deauville, she saw, more vividly than can be described, the horrors of war. She saw the men whom she had nursed, and helped to snatch from the very brink of the grave, go hobbling back when discharged as cured, fearlessly and bravely, to the firing line.

The self-sacrificing American women who as ministering angels have snatched so many of the wounded men back from the grave, are looked upon by the women of Europe as the greatest possible factor in bringing about peace.

Miss Drexel is prominent in the movement for peace started by women of the neutral countries.

LAST OF JOHN BROWN'S AIDS

Follower of Famous Abolitionist Lives in Kansas and Is Hale and Robust at Eighty-Four.

Salina, Kan.—Luko F. Parsons, who has resided on a farm near Salina for fifty years, has the distinction of being the last of the survivors of all the men directly associated with John Brown and his famous border warfare, just preceding the war between the states.

Parsons left his home in Massachusetts in 1856 to join the Free Soldiers in the Kansas-Missouri border warfare, following Brown through the series of skirmishes which culminated in the famous battle of Osawatimie. He was then selected as one of the ten picked men who were to accompany Brown on his raid through Virginia; but, owing to the delay of nearly a year in completing the plans for his adventure, he left the expedition at Cleveland, O., thus missing the Harper's Ferry disaster by a few weeks.

Parsons' health at eighty-four years of age, is robust, and he is still able to do as much work as the average man. It was not until recent years that he permitted himself to talk of the John Brown affair and his connection with it. Now all of his compatriots are dead, and he is the last link connecting this tragic page in American history with the present.

TERRIER IS A "PANDHANDLER"

"Bubbles" Collected Pennies Enough to Pay the Price for His License.

Warren, Mass.—For the license of Bubbles, a dog owned by Edward W. Burns, former proprietor of the Hotel Ramdell, 200 cents were paid to Town Clerk William F. Duncan. Bubbles collected the cents himself from traveling salesmen and other guests in the hotel. He is a Boston bull terrier, six years old, and is known to every child here.

Bubbles will not be satisfied unless he is given a cent. At all times he will refuse silver. When a cent is thrown to him, he grabs it in his teeth and runs to a corner of a room, and then returns for more.

At the beginning of the year Mr. Burns' son began to save the cents received by Bubbles. The cents are on exhibition in the window of a Main street store.

Huggins Takes No Chances.

The reports of threatened Federal league raids frightened Miller Huggins of the St. Louis Nationals, and he has signed ex-Pirate Rube Robinson to a new two-year contract with the ten-day clause cut out.

FOUR BORN AT SAME TIME

Mrs. McKnight, Mother of Quadruplets, Aged 37, Is Already a Grandmother.

Redding, Cal.—Shasta county's latest, if not greatest wonder, was the birth a few days ago of quadruplets at C. O. McKnight's home, three miles south of Bellavista, where each of the four, equally divided as to sex, is making a remarkably good start. It is the belief of the physician that all will live and thrive.

The mother is aged thirty-seven and is already a grandmother of three. She was married at the age of thirteen in Texas to her present husband, who is sixty years old. Both are of healthy, hardy stock, though plural births can only be traced on the father's side, where twins have not been an exception.

There were 60 visitors at the McKnight farm home next day, in spite of the remote location. Among them were a party of newspaper men.

"I have no statement to make," said McKnight, "except that I am a surprised father. We certainly did not expect anything extraordinary."

Shasta county supervisors sent a trained nurse to the McKnight home with instructions for her to call upon the county for necessary financial aid.

PROTECTS AN INDIAN MAID

Oklahoma Judge Appoints a Guardian for Girl With a Million Dollars.

Okmulgee, Okla.—Judge Mark L. Bozarth has appointed E. W. Kimbley as guardian of the person and estate of Katie Fixco, an incompetent. She is an Indian who owns a valuable tract of oil lands in the north end of the Cushing field. Title to property worth in the neighborhood of a million dollars will be affected by the ruling of the court.

The Midco Oil company, operating on the land, holds a lease dated three years ago, given through the county court. On the day the girl became of age she gave the lease to Harry C. Denton on the theory that the first lease expired with her minority. The land was sold on the following day by her to Walter Morton, brother of her former guardian, for $23,000.

The girl appeared in court recently, and during her testimony it was shown that she did not know a word of English, that she had left school at the age of eighteen while in the third grade, and that she knew nothing of the value of money.

Sunday is Mother's Day. Remember the white flower.
 This is hotel week. Plant a hotel for father.

The war is costing England more than five millions per day.

Japan will now proceed to break up China, meaning that the U. S. will step in yet.

Beautiful rain fell this week. We could use a nice shower every day.

We do not believe in imperialism but it is almost necessary for the U. S. to take Mexico.

Seminole county is proud of Senator Donegan and Representative Lake. Both of them have ideas of their own and vote accordingly on the bills that are coming before them.

The legislature has passed the Davis bill and should now pass up all the other prohibition measures and take up some time with other laws. The Davis bill ought to be enough for this term.

A yacht club would do much in the way of securing tourists next season. If they can be assured of protection from storms the lake would have many fine yachts at anchor here all during the season. Let everyone pull for the yacht club and pavilion on the lake front.

It is interesting to note in connection with the recent meeting of the Presbytery of Florida at Sorrento that the members hardly recognized the organization. This was because of the wonderful growth. Someone raised the question: "How many ministers have we now?" and it turned out that there were forty on the roll, whereas eight years ago there were only twelve. It is one of the laws of the church that when there were thirty-six or more a double delegation may be sent to the annual general assembly with full rights and all expenses paid. Advantage of this position was gladly taken. All over Florida the Presbyterian church is making rapid and wonderful progress. It is said that the membership is now about ten thousand as against only three thousand ten years ago.—St. Augustine Record.

SAND OIL ROADS

Brick roads are all right where the traffic is heavy and there are places where nothing but brick would suffice but the brick roads laid on sand foundations and without a good curbing are going bad in many places and the idea of the sand oil road is being threshed out in many counties. The aldermen of this city are in favor of making a test of the sand oil road before laying any more brick streets or rather they are in favor of making sand oil streets in preference to the nine foot street. The Gainesville Sun has the following about the sand oil roads:

That some plan for making good and effective roads over the sand heaps in Florida must be devised sooner or later goes without saying. About all sorts of things have been tried out, and most of them have failed when it comes to the practical test.

There are those who are strong advocates of brick roads, but there is no endurance in them. The expense of up-keep is very heavy, hence they are impracticable. The trouble is that there is seemingly no such thing as a stable and enduring foundation for brick roads.

The same has to be said of asphaltum and concrete roads. The surface has the qualities requisite for a good road, but the foundation is lacking.

Then it would seem to be the best thing yet to devise some method of building roads out of the material building roads out of the material at hand and under the conditions in which those materials are found first hand. First and foremost all the time is coating of sand, just common loose shifting sand. Under certain conditions the alchemy of nature has transformed just such sand as this into the most enduring rock. Now what nature is able to do man should be able to imitate to pretty good advantage. It is not desirable that the sand on the road surface should be transformed into adamant rock, but it is very essential that the particles of sand be welded into a rigid, resilient mass which will not be hard on the feet of the draught animals and which will at the same time be yielding and resilient as the burden of the loaded wagon passes over it.

In various sections of the state they are trying out what is known as the sand oil roads, and the results have been most gratifying in many cases. The initial expense is light, the upkeep is nominal, and the wear and tear is withstood most satisfactorily, so it is stated. At any rate it is worthy a try-out under the most rigid tests, and if it does prove satisfactory as its advocates claim for it, it might be possible that Alachua county could see its way to get into the contest for the Dixie Highway, and also to construct a lot of feeders which would benefit the entire county.

LEACHBURG NEWS

Leesburg will now take her rightful place among the nations of the earth. Gilbert Leach has purchased the Leesburg Commercial and will proceed to put Leesburg on the map in black face type. Being one of the best newspaper men in the state and having one of the best counties to exploit we can look for great things from the new Commercial. The best men in the newspaper business are joining the ranks of the Florida weeklies and Leach is one among the many who would rather be a big duck in a small puddle instead of a slave on a big daily. We congratulate you, Gilbert. You have a good town and Leesburg certainly has a good man and good lady in Mr. and Mrs. Leach.

Potash May Be Cheaper

The announcement from Berlin yesterday that the negotiations between the United States and Germany for the removal of the German prohibition of the exportation of potash salts have reached the stage where a successful issue seems possible came as a bright ray of hope to many channels of trade in this country.

Quite a little potash has been coming through from Switzerland, Italy, the Scandinavian countries and Holland since the embargo was declared and which undoubtedly came out of Germany, but the quantity was not sufficient to supply local demands. The shortage had already caused considerable inconvenience and it was mainly through the continued complaint on the part of

MORE "UNION LABEL" LIES
"MADE IN SANFORD" BRAND
 Numerous instances have been reported to us of people asking union carpenters for information as to the location, existence, etc., of a novelty works plant in Sanford. The usual answer is that there is no such institution located here at the present time. THIS IS A LIE!
 There is such a plant here operated by the two best mechanics in Sanford, and their reason for lying is that they have been unable to put in force their customary policy of RULE OR RUIN.
 The owners have had nearly thirty years experience in practical mill work, contracting and building, and the lumber business and know enough about it to run their own business without advice or control of their informers, and are always ready to serve the public along any of the above lines.

The Importance of a Good City Directory

A city that has a good city directory, well supported will give the same support and prosperity to its inhabitants.

One who is looking for a location will judge wisely if he selects a city that has a good, well supported city directory.

It is an infallible evidence of intelligence, thrift and general success and prosperity, the standard of life in such communities is high.

The listing now being made by the Piedmont Directory Co., Asheville, N. C., for the new directory is being carefully done, and will give Sanford a standard publication which through the Library Exchange system of the Association of American Directory Publishers of the United States and Canada, of which the Piedmont Co. are members will find its way to many parts of the country, and in a degree help to make Sanford a more prominent and attractive spot on the map of the progressive state of Florida. Adv. 74-2tc

Between 12,000 and 15,000 barrels of limes will be shipped from the Florida keys through this season, according to estimates of local growers who declare that the crop while late will be one of the best this season has ever had. The crop movement will begin in earnest about the first of June, although within the next two weeks small consignments may begin to move out. The growers are delaying the beginning of picking because the trees are so full of bloom that the laborers in taking off the matured fruit knock off many blossoms.

The crop this year is later than the crop of 1912, 1913 or 1914, but is coming on at about the same time that crops in years prior to 1912 were usually matured. The last three years have produced unusually early limes and growers were becoming accustomed to seeing plenty of April and May limes. This year sees a reversion to type in the lime groves, however, and free movement is yet weeks away.

Book Lovers' Club

Mrs. Geo. Fox was the gracious hostess to the members of the Book Lovers' Club at the home of Mrs. Claude Herndon last Thursday afternoon and a very delightful time was enjoyed by the congenial party of friends. Quantities of cut flowers adorned the attractive rooms, adding to them a touch of beauty and fragrance. An ice cream course was served and the pleasant hours whizzed away with fancy work and happy conversation.

Delightfully Entertained

At the close of meeting of the executive board of the Woman's Club Monday afternoon the retiring members of the board and the incoming members were most graciously entertained by the president, Mrs. J. W. Dickins at her attractive home on Magnolia avenue. An enjoyable little contest, a play on the names of the various members of the board and prominent men in town was one of the pleasing features of the afternoon and created much merriment. Questions were asked such as "What is a necessary adjunct to Christmas festivities?" Holly, of course, came the answer. "What is a pleasing topographic combination?" Forrest Lake. What is a desirable worker on a farm?" Thrasher.

"A joy's name, a pronoun and a member of the family?" Davison. There were many others equally good for which, as the quickest guesser of the greatest number of names a potted fern was presented Mrs. Henry Wight, who declared the honors were shared by Mrs. Geo. Fox, to whom she in turn presented the attractive prize. Tablets and pencils were then given the guests with the request that they draw the next president of the Woman's Club. "Fish" are comparatively easy to draw so it is plainly to be seen that the bunny tribe will be the next choice of the board at least.

Bowls and vases of cut flowers were placed upon mantels and cabinets and the refreshment plates were adorned with pansies and sweet peas. Mrs. Dickins paid a pretty compliment to the retiring members of the board by placing upon their plates pansies, pansies for thoughts. To Mrs. Deane Turner fell the honor of both sweet peas and pansies. Retiring from the chairmanship of the music department she still retains her place upon the board as the first vice president of the club newly elected. A delicious salad course followed by an ice cream course was served. Assisting the hostess were Mesdames May Dickins, Geo. Fox and Miss Laura Fish. Enjoying the charming hospitality of Mrs. Dickins were Miss Laura Fish, Miss Annie Hawkins, Mesdames May Dickins, R. E. Tolar, Geo. L. Maris, A. W. Fitts, Jr. and Torheun, retiring members of the board. Those remaining upon the board and incoming members were Mesdames C. E. Walker, Henry Wight, Deane Turner, Roy Syme, W. L. Morgan, Geo. Fox, Archie Betts, L. R. Phillips, Chas. Polk and H. C. Gerrer.

New-Sew Club

The members of the Sew-Sew Club and several other friends were delightfully entertained by Mrs. F. L. Woodruff yesterday afternoon with a charming little party. Punch was served throughout the afternoon and delicious cake and cream at the refreshment hour. Enjoying the gracious hospitality of Mrs. Woodruff were Mesdames Dingee, Holly, Duloso, O. L. Taylor, McLaulin, B. A. Howard, J. S. Wilson, C. C. Woodruff, May Dickins

Delightful Social

Mrs. Augustus Frank very delightfully entertained the Ladies' Union of the Congregational church and a number of other friends on Thursday afternoon at her home on the Heights with a social in the interest of the expense fund of the Ladies' Union. A nice sum was realized from the silver offering and a thoroughly enjoyable time spent by all present. The pretty parlors were spent with charming simplicity, quantities of cut flowers of every variety being used effectively. A pleasing program of music and song was rendered throughout the afternoon. Dainty refreshments were served by Misses Albine Frank and Genie Pope.

Eastern Star

There was an attendance of 35 at the regular meeting of the Eastern Star on Tuesday evening and two interesting initiations. Mrs. S. Maxwell and M. Boyer were the candidates for initiation. Mrs. Graham of Chicago was a guest of the order. At the close of the ceremonies Mrs. Easterby and Mrs. R. L. Griffin, hostesses, served delicious refreshments and a social hour was enjoyed.

HAD NO USE FOR EDUCATION

Old Gentleman Deeply Resented the Deception of Which He Had Been a Victim.

There was a man about forty years old seated on the fence in front of the house and swinging his legs as he smoked, and as I halted and saluted him and inquired about the road ahead, he asked:

"Stranger, how you what is called an addocated man?"

"I have something of an education," I replied, as I noticed how grim he looked.

"Then I dont want nuthin' to say to you," he continued, as he settled back.

"Perhaps you are down on education?"

"Perhaps I am, sah. Yes, sah, I dont want nuthin' to do with them kind o' critters."

"Have you suffered any injury at their hands?"

"Hev I? Wall, now, you climb up yere and take a look over that field. It's bekas of eddecashun that I've broken my back and haint got no no ambishun left."

I climbed up beside him and saw that the field had been dug up in a hundred different places, as if some one had been digging graves.

"That's what I've bin at fur the last var," growled the man, as he kicked the fence with his heels to prove his feelings. "Yes, sah, I've put in ten hours a day right yere with pick and shovel for the last twelve months, and mebbe you don't wonder that I'm down on eddecashun."

"What have you been doing?"

"Diggin' fur gold, sah."

"And you haven't found any?"

"How could I when it wasn't thar' to be found? I lost feel myself gittin' dangerous when I think of it. Better pass on, stranger, befo' I break loose!"

"But tell me why you dug all those holes in this field," I persisted. "Who told you there was gold there?"

"Wall, sah, it's all a sowin' to my son, Sam. He wanted eddecashun and couldn't be denied, and I finally sent him down to Rosedale to skule. Jest as soon as he could read he cum home and told me about Captain Kidd, the pirate, and we figgered that the ole critter buried his treasure right yere. I went to diggin' fur it and kept at it till last week."

"But Captain Kidd was an ocean rover."

"Of co'se."

"And he couldn't have buried any treasure hundreds of miles inland."

"Of co'so not. That's what a critter told me as he cum along last week. He made it so mighty plain that I quit diggin' and went to waitin'."

"You—you are waitin' for some one, eh?"

"I ar, sah—waitin' fur my son Sam, who'll be home this day! He'll find me right yere as he cum along. He'll ax how the diggin' cum on, and if I've found the gold yit, and then sunthin' will utter a war whoop and light down on him. That sunthin' will be me, and befo' I'm through with that varmint of an offsprin the cause of eddecashun in this state will git so tangled up and pulverized and tled into knots that it will take twenty yars fur it to go ahead and decide an honest man!"—Washington Herald.

The Man With the Black Vandyke

CHAPTER I.

THE quivering center of all the intense agitation in Brynport was Bouncer. That energetic collic could remember no occasion so exciting as this in the Moore household.

Once, and once only, Bouncer had been able to get past old Aunt Debby. This time he caught that coat black cook with her hands full of snow white dough.

Marie, Marie of the broom and duster, black haired and red gummed, waited near, with a wide grin and moist eyes.

June.

Incessantly, was Iris Biehering, June's bosom friend.

For only a moment Bouncer was permitted to gaze upon this puzzling scene. When he sprang too near the central figure of it all, with the perfectly natural and commendable intention of leaping upon her to show his undying affection, there was a combined shriek from six women, and five of them put him out.

Well, it was a strange world, and by way of setting his mind at ease Bouncer ran six times around the house and chased a cat up a tree and exchanged good views with all the neighborhood children who hung upon the fence waiting to see the bride.

There were pink bridesmaids at every window, and a nice, regular father, gardenia and silk hatted and Prince Alberted, walked up and down the porch, looking at his watch until eternity dragged by.

"Bouncer!" June Moore, in all her important finery, stooped swiftly down and took his head between her white gloved hands and looked into his wistful eyes and touched her cheek.

What was this new world which she was approaching? No bride knows and no woman June called contentedly Ned—how he had filled her world! And how happy they were to be!

Why, they were at the chapel—the pretty little gray chapel loaded with vines. And there was Ned at a window of the Sunday school room and looking so strained and uncomfortable.

Why, here was Ned close beside her and trembling! In a mist they kneeled and said responses, and Ned put a ring on her finger.

Some one in the church was crying softly—Iris Biehering, the bosom friend. Husband Bobbie was comfortably patting her hand. There was a general dabbling of handkerchiefs.

Then the organ pealed again, and beneath the vine swung portals which June Moore had entered on the arm of her father, June Warner, on the arm of her husband, now emerged into the world of caroling birds and gay sunshine.

Then the bustle and confusion began again—the mad scramble into traveling clothes and the going away amid showers of rice and the earnest godspeeding of friends and the semibysteria of Iris Biehering, with Bouncer barking his indignant protest somewhere in the muffled distance.

Just before June came downstairs in her trim little traveling suit of blue her mother had slipped something into the hand of the daughter. It was the symbol of every woman's tragedy. It was a purse stuffed with crackling bills.

At last they were alone, launched upon the sea of life! They were in the tiny drawing room with a white toothed porter stowing things into racks and hanging things on hooks and sticking flowers everywhere.

Ned had clasped her in his arms and had covered her blushing face with kisses in that first realization, and now she sat by the window, her head pillowed contentedly upon his shoulder, and outside the world they had known up to this point in their lives was slipping past them.

"My purse!" she gasped. "Too bad!" Ned's voice was full of sympathy. "Anything in it?" "My money," she replied in concern, with all at once a panic springing into her heart.

"Is that all?" he laughed. "Well, little wife"—and he laughed again at her swift blush—"why am I here?" "I know," she faltered, "but"—She stopped, confused, and cast down her eyes at her interlacing fingers.

He studied her a moment in perplexity.

"I'm just the same as your purse, except that you can't lose me," he told her, dwelling with fond eyes upon her long lashes, her smooth, round cheeks, her red lips.

"Good work, George!" approved Ned, and, catching two bulging eyes fixed upon the roll of bills he held in his hands, Ned stripped off a dollar. "This is my letter of introduction," he observed as he passed it over.

Ned turned to June, smiling, as the porter went out of the door and took three bills from the inside of the roll.

He stuffed the bills into her clasped hands. She tried to close her hands against it with a sudden instinct which she could not fathom, tried to draw away from the money, but his fingers were the stronger, and, laughing, he kissed her and straightened up to put the balance of the money in his pocket.

the graceful lines of perfect rest, put a pink palm under her round cheek and slept straight on. Ned covered her with a cloak, kissed her cautiously on the outermost surface of her cheek and stode out to the smoker.

He was back in five minutes to see how she was resting. The pretty little bride had not the rosy flush of sleep which he had expected to see.

That troubled knitting of June Warner's beautifully arched brows had not been due to the light shining in her eyes, but to the lurid flame which had sprung up in her mind, and that flame danced itself into the figures of weird dreams.

Wonderful cookies, those! June was just reaching for one when, much to her disappointment, the familiar old kitchen was not there.

Ab, the tantalizing fragrance of fresh cookies! She was in her mother's kitchen, and old Aunt Debby, black as midnight and round as a barrel, was drawing a pan of the delicious cakes from the hot oven.

STOMACH TROUBLE FOR FIVE YEARS

Majority of Friends Thought Mr. Hughes Would Die, But One Helped Him to Recovery.

Pomeroyton, Ky.—In interesting advices from this place, Mr. A. J. Hughes writes as follows: "I was down with stomach trouble for five (5) years, and would have sick headache so bad, at times, that I thought surely I would die. I tried different treatments, but they did not seem to do me any good. I got so bad, I could not eat or sleep, and all my friends, except one, thought I would die. He advised me to try Thedford's Black-Draught, and quit taking other medicines. I decided to take his advice, although I did not have any confidence in it. I have now been taking Black-Draught for three months, and it has cured me—haven't had those awful sick headaches since I began using it. I am so thankful for what Black-Draught has done for me."

Thedford's Black-Draught has been found a very valuable medicine for derangements of the stomach and liver. It is composed of pure, vegetable herbs, contains no dangerous ingredients, and acts gently, yet surely. It can be freely used by young and old, and should be kept in every family chest. RUNAWAY JUNE
BY GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER AND LILLIAN CHESTER

Ned burned his fingers on one of the cookies, and he burned his tongue, but he was highly pleased with the taste, and he gave June some money. He patted her on the shoulder. Again she saw her mother paying Aunt Debby and putting that valuable cook approvingly on the shoulder.

In her dream June saw Ned's office, a stiff, prim place, as stolid as the elder Warner. There was a nice looking stenographer, quite obviously great friends with a nice looking young secretary, and there was a nice looking office boy. It was evidently Saturday night, for Ned presently rose from his desk and walked over to the nice looking stenographer. He handed her the envelope containing her pay, and they exchanged a frank smile and a few pleasant words. "Pretty good pay the stenographer received. She earned it," Ned handed the nice looking secretary an envelope. They exchanged a few pleasant words and a frank smile. Ned handed the nice looking office boy an envelope and laughingly squeezed the boy's chin and ruffled his hair. The boy grinned delightedly and popped the envelope into his inside pocket. Then Ned walked over to June and handed her an envelope. It was larger than the others. He bowed to her very courteously as he presented it. He spoke a few pleasant words, but did not smile frankly, and she cast down her eyes. There seemed to be a distinct understanding that she had not earned her envelope.

A poor, shivering old woman and huddled in a doorway. Ned stopped, looked at the old woman a moment and then walked across to her and handed her a coin. He was very kind about it in spite of his coin passion. He broadened his chest with the exhilaration of the good deed; then he smiled down at his wife most generously. Yes, his wife, for the old woman was gone, and June, in luxurious furs, but huddled, was in the doorway. It was she to whom he had given the coin!

A wan and tattered, plucked and hungry looking little boy stood miserably beside them, piteous appeal in his turned eyes, and held out his clawlike little palm. Ned, beaming with kindly good will, placed a coin in the outstretched palm and put his hand in benediction on the head of June, for it was she, and not the wan little boy, who stood there piteously begging.

What wonderful scene was this? A bleak, wild country with huge, strange birds flying over it and no human habitation in sight. There were human creatures, though, two of them—a big, ponderous jawed savage with matted hair who carried an enormous club over one shoulder. Behind him trailed a smaller figure, a woman with matted hair hanging to her waist. In her nose was a ring, and to this ring was attached a leather thong, the other end of which was in the man's hand. He was taking home his bride. Music, the wedding march, the little gray, ivy hung chapel at Brynport. Was that Ned coming down the aisle? Was that June just behind him? Was there a leather thong in Ned's hand? Oh! Was the other end of that thong—

There was a sudden jolt and screeching noise, a rattle and a bang and the sound of hissing steam. June Warner jumped wildly to her feet and gazed around the little compartment. There were the flowers, the boxes of candy, the scattered rice. Comprehension came to her slowly, for she was still half in her dream. The train had stopped. She snatched up her cloak, jumped up on the seat and brought down the paper bag which contained her prim little traveling hat; then she jerked open the door. In the opening she stopped with a sudden flash of memory. Ned's money, the first of his generous bounty, the first of her pay for being Ned's wife! She jerked it from her belt, threw the three bills on the seat, ran down the steps, jumped to the ground and sped across the tracks to the opposite platform. She had no idea of where she was going, but anywhere would do.

As the train started to pull out she had a mad impulse to run after it to have it stopped, to call Ned, but there was no movement in her.

Across the tracks in front of the station a man, tall, splendidly groomed, black Vandyked, stood watching her intently.

CHAPTER III.
NED WARNER, as the train pulled out from that momentous station, was in the wash room of the smoker, with a pleasant smile on his lips, making the most elaborate toilet of his existence. He was to have the honor of dining alone for the first time with his charming wife.

Thoroughly complacent, he strolled back through the car to awaken the sweetest girl in the world.

"June?" he called and turned to bend over her seat.

She was not there! He hurried out to the vestibule. Not there! And now for the first time he saw the three ten dollar bills on the seat. One of them was slightly torn; all of them were crumpled.

Frantically he rang the bell; then he rushed out to meet the white toothed porter on the way.

"Where's my wife?" he demanded.

The porter's eyes widened until they made his teeth look gray.

"Deed I don't know, boss!" he replied, as scared by contagion alone as if he had been accused of throwing the pretty little bride out of the window. "Honest to the Lord, I don't know!"

The delirious search began from that instant. In about two minutes the conductor, the brakemen, all the porters and half the passengers were searching for June Warner.

Ned, in his most lively vision of all, saw her dropping off the train, crushed and mangled beyond all recognition.

No vision, however, portrayed to him his bride slowly crossing the tracks to ward the black Vandyked man! As she approached the man gave her a sharp scrutiny, smiled and strolled across the station platform to the bulletin board. New York local was due at 4:10. An express was due at 4:20.

June Warner was helpless and bewildered. She had no money, no friends. She could not even telegraph. Why had she done this foolish thing? Her dream! She saw herself again standing in the posture of a piteous beggar and accepting Ned's gifts. She saw Ned tipping the white toothed porter a dollar, and then, with the same jovial generosity, handing her thirty. The touch of that money still burned her fingers. Foolish as her resolution might be, it was keen and real nevertheless, and might she had thrust out this question with the woman which had suddenly grown up in her: she could not make of her marriage with Ned the sacred relationship which she had held as her ideal. The black Vandyked man passed quite near her gazing at her with a smile. She walked around him.

Where should she go? Home? She could see her father and mother plying her with question upon question, driving her to tears with their worried insistence and their utter lack of understanding.

If not home where then? As if from the setting sun the answer came to her—just New York. So big and so intent upon itself that friends may dwell around the corner for years and never know.

Ned at that moment was extracting slow information from a full desk and totally dumb old woman with a cross grained disposition. Yes, she had seen a young woman get off the train at a station back there. She didn't know if the station was Farnville or not, but the girl had rice in the brim of her hat.

June Warner, alone on the station platform, had grappled meantime with the first problem of her independence. That problem had to do with the means of getting to New York, and it was concretely expressed in her beautiful little gold watch.

She Jumped to the Ground.

In the meantime Ned's train had drawn up at the next stop, and he had the station master in Farnville in a minute and was inquiring for a lonely bride.

"Why, yes," huskily shouted the station master at Farnville. "A young person of that description has been loafing around here on the platform, and she's just getting on the down local," reported the station master. "She's with a tall fellow with pointed black whiskers. He's helping her on the train."

A black Vandyked stranger, Ned almost recoiled. So that was why she had left the train!

"Stop them!" he yelled. But the phone was dead. Station masters are busy people.

A train thundered in—a down train. Ned looked at the bulletin board. The New York express. It arrived in New York at the same time as the local. The first passenger to board that train was a perspiring faced young man, swinging four pieces of white ribboned luggage.

June, paying but little attention to the man who had helped her, turned nervously into the car, a day coach, and viewed the interior with despair. In that coach there were only two passengers, a man and a woman, sitting together.

"Would you like to buy a watch?" invited June in her sweetest voice as she confronted the rigid woman and held out her merchandise.

"No," returned the woman without moving a muscle. Only her feather wobbled. The man cast at the merchandise a look of contempt.

"It's a very nice watch," urged June. "It's a solid gold case and I don't know how many jewels. I only need money enough to get to New York and hire a taxi. Then I must find some work."

The black Vandyked man's eyes lighted. "I don't want it," observed the woman looking straight ahead while the man's glance of contempt strayed from the merchandise to the vendor.

"Very well," nodded June, and a grain of rice fell from the brim of her little blue hat and bounced in the right woman's lap.

The woman turned sharply, then she half rose and looked at the top of the hat. There was more rice on it.

"Let me see that watch," she said idly. One lid contained a picture of June and her dog and the other the date of the girl and her name and address.

"How much do you need for this?" She wanders about $100 in my pocket. This was from the pale faced conductor, who was so glib and so full that he was an offense in our way of life, but his eyes were full of twinkles.

The rigid lady snatched the watch shut and turned to her husband "Dan." It did not seem possible that her voice could take on a wheedling tone, but it did. "I want $100."

The man turned to her with cold disdain. He produced $100 from a tight bound wallet, and she took it, stuffing it into her pocket. She had a sense of standing before Ned's generous bestowal.

The runaway bride was seated by herself and was peacefully given the discomfort of knowing that the man was grumbling at the woman incessantly for having bought the watch. The black Vandyked man went over to them and she saw him pay some money, and then he came back to June with the watch in his hand.

"Of course you won't permit me to present you with this?" he pleasantly observed. "If you care to send for it later, however, I will be very kind indeed to give you my card."

"Thank you," she accepted, and, taking the card, put it in her belt. "You are very kind."

It was not until they were nearing the station in New York that he spoke to her again.

"Pardon me," he said, bending over her. "If I can be of any service to you on your arrival I shall be very happy indeed."

"There is nothing, thank you," she replied, smiling up at him. "You are very kind."

At that particular moment the New York express overtook the local and slowly forged ahead, and Ned Warner, peering feverishly into every passing window, saw the suave, black Vandyked stranger bending gracefully over his wife, and June was smiling up at him. Then Ned, against his will, passed on.

The express, however, was delayed a moment, and the local pulled in ahead of it. Ned was the first passenger out of the express, and he landed on the platform just in time to see the Vandyked man and June going through the gate side by side. Ned rushed after them, but it was not until he reached the Vanderbilt avenue stairway that he saw them again. June was darting through the door and just behind her was the man. He was smiling. With a rush Ned rounded the balustrade and went up three steps at a spring. He arrived only in time to see June speeding away in a taxi cab and to see the black Vandyked man starting after her in another. He jumped into a third one and shouted, "Chase them!"

"Hold on there!" gasped a breathless voice, and a panting porter piled Ned's white ribboned luggage on top of him. Away through the tangled traffic, across Forty-fourth street and up Fifth avenue rushed the three taxis at break-neck speed.

The Man Gave Her a Sharp Scrutiny.

AN ARTISTS' FESTIVAL FOR SANFORD PEOPLE

FINE ATTRACTIONS WILL BE HERE DURING THE WINTER SEASON

Sanford should have some good entertainments during the coming season and despite the fact that the last Chautauqua was not successful from a financial point of view the good people of this city are of the opinion that this class of entertainment was well worth the money spent and another season would be successful.

In order to investigate a proposition of good entertainments for the season a meeting of the ministers of the city and several other business men was called at the study of Rev. Hyman, pastor of the Baptist church yesterday morning. Those present were Rev. Steinmeyer, Rev. Hyman, Rev. Strong, Rev. Brownlee, C. R. Walker, B. F. Whitner, Prof. Ezell, Jno. D. Jenkins, Mrs. Terheun, H. C. DuBose and R. J. Holly. Mrs. Versey of Arcadia representing the Southern Chautauqua Bureau of Gainesville was also present and presented a proposition at the meeting in regard to attractions.

It was decided to form an organization and investigate the proposition of a list of attractions for the season and if the people of Sanford wanted another course the matter would be arranged.

The following officers were elected: C. R. Walker, president; B. F. Ezell, George Hyman and R. J. Holly, vice presidents; H. C. DuBose, secretary; B. F. Whitner, treasurer. The officers, the ministers of the city, Mrs. Terheun, Mrs. Geror and Mrs. Phillips of the Woman's Club will form the executive committee and arrange for the list of attractions later.

The entertainment will be known as the Artists Festival and the program will include some of the best attractions to be obtained.

That the actions of the committee will meet with the approval of the people of this city is assured and the future announcements will be made in a few weeks.

Stonewall Jackson Triplett

Stonewall Jackson Triplett, who went to Kissimmee seven years ago with eleven cents was here as one of a delegation of prominent citizens of St. Cloud looking after the city charter. Trip was one of my printers when I had the state printing and was getting out the Sun, and he could talk more near anarchy and chew more tobacco than any man I had seen up to that time or since. He still chews tobacco.

When trip landed in Kissimmee he went to work in the Valley-Gazette office. Looking the town over carefully, Trip, who could always think when cold sober, saw great opportunities and few reaching for them, so he decided to shake the persimmon tree to himself. Up to that time the only use Trip had for a dollar was to liquidate its purchasing power, but when he suddenly saw its fascinating power to annex corner lots he got busy and by trading around and keeping the dollars working all the time, grabbing more corner lots.

I got off the train at Kissimmee one day about three years after Trip arrived and it being a fine day I saw my old friend rigged out in fashionable summer suit, his proud bosom glittering and fluttering with ribbons and wearing a cane.

As we walked from the depot to the court house square, where the fair was going on, I found out why Trip wore the cane—he used it to point out the city lots he owned, and others he had his eye on or an option on. I also found that Trip was president of the board of trade, member of the business men's get together club, and mentioned for county commissioner, mayor and the legislature. Truly a most amazing example of the way a man with brains can get there if he drops foolishness. Now Trip lives at Naxcoose and edits the St. Cloud Tribune. He has his man bring his auto around to the front steps in the mornings, crank it for him and hand him his gloves as he seats himself at the wheel for the six mile spin to the office for his four hours' daily labor. Trip sleeps in the afternoon. Claude L'Engle, in his Sidlights from Tallahassee.

Mother's Day Exercises

The Mother's Day service at the Methodist Sunday school last Sunday morning was very interesting and impressive. It was regretted there were not more there, but really more than were expected, owing to the inclement weather, were in attendance.

The following program was rendered:

Song, The Promise Made to Mother—Julia Laing.

The Commandment with Promise—Honor thy father and thy mother that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee—By the School.

Song—My Mother's Bible—By four girls.

Scripture Readings—Admonitions to the Young: Prov. 1:8; Prov. 19:26, Prov. 23:22.

Supt. Mettinger read Dr. Jarvis' tribute to Mother.

Mother

O mother, thou hast the grace, purity and beauty of the lily! Thy love is as genial as the sunshine And as sweet as the fragrance of the carnation We wear in thy honor! Thy charity is as broad as the fields In which the flowers grow! Thou art as constant as the stars! All that is good and true and beautiful in the universe Is gathered up in thy life! Thou art of all creatures most like God.

And yet thou hast the human heart Which gives the largest sympathy with human kind! The little one thou didst enfold in thine arms of love. Upon whose brow thou didst shower thy kisses.

Whose tears thou didst wipe away, Whose heart thou didst soothe in the time of trouble with thy melodies Whose early footsteps thou didst direct in paths of virtue and peace, Thine own child may throw away thy love and wander into far-off climes.

But thou dost follow him still, even to the brink of hell!

And it has not been recorded that any prodigal ever returned.

To his mother to be repulsed. He may break her heart, but he can not exhaust her love. He may deny her, but she will not deny him.

Song—My Mother's Prayer—By Men, Women, Mrs. Steinmeyer's class and school.

Closing Prayer—Rev. Steinmeyer.

Entire Family Drowned

Jacksonville, May 11.—Mrs. O. H. Johnson, wife of Dr. O. H. Johnson, a prominent physician of this city, and his three children drowned Sunday night when their automobile plunged into the St. Johns River and Dr. Johnson and Mrs. J. H. Bland and two daughters had a narrow escape from death, being rescued from the river just in time to save their lives.

The Johnson party had spent the day at Atlantic Beach and were on their way home, having entered the ferry at South Jacksonville. Just as the boat was approaching the landing on this side of the river Dr. Johnson left the car and went to the front where he cranked his machine. In some manner he had left the machine in gear and when the engine started the car jerked ahead knocking him overboard while the car plunged through the heavy chains and went into the river.

The car took its plunge as a cry was heard from one end of the vessel and lines were thrown overboard to the party, Dr. Johnson and others succeeding in rescuing Mrs. Bland and daughters but were unable to save his wife and children. One baby girl, about five years of age was taken from the river and the pulmotor put into action, but she could not be resuscitated. The bodies of Mrs. Johnson and the other two children, aged two and four are still in the water.

Mrs. Cushing, Mrs. M. A. Smith, Mrs. J. A. Clark and Mrs. Bauknight, accompanied B. G. Smith to the city yesterday from Oviedo. Mrs. Bauknight is from Leesville, S. C., and is the guest of her cousin, Mrs. Cushing.

FLORIDA LEGISLATURE WILL STAND BY WILSON

OTHER INTERESTING NEWS OF THE DOINGS OF OUR BUSY LAW MAKERS DIRECT FROM THE CAPITAL CITY OF FLORIDA

The following resolution was introduced in the house of representatives Monday morning by Messrs Anderson of Escambia and Dawson of Hernando:

"Whereas, The English steamship Lusitania has been torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine and the lives of many American citizens were lost; and,

"Whereas, This action on the part of Germany has caused serious international complications and the President of the United States is now awaiting crystallization of public opinion before taking action thereon; now, therefore, be it Resolved by the house of representatives, the senate concurring, That the legislature of the state of Florida, although favoring peace, if same is consistent with the preservation of our national honor, nevertheless, on account of the implicit confidence we have in Woodrow Wilson, we will endorse any action he may see fit to take in the premises."

Speaker Hardee took the floor against this proposition and the same was voted down.

Rigid screen laws will be enforced in this state during the present summer months. The senate bill drafted by the Hotel Commissioner was passed the house and it is expected that it will become a law with the Governor's signature.

The bill would make it a misdemeanor for any person, firm or corporation to operate any hotel, boarding house or restaurant or lunch counter without keeping all doors, windows and other similar openings in the dining rooms and kitchens and passage ways between the same and hallways leading there-to screened; to sell or expose for sale for consumption in the raw state, on which may be consumed without further cooking, at meat shops, butcher shops, markets, grocery stores, fruit stands, bakeries or other place where food is exposed for sale without keeping such screens properly protected by screens and to operate any dining or buffet cars without having same properly screened.

This week will be given over in the senate to consideration of insurance bills and measures. Senators today declared they know nothing about any of them as yet, and will give close scrutiny, at least close enough to enable them to understand what they are voting for. They are nearly thirty of these insurance bills and if the attention is paid that is promised, at least four days of the week will be covered by them alone.

Then comes the county division bills, half a score nearly are proposed and the work of equalizing feeling and results and squaring things with the pros and cons will take up several days.

The most important matter and the one creating the widest interest in Representative Woods house bill No. 555, placing all county officials on a salaried basis. This is scheduled for reconsideration in committee today, with the unique feature of having been favorably considered by the same committee several weeks ago and having been carried around in a representative's pocket instead of having been filed with the bill clerk.

Hundreds of telegrams and letters began to pour in and the bill was this week asked to be recommitted, that delegations opposed might have an opportunity to be heard by the committee. The bill proposes to place all county officials, sheriffs and clerks included, on a salary basis and to take effect Jan. 1, so as not to affect any man now in office. Dozens of representatives have expressed a fondness for the bill, as it will result in a saving to the people and state of large sums of money, but the opposition from county officials is certainly great, as thereby they will, many of them, be deprived of the enormous fees they have been collecting annually.

Late Samples of Idiotic Legislation

That legislators of several states are busying themselves by framing idiotic laws is amply proven by a list recently compiled by an Oklahoma newspaper. It is pleasing to note that, with the single exception of Texas, none of the southern states is included. A portion of the list follows:

Kansas—Law to prohibit the use of face powder, hair dye or bleach, the piercing of ears and wearing of ear rings.

Colorado—Laws to compel chickens to go to roost before 7 p. m. daily, providing that bulls driven along the road at night shall wear lights.

Massachusetts—Bachelors to pay annual tax of $5. Prohibiting the wearing of whiskers by doctors and dentists.

Nebraska—Laws compelling the National guard to do ninety days' work each year on the roads and bridges of the state. Requiring dealers in stock food to pay a license of $25 per annum.

Texas—Compelling church goers to leave their artillery on the outside of church building.

Illinois—Forbidding the giving of tips to garbers, porters, hat snatchers, etc. Taking bachelors 30 years of age $50 per annum.

Minnesota—Laws providing that lumberjacks shall be furnished with individual bath tubs.

North Dakota—Law establishing uniform thickness of sleigh runners.

It is just this sort of stuff that cultivates disrespect for law and keeps the question of individual rights continually agitated. People respect laws that have intelligent purpose behind them, but they have little respect for freak legislation of any character. Laws of this character tend to lessen respect for really good enactments.—Pensacola Journal.

House Did Not Concur

Tallahassee, May 10.—The house of representatives this morning refused to pass a resolution which expressed sentiment favoring peace, but which informed President Wilson that the senate was ready to back him in the action that might grow out of the loss of American lives through the sinking of the American steamer Lusitania. Believing that any such expression at this time would only serve to "Rock the boat" Speaker Hardee took the floor of the house to oppose it after its introduction jointly by Anderson of Escambia and Dawson of Hernando. Seeing that there was a possibility of the resolution meeting defeat and believing that it should have the unanimous support of the house, Mr. Hernando after considerable debate asked that the resolution be withdrawn.

Big Bank Merger

On Saturday last the State Bank of Florida and the Atlantic National Bank of Jacksonville were merged into the Atlantic National Bank with the following officers:

Edward Lane, president; F. W. Hoyt, vice president; T. P. Denham, vice president; W. C. Croom, vice president; D. D. Upchurch, vice president; D. K. Getherwood, cashier.

BUT WILL NOT PLUNGE AMERICA INTO WAR AT THIS TIME

Washington, May 11.—It is generally believed that the President will express denunciation of the Lusitania's torpedoing as inexcusable under the laws of the nations and humanity in the policy he adopts. The extent of the President's action is still undetermined. He is expected to refer to the Lusitania's sinking in addressing a meeting of four thousand naturalized Americans at Philadelphia this afternoon, although he will not definitely divulge the United States' course.

The President will probably present the ideas of the proper United States policy to his cabinet tomorrow. It is certain he will not call an extra session of Congress and this indicates that there is no probability of the United States entering the European conflict now. The severance of diplomatic relations with Germany and the withdrawal of Ambassador Gerard without the formal severing of relations is suggested as showing the American public opinion to Germany.

Washington, May 11.—Count Bernstorff, the German ambassador, called on Secretary Bryan today and expressed "deep regrets that the events of the war had led to the loss of so many American lives." After a half hour conference between the ambassador and the secretary a statement to that effect was given out by mutual agreement. While the statement does not specifically mention the Lusitania disaster it was known that the two officials talked of it. It was the ambassador's first visit to the state department since the sinking of the liner.

Secretary Bryan received him and immediately greeted him cordially. The only response from the ambassador to questions after the conference was that he had made no appointment with President Wilson.

The statement given out was interpreted by officials as meaning that the ambassador expressed regret not only at the loss of the life on the Lusitania but for the Americans lost in the torpedoing of the American steamship Gullight and one American boat on the Falaba.

Dixie Highway Meeting

For the avowed purpose of getting the Dixie Highway routed through south Florida, an organization known as the Florida Central Highway Association was formed Saturday at Kissimmee. A committee has been appointed to draft a constitution and bylaws. A permanent organization will be perfected in Orlando June 10.

Nine counties were represented at the meeting in Kissimmee. They are Hillsborough, Polk, DeSoto, Ocala, Seminole, Orange, Volusia, Dade and Putnam. Hillsborough was represented by T. Ed. Brayn of this city.

Factions from Jacksonville and Palatka put up a fight to get the highway through those cities, but the other delegates being in the majority defeated their efforts. The surviving plan is for a highway leading through Lake City, Gainesville, Ocala, Orlando, Bartow, Arcadia, Okeechobee City and Kissimmee and from Kissimmee eastward to the East Coast of the peninsula.

DeSoto county through its delegates pledged 42 miles of road, and Ocala pledged 5 miles, and promised to pave also from the Orange county line with brick, to the Polk county line.

Ed. Scott of Arcadia, H. C. Stanford of Kissimmee and Mr. Holbrook of Orlando were appointed delegates to the highway convention which meets in Chattanooga, June 20. All boards of county commissioners in counties traversed by the proposed route are urged to send delegates also.
