Drugs In Schools A County Problem

By JOE DESANTIS Herald Staff Writer

"It's the most untreated, treatable it's not just a problem in the schools, it's a problem throughout society."

That's how Torn Roll, the Seminole County school system's drug education counselor, feels about part of a report released this week that indicates more and more high school students are moving away from marijuana use toward heavier use of amphetamines and other pills.

In testimony delivered before the U.S. House Foreign Affairs Committee this week on illegal drug use, William Pollin, director of the National Institute on Drug-Abuse, joined law-enforcement officials in confirming that more high school seniors are using pills instead of marijuana.

That testimony is part of a yearly study done by the University of Michigan," says Roll, "It's only part of the whole study and involves only seniors

"What it doesn't reflect," he says, "isthat many students seriously involved with drugs drop out of school long before they reach their senior year."

Two years ago the county school system conducted its own druginformation survey. Roll says an updated survey is on the drawing board for the next school year and will most likely reflect some of the changing trends in drug use at the elementary, middle school and high school levels.

He says the intent of the 1980 survey was to identify data that could be used in formulating stronger, more effective efforts to deal with school-related drug problems.

The random survey, conducted in grades 6 to 12, revealed the degree of marijuana use, location of use, frequency of use and knowledge of drugs,

Two of the more surprising statistics in the survey show that 46.6 percent of students in grades 6 to 8 and 38.7 percent

Roll says he feels that when a new survey is done during the next school year, the results will reflect a change in the drug preference of students.

"Right now, in my opinion, the biggest December. drugs going are Quaaludes and cocaine," With Florida having a major illegal drug trafficking problem, Roll says, the availability of drugs in the community is not a problem for users, and neither is the high cost of cocaine. "Kids get together and bankroll a buy, then they split it," be says. "Think back to when you were in high school. Usually together, and if kids get in groups of four general public or five, cocaine isn't so expensive for them to buy."

Despite the high volume of drug traffic in the state, Roll feels that local students are neither behind nor ahead of the nation in the use of what he terms "major mood-modifying drugs."

As a result of an earlier survey, three separate committees were formed to Students in grades 6 to 12 also said in address the drug problem at the elementary, middle school and high school levels. Each committee includes a parent, a school principal, and representatives from health and lawenforcement agencies.

The formation of the committees, in turn, led to the formation of the Seminole County Drug Awareness Task Force last

"At first we had a lot of input to the task force from a lot of different areas." says Roll. "But a lot of the people involved in the task force also were involved in many of the self-help groups and kind of spread themselves a little

Crime Composite

Identi-Kit Helps Police In Search For The Criminal

Herald Staff Writer

You have just become a crime statistic Someone has mugged, robbed, assaulted, raped or committed some other bemous crime against you. You are the victim of crime.

So what do you do? While the first thought that comes to your head may be to take the matter into your own hands and avenge yourself, area law enforcers take a dun view of such action. So you go to your local police department, file a report and give the police a description of your attacker.

That's where the work of the police delective comes into play. But he wasn't there - at the scene of the crime. How does he know whom to look for and arrest for the crime?

"Our information is only as good as the victim can describe it to us" says Ray Bronson, an eight-year veteranof the Sanford Police Department, assigned for the last three years to the detective division.

"We try to come up with a composite, a sketch of the subject, based on what the victim describes to us," he notes. "That's not always easy, because people sometimes go blank and all they can remember is that gun pointed at them or the knife the guy was carrying. Sometimes they only remember that he wore a hat or she had blonde hair." In an experiment to determine how accurate the police composites are, Police Sgt. Herb Shea, assistant to Chief Ben Butler, described this reporter to Bronson.

Bronson, using the Identi-Kit (a collection of facial feature transparencies manufactured and distributed by the Smith & Wesson Corp.), then composed what he calls an "average-base, white female face." Then, after receiving further description, he added various other features to the composite in hopes of arriving at a suitable likeness. (In an effort to come even closer to an actual likeness, Bronson was allowed to see the reporter briefly.)

Moments later, with the help of a few other discerning detectives looking over his shoulder. Bronson completed his composite.

"You have high cheekbones that are not adequately portrayed here," he said. "But with an artist, which we utilize occasionally, we could develop. Overall, though, it is un average likeness.

"When I interview someone like a rape victim," Bronson continued. "I take them into a room away from everyone else so they won't be distracted and tell them to relax and to the best of their ability tell me, 'About how old was be?' How tall? What size build?' While they are talking I try to put together, using the Identi-Kit, a composite to get a general idea of the average person they are describing."

Bronson added that it is virtually impossible to come up with a composite of the subject "that would be like a photograph" but that if the victim can remember a lot composite are improved.

"After I get the base of an average look, say about 25 to 30 years old, about 6 feet tall and of medium build," he continued, "I show them the composite and they may say, No. the nose should be wider, or the eyes are too small or the hair was parted differently.' Then we can adjust it to come as close to the right look as possible."

Once a composite of the suspect is made, copies of the drawing are distributed to law-enforcement personnel and, at times, the media, in the hope of "someone seeing it, recognizing it and calling to tell us about it," Bronson said.

He notes that his department has two certified Identi-Kit experts, including detective Karen Reynolds and himself. Both have undergone extensive training in the use of the kit through courses given at the Seminole Community College,

"Our success rate with composites is about 50-50," Bronson says. "The instructor at the college where we were trained in the use of the kit also fold us that there have been cases where composites were used in court and, as a result, convictions were made."

in an effort to help police and other law enforcers apprehend crime suspects, area banks and convenience-store personnel are initiating training programs to help their employees remember more things about the burglars, robbers and attackers.

targets of criminals, and they have started training programs which help employees key in on certain attributes of the subject. That helps us develop a better composite." Bronson says.

"Banks and convenience stores seem to be repeated

He adds that his department has begun using hypnosis to help the victims of crime "remember things about the crime that they may otherwise have forgotten.

"Hypnosis is being used also in Orange County and by Orlando police with a great deal of success," be notes. "It's proving to be a very helpful tool for us."

Remembering The Confederate Veterans

Herald Stall Writer

In the spirit of a determined group of Georgia women who began the tradition in 1866 in Atlanta, members of the Norman de Vere Howard Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy (UDC) will observe Confederate Memorial Day on Monday by decorating the graves of the Confederate veterans here. Confederate Memorial Day is commemorated in Florida, Georgia, and Mississippi on April 26, while North Carolina observes it May 10 and Louisiana June 1.

In 1866 the Civil War had been over for a year, the Confederate States of America was no more and the South was destitute. Richmond, the capital, was occupied, Atlanta a tangle of rubble, and the South was numb with a sense of defeat.

But the spirit survived and was personified in the group of women who tidled up Atlanta's Oakland Cemetery and gathered wood to make wreaths. Working with the remnants of local leadership, they issued this announcement: "In behalf of the ladies of Atlanta we request the merchants close their doors tomorrow, April 26, for the purpose of decorating the graves of Confederate soldiers."

One hundred sixteen years later, the War Between the States is ancient history to most, but some still pause to remember the South as it was and the valiant young men who fought and died for the Confederate cause.

Each April the local UDC chapter pays a special tribute to its sponsor, the late Sanford physician Dr. Norman de Vere Howard, in honor of whom the chapter was named. A red and white floral arrangement and Confederate flag are placed on his grave in Evergreen Cemetery. The granite monument reads, "Norman de Vere Howard, Soldier-Physician, Born March 29, 1842, Washington, D.C., died Jan. 21, 1923, Sanford, Fla. Served in Co. 1, 33rd Regiment, Stonewall Brigade, CSA, 1861-

There are 54 veterans of the Civil War buried in Sanford and Ovledo cemeteries, according to Mrs. L.D. Hastings, secretary and publicrelations chairman for the chapter. Their graves are decorated each year with a Confederate flag on Confederate Memorial Day. "We decorate these graves as a tribute to all the men who fought in the War Between the States," she says.

This year the chapter has a problem, and Mrs. Hastings isn't sure they'll be able to decorate all the graves. Mrs. W.B. Kirby had been in charge of this task for many years and knew exactly where each grave was located, Mrs. Hastings explains, but she died in January and no one has been found to take her place. The man at the cemetery who knows the locations and could guide them is in bad health this year and unavailable.

There are about 25 members in the chapter, ranging in age from 20 to 85. There have been several deaths in the ranks of the group in the MIAMI (UPI) - More than 30 demonstrators picketed the Krome Ave. Refugee Detention Center Sunday to show their sympathy for Haltlan women engaged in the 10th day of a hunger strike almed at winning their freedom.

Carrying signs calling for "Justice for Haitlans" and an end to "concentration camps," protesters marched in a circle along an access road leading to the Everglades facility 18 miles west of Miami.

A dozen wary Border Patrol agests, feering a repeat of a rock and bottle-throwing meior last December, would not let them closer.

Inside the detention center, 300 yards away, about 20 Haitian women continued a fast that has left at least seven weak, dehydrated and taking dextrose intravenously.

The women are fighting for their immediate release from the compound while decisions are made on their requests for political asylum. Sunday's demonstration was organized by the Haitian

Another demonstration is planned for next Saturday as part of a stepped up campaign to pressure the federal government to free detained Haltlans.

Shane Rawley, who relieved Rudy May to open the sixth, improved his record to 1-8 with three innings of scoreless relief. In other games, Baltimore nipped Chicago 2-1, Boston edged Toronto 5-4 in 12 innings, Kansas City beat Cleveland 6-3, Milwaukee clobbered Texas 11-6, California topped Oakland 3-1 and Seattle clipped Minnesota $4 in 11 innings.

Rightists Rule In El Salvador

El Salvador's clean election has been dragged through the smoke-filled rooms of political infighting. Christian Democrats, who won the most. votes, were edged out in the post-election scramble by a coalition of rightist parties. The man most likely to be chosen president is Jose Rodriguez Porth. He is a former foreign minister and a member of the ARENA party led by Roberto d'Aubuisson. The Christian Democrats are expected to receive two or three, out of 15, Cabinet posts. The key interior ministry, which controls the security police, and the agriculture ministry, which administers land reform, are expected to go to the right wing.

Although America sponsored the elections, it is difficult for Americans to understand how Napoleon Duarte, the moderate who won a 40 percent plurality, lost to the extremist, d'Aubuisson. The technical reason is that in a parliamentary system a coalition which puts together a majority defeats a party with the largest single share. But there are other compelling reasons. The liberal and leftist parties did not participate in the election, because of fears of death. Some voters showed their support for these parties by handing in blank ballots. But guerrillas who opposed the election process received a blow from the majority who turned out in record numbers to support democracy.

Thus the election weakened both the Christian Democrats and the guerrillas, while strengthening the right wing. This is bad for El Salvador and bad for America's relationship. The right-wing parties ruled El Salvador for generations and got the country into the mess it's in now. They are against land reform and they support a military victory over the guerrillas. D'Aubuisson is linked to death squads and to the assassination of Archbishop Romero.

The United States finds itself in the position of having helped legitimize a government which opposes U.S. policies. America is sending a large number of weapons and training Salvadoran troops. Will American soldiers eventually be called in to fight for the right-wing Salvadoran government?

America has three alternatives:

It can support the right-wing government and hope it can influence it toward moderation. This is chancy at best. If the right wing is more committed to a military solution than to reform, there is little hope for creating a stable economic and political climate for democracy.

The United States can cut off aid. If this happens, or if the rightists reject aid to pursue bloody attacks. America runs the risk of having a leftwing guerrilla army coming to power. A military victory for the guerrillas will create a much more radical government than if they are brought in by negotiation.

The United States can initiate regional negotiations with all parties to bring a peaceful resolution to the conflict. This also is chancy, but it offers a means of halting the violence while coming to terms with Cuban and Soviet interference. Fidel Castro has told American officials that he is willing to stop supporting guerrilla movements if America stops its threats against Cuba. Four out of five Salvadoran guerrilla groups say they see no hope of military victory for either side and are willing to negotiate. Mexico favors a negotiated settlement and has offered to act as go-between.

Salvador's election showed a grass-roots demand for peace and democracy. The rightist government created in smoke-filled rooms may soon burst into fire. Regional negotiations are the only hope of putting out the flames.

During those years there has not been a problem with lack of candidates. Whether a candidate is qualified is a subjective thing that winds up with the voters making that decision.

As each city grew, new areas of residents were living in their neighborhoods. And who better can understand a neighborhood's problems than those living there?

The prospect of change is often met with trepidation. And most often the fears concerning change are just that - fears.

With State Sen. Nathan "Pete" Skinner's announcement that he is no longer interested in a state congressional district, the Florida House and Senate may be able to settle their differences on congressional reapportionment. Seminole County's Republican State Rep. Bobby Brantley of Longwood, however, has heard a different story.

Brantley said he has heard that former Attorney General and Democrat Bob Shevin, who lost out to Graham in the Democratic primary for the governorship four years ago, is again considering seeking the job. And, Brantley sald, the talk is that Skinner is Shevin's choice

It sounds a bit far-fetched, but no one can ever tell in an election year what may happen. Speaking of Brantley, his father has been very ill after suffering a number of strokes and is

Beware Of Unilateral Disarmers

The radical movement in America is giving full support to the Soviet Union's effort to weaken U.S. and allied defenses against Witness the "Open Letter To The American People" published in the Atlanta Constitution and, presumably, other newspapers by a group of well-known, hardcore radicals.

The group includes actor Edward Asner of the Lou Grant TV series, who supports the Marxist revolutionaries in El Salvador; Coretta Scott King, president of the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Non-Violent Social Change; J.H. O'Dell, veteran leftist political activist; Dr. Jerome B. Wiesner of the Massachusetta Institute of Technology; and William Winpisinger, president of the International Association of Machinists and an avowed socialist.

The "Open Letter" is worthy of close attention. It calls for actions that are favored by Moscow and promoted by the Soviet negotiators at the Geneva arms talks. If implemented, the proposals would move the United States a long way towards unilateral

For example, the signers of the Open Letter want the United States and its NATO partners to suspend deployment of new missiles in Western Europe. They don't mention removal of the massive missile systems the Soviets have aimed at the NATO countries. They call for a ban on testing of all new U.S. defenses systems, including the MX missile, cruise missiles and the B-1 bomber. They urge an immediate halt of production of nuclear materials for weapons.

These would be unilateral actions on the part of the United States. In other words, the U.S. would be disarmed in the face of Soviet cary might which is growing every day.

The authors of the Open Letter charge that the "Reagan politics of fear" are driving the arms race forward. There hasn't been an arms race in the past 10 years only one runner, the USSR. In that period, U.S. defense forces deteriorated while the Soviets developed and deployed one new weapons system after another.

The Open Lertter is full of misstatements such as that "ever-higher inflation" poses more of a threat than any foreign power. In point of fact, inflation declined this year.

Undoubtedly, a number of Americans will be taken in by the spurious arguments advanced in the Open Letter. They will send money, as requested, to the Fellowship of Reconciliation and the American Friends Service Committee, as the sponsors of the advertisement recommend. Every dollar sent for this cause contributes to the undermining of the free world's defense policies and aids the Soviets in attaining their goal of maintaining military superiority while reducing the defense capabilities of nations that are determined to remain free.

The victims of such open letters are the naive who don't understand that unilateral disarmament is the posture that Moscow seeks to impose on the United States by a massive, international "peace" campaign.

Those who urge that the United States lay down its arms knowingly or unknowingly work to create a condition wherein America has no more freedom than Poland and other captive nations.

Great Deficit Battle

This is the time for steady-as-you-go on the part of the Reagan administration.

The president is politically serene, believing in his economic game-plan, with its tax-cut centerpiece. But the crunch is on, as the long-term opponents of that economic game-plan go down to the wire with Reagan. The economic stimulants of the tax-rate cuts have yet to be felt dramatically in the economy for several reasons, but they will be

First of all, most people will experience the tax relief just about now, as they deal once again with the IRS. How will they behave, with the extra bucks they would not otherwise have? Reagan is convinced that savings, investment, and stimulative purchases cars, homes - will surge.

But there are two serious factors that are drags on the resurgence.

The first is the large number of people who are in managerial and bureaucratic posts and who do not desire to invest and profit. We have a a large class of people in important posts in the economy whose main motivation is merely to maintain their jobs. They are not part of the Reaganite Sunbelt profit making mentality. As the great ship of the economy tries to pick up speed, they are merely ballast. A second factor is national mood, as crucially created by the national media. Reagan's economic policy is based upon a fundamental and justified optimism, but the media have assiduously created an atmosphere of gloom and doom. No one who has just listened to network television news is going to rush out and invest or buy a home. The stress there is on unemployment and interest rates, not on the crucial decline in inflation.

You must have noticed it: Many of those in Congress who are now denouncing high budgetary deficits are also some of our very biggest spenders.

But the paradox is only apparent. As long as there remains a substantial deficit - and it will remain, whatever budget is worked out - social spending programs are prime candidates for the axe. A catalogue of these programs would fill a book the size of a major telephone directory, and you have not even heard of most of them. Politically, the deficit is Reagan's leverage to compel Congress to discipline itself.

If the deficit is reduced by any kind of substantial increase in taxes, then the big federal spenders will simply be back in business as usual. The federal juggernaut will resume normal speed. Therefore any attempt to raise federal revenue ought to be firmly tied to spending

We are in the midst of a great national change, of course, with a national consensus behind it, but some of the details are still in the process of being worked out.

A lot of ideas are floating around Washington at the moment, most of them bad, but some are worse than others. Senator Robert Dole's call for a roll-back of last year's tax-cut package would strike at the heart of Rengan's whole approach to stimulating savings and investment. Dole ought to be reminded that he went nowhere in the primaries and that Reagan was not elected to raise tax rates.

placing a five-dollar tax per barrel on petroleum, and a similar tax on natural gas thus generating some $50 billion in federal revenue. Such measures would raise the price of gas at the pump to what it was a year ago, encourage conservation and support the segging market for small fuel-efficient cars.

We could probably narrow the deficit by

There is widespread and justified suspiction about a variety of expensive weapons systems. Until we decide on a new berth for the MX missile, for example, it will be just as vulnerable as the present Minuteman - so why not stick with the Minuteman in the meantime? We plan to deploy a new, expensive and suspect heavy tank in Europe. The Apache helicopter costs a fortune. And so

But the fundamental principle should be kept firmly in mind that the Reagan tax-cuts are vital, and that any effort to raise money for the federal government must be linked to further budget cuts.

More From Campaign Trail '82

WASHINGTON (NEA) - The confused California Senate race became even more so recently when the California Republican Assembly refused to endorse front-runner Barry Goldwater Jr. Instead, the influential organization gave its nod for the GOP nomination to Rep. Robert Dornan.

The most recent state-wide poll by the Field Organization shows that Goldwater continues to lead the pack of Republicans seeking to succeed retiring Sen. S.I. Hayakawa. But his lead has narrowed considerably in recent

The poll taken in early February gave Goldwater 35 percent to 18 percent for each of his two moderate opponents - San Diego Mayor Pete Wilson and Rep. Paul McCloskey. But by early March Goldwater was leading Wilson by a much narrower 29 percent to 24 percent. McCloskey remained at 18 percent,

The arch-conservative Dornan continues to lag far behind in the statewide polls. (He had 5 percent in both the February and March polls - behind even first daughter Maureen Reagan.) But he is starting to make inroads among the conservatives who are also Goldwater's greatest strength. One scenario being discussed by insiders has McCloskey dropping out, Goldwater and Dornan splitting the conservative vote and Wilson emerging as the easy winner. However, McCloskey continues to Insist that he is in the race to stay. Moreover, the Goldwater people predict that Dornan's support will rise no higher and eventually begin to fall off. The same March poll matched all five leading GOP candidates with the probable Democratic winner, Gov. Edmund "Jerry" Brown, Goldwater, Wilson and McCloskey easily defeated Brown, Dornan beat him narrowly and only Miss Reagan lost.

The experts are saying the most expensive congressional campaign of 1962 will most likely occur in California's 11th District just outside San Francisco.

In 1980, Democratic challenger Tom Lantos defeated Republican incumbent Bill Royer by about 5,000 votes out of 180,000 cast in the district. The two are matched up again this year, and Royer says that he will spend whatever is necessary to win back his seat. Royer spent almost $750,000 on his losing

1980 effort and may end up spending considerably more than $1 million on this cam-Lauton' backers any that they are willing to match Royer dollar for dollar. That's why experts predict that this could become an almost $3 million campaign. Half a continent away a politican with an illustrious name is reportedly having difficulty raising campaign funds.

He is former Sen. Adlai Stevenson, who is attempting to undeat incumbent Gov. James Thompson of Illinois Recent private polls show the two in a close race with Stevenson less than 18 percent behind. That's a good showing for the challenger so early in the campaign.

But his backers have not yet been able to attract the big money needed to mount the size of campaign that could unseat the popular Republican incumbent.

Christianity Survives, Despite Crackdown

WASHINGTON — Perhaps emboldened by the partial success of the Catholic Church in standing up to the Polish government in recent years, Christian sects have been giving their communist rulers a headache in the Soviet Union itself.

Autoniahing reports seeping out of Russia recently indicate that the Christian "problem" has become serious enough to warrant a concerted crackdown by the authorities. The particular targets of their anti-religious seal are the underground presses of various Christian churches.

Since 1979, Baptists and Seventh-day Adventists have managed to set up secret "publishing houses" to turn out religious literature. The Baptists have a clandestine publication called The Christian, while the Adventists have one called The True Witness. In addition, the underground presses have been turning out everything from Bibles and hymnals to critiques of Soviet law.

This clearly has the Kremlin worried. Amnesty International estimates that at least 115 Baptists and 30 Adventists in the past two years have been imprisoned for "anti-Soviet slander" — an offense that includes any teaching of religion in this officially atheistic

While Western journalists have publicized the plight of Soviet Jews, more than half the prisoners of conscience in 1961 were Baptists, Adventists, Russian Orthodox, Jehovah's Witnesses or other Christian church members, sources told my reporter Jeff Neshit. Most were convicted under the slander statute, which carries a maximum sentence of three years in prison,

Besides outright prosecution, the communists have other official weapons to use against Soviet citizens brave enough to practice their religion, Belief in Christianity is defined by Soviet law as a form of achizophrenia. With a certain tronic Marxist logic, a Soviet citizen who dares to practice Christianity might reasonably be deemed crary and out of touch with his environment. At any rate, this statute has been used to confine Christian leaders in mental hospitals for "treatment."

Even more frightening is the law concerning deprivation of parental rights. Soviet courts can take children away from their parents and ship them to another part of the country if the elders have "neglected their duties" in child-rearing. One such duty is to educate children in "the spirit of the moral code of the builder of communism," according to the Soviets' Fundamentals of Legislation. There are documented cases of children baving gone into hiding to avoid being kidnepped by the state.

The authorities have been quite successful in their crackdown on Christians. For example, most members of the Beptists' loose governing body, the Council of Evangelical Christians and Baptists in the U.S.S.R., have been in prison since January

This widespread official persecution of Christians has gone virtually unnoticed in the United States. Only rare cases are reported here—like that of the "Siberian Seven," the Pentecostals who forced their way into the American Embassy in Moscow in 1978 and were given an uneasy, unofficial sanctuary in the embassy basement.

The amazing thing about the Kremlin's crackdown is the evidence it gives that Christianity still survives after more than 80 years of official repression. The regime's fury is a tribute to the courage and devotion of Christians determinedly practicing their faith in deflance of the overwhelming power of hostile rulers. It is a story unmatched since the days of the Roman Empire.

That didn't happen Sunday. After coming from behind in regulation play, she outdueled Kathy Postlewait on the fourth hole of sudden death by sinking a 2-foot parr putt to claim the $150,000 LPGA Orlando Lady Classic.

"I was just a rookie in last year's playoff and I learned an awful lot," said Sheehan, whose lone victory before Sunday was the Japan Classic last year. "My game is far ahead of what it was last

"I really wanted this win badly because of the playoff last year," she said. "This year, I was able to come-from-behind and win and that makes me feel good."

Sheehan, who started the day two shots behind leader Postlewalt, clinched the victory on the par-3 16th hole. Postlewait, missed an 18-foot putt by inches and had to settle for a bogey. Both players parred the first three holes.

They ended regulation play with a 54-hole total f 7-under 209. Sheehan had a final round 2-under 0 and Postlewait fired a 1-under 71.

One shot back at 6-under 210 was Dot Germain, who fired a final round 69. Chris Johnson, who calebrated her 24th birthday Sunday, was two note off the pace at 211 after carding a 70. Kathy Hate (65), Jan Stephenson, (70) and Nancy Lopez-Melton (70) were at 4-under 212.

Sheehan, who was among 20 other golfers who and to finish the rain-delayed second round early To minday before the final windup, caught up to the Soutlewall with birdles on the 10th, 11th, 14th and th holes, but bogeyed the 17th to stay even with tlewalt at 7-under. Both players parred the per-4 18th hole to move into the playoff. "I feel exhausted, sick and extremely happy, cessary in that order," said Sheehan, who 122 took home $22,500 for the win - her second in the three years she has been on the tour.

Sanford's Alice Bennett etched her name into the prestigious Penn Relays over the weekend while running for the Florida State track team.

Running from her familiar number three spot, Bennett combined with Angela Wright, Marita Payne and Randy Givens for a record run in the 400 Meter Relay.

The fabulous four blazed to a 44.32 clocking to shatter the mark of 44.72 by Tennessee State.

Which is only sensible. It's your first year. Schedule about 16 games. Get your freshmendominated team some experience. Play some 4A schools. Then, they'll be ready to thrive in 1963.

Just, one thing went wrong. The thriving started a little early. One year to be exact. The upstart Lady Rams knocked off Mount Dorn, 7-5, Friday to capture the 2A-10 championship at Umatilla. "We're young and we make young mistakes," points out Henry, who took her young Lyman team to the district finals before bowing last year. When the opportunity came to transfer to Lake Mary, she jumped at the chance.

Henry points out, six of the losses are two 4A schools and in most of those games, the Rams were competitive.

The roster is dotted with names from last year's successful Five Points' Mustang team of Jim Lewis, Mossy Helms and Roger Richardson.

Basketball standout Lisa Gregory starts first, Andrea Fenning is at second, versattle Kim Averill holds down shortstop and Jill Lewis is stationed at the hot corner.

Terry Blayney, Liz Stone, Lisa Santulii and Chris Marshall comprise the outfield. Lisa Simkins is the pitcher and Patrice Murphy is the catcher. Marshall and Gregory are the only sophomores.

Blayney and Lewis drove in key runs in the victory over Mount Dors. "The game was really kinds sloppy," said Henry. "We ran them crazy

The showers called an early end to the state JUCO finals at Cocoa Beach Saturday. "We waited till about 2:30 p.m., but it was just impossible to get it in." said Castle.

Finishing the tourney was irrelevant anyway. Seminole had built such a big lead the first day that it gave them enough points for the title. Central Florida Community College finished second and will join the Raiders in the national tournament May 25 in Ocala.

"We should be one of the top four seeds," Castle said about the nationals. "Most of the coaches thought this was the best Florida junior college team they've ever seen.

Demir and Nicholls are the only sophomores. Those two along with all the others are being hounded by major colleges. Despite the attention, Castle believes all the frosh will return for their final year.

Demir, a native of Istanbul, Turkey, has received an invitation to play at Wimbledon. "That's quite an accomplishment," pointed out Castle, "It might be unprecedented. I don't believe any other JC players has had that op-

Seminoles Look To Track Down 13 Points

Seminole track coach Hank Daviero has always believed in the line, "ladies first." He was more than happy to see coach Emory Blake's girls run away with the Five Star Conference Meet last Friday.

He expects them to do the same this Friday, but he wouldn't mind if his boys picked up 13 points along the line somewhere to join the girls on the district throne.

3 Seriously Injured In Two-Car Crash

By TENI YARBOROUGH Herald Staff Writer

Three people were seriously injured in a two-car accident on County Road 415 near State Road 46, about 200 yards from the Osteen Bridge, at 10 a.m. Sunday.

Ruth Balley Johnston, 13, of Holly Hill, and her 1-year-old daughter, Lowry, were taken to the Seminole Memorial Hospital where they were admitted for treatment of injuries received in the crash, officials said.

Mrs. Johnston is listed in serious condition in the hospital's intensive care unit with multiple fractures, while her daughter is listed in satisfactory condition, suffering from a fractured hip and a nevere bruise on her forehead, hospital officials said.

The driver of the second vehicle, Richard Franklin Browne 31, of 257 Spartan Drive, Maitland, was also taken to Seminole Memorial Hospital but was later transfered to Florida Hospital-Orlando for treatment of head injuries and a cut on his left knee, officials said.

An unidentified motorist told Florida Highway Patrol troopers that a 1975 Mercury Cornet, reportedly driven by Browne, was attempting to pass him when the car collided with Mrs. Johnston's 1978 Ford Mustang.

Troopers investigating the accident have not yet disclosed what charges, if any, will be filed.

Looks Like Jimmy Carter's On The Comeback Trail

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The longer Jimmy Carter is out of office and the longer Ronald Reagan is in office, the better the Carter presidency looks, say friends and associates of the former president.

And perhaps that is part of the reason for mounting signs that Carter is preparing to resume a spot on the national political stage - with the blessing of the Democratic Party. With an apparent feeling the Reagan administration is proving the worth of his presidency, Carter is starting to speak out on the issues that concern him most: the environment, human rights, peace and nuclear disarmament. The re-emergence is linked to a changing view of Carter. "You look at the alternative (President Reagan), and Carter looks better," one former aide said.

For months after Carter's January 1981 retreat back home to Plains, Ga., it was hard to find a member of Congress who would say anything good about him. Occasionally he is still the butt of jokes and the snide comment.

Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., remarked at a recent press dinner that he had lost to Carter in 14 consecutive 1976 primaries. Then Udall gulpped, "How would you like to have that on your record?"

"Jimmy Carter's name still comes up occasionally in Washington," New York Times reporter Phil Gailey wrote earlier this month, "and when it does, the reaction typically consists of jokes, winces, shrugs and frowns,"

But Carter is moving back toward the spotlight. He is scheduled to speak at a Montgomery County, Md., Democratic fund-raiser in suburban Washington Saturday and plans to

were the second and t return to Washington in June for an undisclosed event. "People are realizing what a great president he was in view of Reaganomics," said Denise O'Leary, ball co-chairman. "He feels he's been vindicated by events, whether in the Middle East or on human rights," said Democratic National Committee spokesman Bob Neumann. Neumann added he hopes Carter will attend the Democrats' mid-term conference in Finding line 25-27. Still, however, despite this change in Carter there is also much that remains the same.

He retains much of the intensely private behavior that characterized him in the White House and helped lead to a sound rejection at the polls at the end of his first term.
