Cool weather curtails Winterfest attendance

By LAURA L. SULLIVAN Herald staff writer

SANFORD - Celebration of Mardi Gras began a few days early in Sanford with WinterFest '90, a three-day festival at All Souls Catholic Church concluding today. Rain and winds failed to keep a crowd away from the festival kick off Friday night, All Souls member Sandy Davis said. About 130 people bought dinners at the church, and other festival goers continued strolling through the churchyard until about 9 p.m., she said.

Seminole High School's band and two choral groups, and Lake Mary High School's chorus performed in the rain Friday. Despite the weather, none of the 10 attractions scheduled for the first night of festivities were cancelled, Davis said.

"We did a lot of business, in spite of the rain," she said. "We'll remember this one because of the rain."

Festivities continued yesterday as a steady crowd meandered past game booths, concession stands, a live auction and other attractions. Children gathered in the All Souls School court yard, where children's games, pupper shows and storytelling were featured throughout the day.

Scents of cotton candy, grilled hamburgers, hot dogs and fried dough filled the churchyard, located at 800 Oak Ave. The city block yesterday rung with sounds of tap dancing, a gultar strumming in a beer garden. children laughing as they bounced on a trampoline, and

Heathrow will receive a little taste of Italy

By LAURA L. SULLIVAN Herald Staff writer

LAKE MARY - The second Italian trade exhibition center in the United States will open tomorrow at Heathrow International Business Center.

The Heathrow center is one of only six exhibition centers in the world. Centers in New York, London, Paris, Tokyo and Dusseldorf also display Italian-designed products for the Italian Trade Commission.

The Compasso d'Oro (Golden Compass) design awards will be the premiere show at the Heathrow exhibition center. 120 International Parkway. The exhibition features work by more than 100 designers of home and office furnishings. equipment and graphics.

The exhibit displays products chosen from 580 entries in the Milan Compasso d'Oro competition last year. Only 12 Compasso d'Oro awarda are given every three years, Italian Trade Commission spokesperson Keri Lowe said.

We have come to find out that the Italian interpretation of industrial design is far different from our own," Lowe said. The exhibit opening tomorrow highlights industrial design. what Lowe said is commonly called commercial design in the United States.

Several of the award-winning designers featured in the show will make appearances at the exhibition center during the three-week exhibit.

The exhibition center will feature Italian fashion shows, jewelry and car displays later this year, Lowe said.

The Italian Trade Commission chose to locate in the Orlando area because of its central location between decision-makers in Tallahassee and trade ports in Miami, Lowe said. She said the commission scouted other southeastern cittes, including Atlanta, Houston and Miami, but chose Heathrow because of the state's high volume of trade with Italy and because of the city's central location within the state.

"Florida is a trade state. To top that off, it is growing as a trade crossroads," Lowe said.

According to Italian Trade Commission statistics, Florida exports more than $150 million in goods to Italy annually, and

Dolphin strandings puzzle scientists

TALLAHASSEE — The deaths of more than 60 dolphins stranded on beaches along the northern Gulf of Mexico in the past month could be a delayed reaction to the Christmas freeze that killed dozens of manatees in Florida, say marine biologists who are cautiously watching the situation.

From Texas to Tamps, an estimated 83 Atlantic bottlenose dolphine of all ages have been reported stranded along the sandy beaches of the Gulf of Mexico in the last four weeks — 30 in Matagorda Bay. Texas, 12 along the Louisiana coast, 11 in Perdido Bay and about 10 in Florida.

While the Florida numbers are not alarming, the number of dolphin strandings in Texas and Louisiana is unusually high. And scientists are concerned about what they are seeing in the northern Gulf.

Eastern strike produces no winners

MIAMI — After a grueling year of economic warfare, airline boss Frank Lorenzo and his union foes at Eastern Airlines can agree on one point: the bitter, year-long Eastern strike has produced no winners.

"Nobody wins in a strike," said Frank Ortis, a local machinist official in Miami. "We have had terrible casualties."

The long-running battle between Eastern management and the company's unions also has failed to produce an ending. A year after the strike began, the fate of Eastern and more than 20,000 workers remains uncertain.

"It is a battle no one has won," Lorenzo told a group of businessmen during a rare south Fforida appearance.

Pilot sues U.S. government

MIAMI - A Panamanian pilot has filed a $75,000 lawsuit against the U.S. government, claiming American soldiers destroyed his airplane when they invaded his country seeking to bring deposed dictator Manuel Norlega to the United State to face drug charges.

Luis Alvarado, a civilian who works in the canal zone, filed his suit in U.S. District Court in Miami demanding restitution for damage to his Cesana. The suit says his plane was riddled with gunfire Dec. 20 when U.S. troops aboard C-130 gunships

Medical care suffers at hospital

MIAMI - The standard of medical care is dropping every day at Jackson Memorial Hospital because vendors who are owed about $38 million refuse to grant any more credit, a published report said Saturday.

The hospital is facing a critical shortage of drugs and medical supplies because of its poor credit rating. Officials say the facility needs about $10 million immediately in order to pay overdue bills and maintain the hospital's medical inventory, said a report in The Miami Herald.

'The quality of care is deteriorating daily," said Dr. Bernard Fogel, dean of the University of Miami School of Medicine. 'You go into the operating room and the supplies are not there. The ability to do this is getting out of hand."

One month later. Tampa police spotted McKinney walking toward a house where police had made numerous cocaine buys.

Area legislators vow renewed battle for state roads money

By RENE STUTZMAN United Press International

ORLANIXI - State lawmakers from Seminole County and elsewhere in Central Florida, who lost their battle for more highway money last year. have promised to return to Tallahassee this spring and take up where they left off.

Several lawmakers said they would support increased taxes or fees to fund roads construction. Rep. Bob Sindler, D-Apopka, called for a nickel increase in the state's gasoline tax and a $1 surcharge on rental cars. He said the rental car surcharge would generate $9 million in Orange County alone. "That's actually the equivalent of a 2 1/2-cent gas tax." he said.

Sindler and six other area lawmakers spoke at a forum sponsored by Central Florida home builders and realtors, who have call for a 10-cent like in the gasoline tax, with half of it going to the state

The trade groups also call for a 10-percent surcharge on car rentals, a $10 hike in drivers license fees and a $100 fee for car owners who bring new autos into the state.

Sen. Tont Jennings. R-Orlando, said she supported added fees for road construction but added, I'm tired of collecting money and sending it to Jennings also predicted that Gov. Bob Martinez's proposal to charge newcomers $195 for each car they add to Florida roads would probably be found illegal if challenged.

Rep. Art Grindle, R-Altainonte Springs, said once the session begins April 2, he would again battle to allow private companies to build and operate toll roads, as business magnate Jeno Paulucci suggested for the Seminole-Orange County Expressway. "It's a darned good idea," he SANFORD - The big-money fish tagged for the 1990 Johnson Reels Crappiethon tournament are still out, Elizabeth Sunders, owner of tournament sponsor Seminole Sporting Goods, reported yesterday.

The fish just aren't biting. One of my customers said it's like they have lockjaw," Sanders said.

Anglers had hoped fishing would improve this week after rain and cool weather moved through the area. Sanders said, but heavy winds put a damper on weekend fishing.

About 100 tagged crappie, including one $1,000 fish and several $25 crappie, have been turned in since the tournament began Jan. 20. One fish still at large is worth $65,000 in prize money and bonuses from the 2-mill levy and state subsidies to accommodate student growth. In addition, a renewable levy would allow voters to retain control over how much money the school officials could spend, according to the critics. He and others said school officials were using scare factics when they warned of widespread overcrowding and double acasions for clames.

School officials countered that Layer's plan amounted to "pay and no-go" because it would not keep pace with growth.

Nevertheless, school officials said, if the student projections are too high, they will not spend all the money raised by the bonds. Larry Strickler, bond sterring committee chairman. "A point usually overlooked by opponents of the bond, is that the bonds will be sold in three nearly even offerings of about $175 million each. If the numbers do not justify more building, the other bonds will not be sold."

Another advantage of the bonds, school officials said, is that the cost is spread out over many years in mich a way that future residents will have a more equitable portion of the tax burden.

The cost to taxpayers of the levy only would be 82 per $1,000 of taxable property each year; under bond financing, the cost would begin at $1.88 per $1,000 and rise to $4 per $1,000 by the eighth year and after that the cost would decline, according to school officials.

A sign that the criticism has sparked a surge of interest comes from the county's supervisor of elections. Sandra Goard said that the special election is one of the toughest she's ever had to predict in terms of voter turnout.

'Traditionally, special elections have very poor turnout," she said, "but this issue has had a lot of coverage in the media."

Goard said that based on that and the relatively large number of requests for absentee ballots. she believes that about 18 percent of the county's eligible voters will cast their ballots. Prior to the controversy, she had predicted a much lower turnout.

Goard reports that she has issued approximately 400 absentee ballots. "That's pretty high for a special election," she said.

Opponents of the bond issue also question the need for a new administration building to replace the current facility located at 1211 Mellonville Ave. in Sanford.

The complex, formerly a dormitory for the baseball players who played at Sanford Stadium which is located next door, is cramped. Boxes line the halls several desks are often crowded into offices designed for

HOW THE MONEY WILL BE SPENT

The climate control system is faulty, causing temperatures to drop in the winter and rise in the summer. Moisture collects behind walls causing mold to form where it cannot be cleaned.

"People often ask me what the district administration building has to do with education. Hughes said. "Without the records and personnel at the administrative offices, teachers would not get their paychecks or benefits, student report cards would not get sent out...all that happens at the district level."

The district would like to build a $17 million facility on land directly behind the existing headquarters.

Bond issue opponent Stelling mirror said that he did not oppose the need to have a new facility.

"I do think it should be centrally located in the county and I don't see the need to build such a plush building. (The) Orange County (school board) built a larger...a very nice looking...administrative facility for only $13 million. Why can't a smaller district do that for less?"

Stelling asked. Hughes said that the $17 million figure was not an estimate of what would be needed. "It may be done for much less," he noted.

The board wants to keep the administrative offices in Sanford If they can.

"We want to be near the court house, and other county administrative buildings," he said. 'Administrative offices are traditionally located in the county seat.

Staff writers Vick! DeSarmler and J. Mark article are among these who contributed to Statewide, a total of about The total count in Seminole 5,500 busts were made in the three 1989 crackdowns. The total for the most recent bust was about 1.122 statewide, according to Broward County sheriff's spokesman Jim Leljedal. It would be nice to think we're making a dent in demand (for cocaine) reduction, but realistically we've got to blame the weather (rain)," Leljedal said of the reduced number of arrests. Statewide, he said, heavy rains which hit Seminole County, also reduced arrest numbers claewhere CCIB Commander Lt. Donald

Eslinger, who coordinates the Rock Pile busts for eight Central Florida counties, said he thinks the impact of the three earlier coordinated busts has brought reduction in demand for open street sales of cocaine to outsiders in the rural Altamonte Springs community, where most of the busts were made in all four Rock Pile operations here.

The profile of those arrested as users remains the same. Suspects are primarily working class white males in their 20's or 30's who live outside the area in which they shop for drugs. This outside demand, Eslinger said. impacts on the whole commutty, because it breeds young dealers in the drug sales area. The users, he said, often return to their own communities throughout the area to commit crimes to support their drug habit.

Eslinger said this cooperative police effort, which involves CCIB, the Seminole County Sheriff's Department, state and federal agents, and city police from Sanford, Longwood, Lake Mary, Casselberry, Altamonte Springs, and Oviedo, and the Flager County sheriff's office, would be part of Sheriff John Polk's cocaine demand reduction strategy, even without the statewide task force.

Polk said the addition of former Florida Department of Law Enforcement chemist Chris Alt to his staff last year, and recent access to proper equipment, makes the testing possible within his own department. Test results can be available within an hour instead of up to eight weeks, he said.

"I think this is an excellent tool." Polk said, adding that he will continue the program throughout the year. He said the Rock Pile raids will also con-

Roger Wayne Keith, 32, of Longwood, who reportedly swallowed the cocaine he allegedly bought, was hospitalized overnight Friday and Saturday for "observation." Keith was reportedly complaining of chest pairs. Eslinger said, although doctors report no serious injury they said the reported pain may stem from injury to Keith as he allegedly resisted when agents tried to handcuff him. Keith has been released from police custody by a circuit judge who has set a mid-March hearing date for him. Eslinger said in addition to a purchase of cocaine and a destruction of evidence charge against Keith, he may also face charges related to reckless driving and eluding

election held today By DOUGLAS TWEEDALE United Press International

Nicaraguan

MANAGUA. Nicaragua - The government banned firearms and liquor sales Saturday to prevent violence during today's national elections, the most closely watched and possibly the freest vote in the country's violence-wracked history.

More than 1.7 million Nicaraguan will be eligible to vote when the polls open for what most analysts consider a crucial referendum on 10 years of rule by the Sandinista National Liberation Front.

The election has raised expectations that Nicaragua's long history of war, political conflict, and economic problems might finally be resolved through peaceful means.

Bealdes president and vice president, voters will choose deputies to the 90-seat National Assembly and representatives to more than 140 municipal councils.

President Daniel Ortega, who is seeking election to another six-year term, and U.S.-backed rival Violeta Chamorro of the National Opposition Union, or UNO, wrapped up an acrimonious six-month campaign Wednesday, with observers still unsure who will win, although most polls were picking Ortega.

Governors plot education excell

By FRANK T. CSONSO United Press International

WASHINGTON - The nation's governors opened a meeting Saturday to chart a course for excellence in education and to develop a consensus that would make the faltering American school system the best in the world.

The governors, holding a three-day annual winter session, said if the United States is to maintain its freedom and prosperity. it must be prepared to provide a first class education to every child.

Gov. Terry E. Branstad of Iowa, Republican chairman of the National Governors Association, told a news conference at the opening of the conference that the governors want to make American education "world class" by the year 2000.

"We're here to build a consensus for change for excellence in education. Branstad said.

'it is a remarkable cooperative venture." said Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, a Democratic co-chairman of the group's task force on education. "It's a real effort to involve all elements of society."

In January, President Bush outlined broad educational goals in his State of the Union address and the governors are considering various objectives on how to

A healthy environment and welleducated people will be the major actors in determining our quality of life and our standard of living." Branstad said. "Our natural and human resources have been the source of our success as a nation for more than 200 years," he said.

Bush proposed that by the year 2000 all American children start school ready to learn. According to a draft report by the governors group, all disadvantaged 4-yearolds should have access to high-quality pre-school programs that help prepare children for school.

Rights measure draws fire

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Critics charge that civil rights legislation seeking to reverse a string of Supreme Court decisions goes too far and could force employers to set hiring quotas to avoid costly lawsuits.

Supporters of the measure. however, disputed those claims and argued the legal changes are needed to shore up protections eroded by four recent court decisions that undermined an-II-discrimination efforts.

Discussions grew somewhat heated at times Friday during a Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee hearing on

SEMINOLE COUNTY SCHOOL BOND ISSUE

TOGETHER

"We believe the 6-year building program is a sound one that will help maintain quality education. It's up to us to represent our children as we go to the polls on February 27 in support of the bond issue."

Judy Smith, President, Seminole County Council of PTAs

"We talk about the need for a better educational system in America. Overcrowded schools and double sessions adversely affect the quality of education in Seminole County. Excellence in education must remain a reality for our children."

Marianna Stronko, PTA President, Stenstrom Elementary

"We firmly support the schools and the school system. By doing so, we're able to give something back to the community."

George Billings Parent

"If the bond issue fails, we all lose. The children's education suffers along with the district's reputation for educational excellence. This will be followed by a decline in property values which will have a negative impact on builders and the home building industry."

Robert King, Retired Seminole County Educator

"People hedge about the cost because they no longer have children in school, or because they feel there's always the alternative of private school. Well, my response is...think about the cost of a poor education for your grand children or greatgrandchildren. Think about the cost of escalating tuition fees for private school. In both cases, your very best investment is a positive vote for public education."

Sandy Kanistras, Parent Seminole County Dividend of the Year

"This building plan will take care of school housing needs for 8 years, preventing seat-of-the-pants' crisis management. Overcrowding can only get worse, and no one wins - not students, teachers, or parents."

Judy Wiant, Parent, Winter Park

"The growth is here. We're either going to address it, or we're going to live with the consequences."

Dr. Ludene Sweeting Lifelong Educator "As a business person, I like the structure of the bond issue -- in three phases. This assures us that if changes occur with impact fees, lottery money, or funding sources, the bond issue will be scaled down. As a lifelong member of this community, I support the bond Issue because we can not grow and live without schools. We. as parents and business people, have the responsibility to give our children the best teachers, the best facilities, and the very best education. These young people will be our future employees. They are our future."

Janice Springfield, Senior Vice President of Business Development, SunBank, N.A.

"The schools are a reflection of our community...the children of Seminale County deserve a quality education in an environment that is conducive to learning".

Nancy Britton, Citizen

"Some people tell you what they're against. I want to tell you what I'm for: continued excellence in education in Seminole County. We need to consider the needs of our students. I'm absolutely in favor of this bond issue."

Marcia Ritter, Parent, Winter Springs

"I have 2 children in Seminole County schools (and have had since 1979). This bond issue is the only invenedate solution to protect what we've already built one of the best school systems in the nation. We need to realize that the main reason people want to live in Seminole County is our schools. Even for those citizens who do not have children in the school system, they need to recognize the importance of this bond issue to Seminole County's economic development. I am convinced that voting 'yes' for the bond issue will not only provide for our educational needs, but will also assure me, personally, that the amount of total taxes that I pay over the next ten years is minimized."

Larry Strickler,

Area Manager,

Southern Bell

"The students of Seminole County have become the pawns in a power struggle by the county politicians, and they will act responsibly and responsively on Feb. 27 by voting 'yes' for school bonds."

Nancy S. Wheeler,
Executive Director,
Seminole Education Assn.

With the growth crisis before must be put aside, or the only losers will be the students. The problem is real and the solution is in the hands of the

"I'm tired of the 'little red schoolhouse mentality' that I encounter. We must prepare our students and future work force to compete in the international market. With computer technology as a component of the bond issue, the proposed ratio of one computer per seven students is a step in the right direction for meeting this goal."

"It just can't be said enough...children are our most important asset. We must provide them with the very best education we can to enable them to compete in the world - now more than ever. "There is an obvious need for additional school construction. I have children in the system, and I want to make sure they get the best possible education. The bond issue will insure this..."

"I'm pleased with my children's progress through the Seminole County School System. With a strong educational foundation, all of them went on to college and careers of their choice. It's important that their children have opportunities as good as, if not better, than they had."

Roger Owen, Realtor

"Attracting new industry is very competitive. One of the first questions asked by those interested in moving here is what is the quality of the school system in Seminole County? We are in favor of a strong school system, and that's why we back this bond issue."

KISSIMMEE - The "Speed Expresa" rolls on. For the third straight year, the Osceola Kowboys' "Speed Express" knocked Seminole out in the semifinals of the 3A-District 6 boy's basketball tournament with a 74-58 victory at Kowboy Gymnastum Friday night.

The victory by Osceola set up a championship matchup with Jones, which reached Saturday night's final with a 90-55 shellacking of Gateway. This will be the ninth straight year that the Kowboys and the Tigers have met in the finals.

Seminole, which finishes the season 21-7, led in the early going but was unable to contain the Kowboys' star guard. Justin Thompson. Thompson, a strong 6-2 senior who signed early with the University of Georgia, scored 31 points. grabbed eight rebounds, handed out five assists. picked up four steals and blocked two shots.

Seminole jumped out to a 9-4 lead behind the play of the Wiggins brothers, sophomore guard J.J. and junior forward Kerry. The Tribe could have hull an even bigger lead but nervousness seemed to haunt the Seminoles as several passes went right through their hands for turnovers.

Osceola came back to tie the score 9-9 on a rousing fast break dunk by Thompson and ended up leading 19-13 after one period of play.

Being ready when good conditions arise results in haul of cobia

If there is one truth in cobia ashing, it has to be "strike while the iron is hot." Many factors must be present in order to have successful trip — calm seas. plenty of sunlight to spot the fish, and last, but not least,

🖟 I was on the Indian River last Sunday, and a Marine Patrol buddy of mine. Mike Ramsey, told me that fishermen were really catching the cobia out of Port Canaveral Monday was a holiday for me, so I called my brother. Bob, in Jacksonville and arranged for him to meet meat the ramp in Port Canaveral in the morning

We met at 9 a.m., launched my boat and cleared the inlet. fill of anticipation. Listening to the radio chatter, it was obvious that the cobia were free-swimming instead of congregating on bait pods

Once we were near the fleet of other lishermen, we elevated ourselves in the boat and cruised slowly, straining out eyes. searching for cobia slowly swimming below the surface.

My radio was buzzing with anglers catching fish and for a while, we looked in vain Suddenly we spotted a single fish. and Bob tossed out a jib and was soon hooked up to a streable cobia

After a bull-dog struggle, the fish was played close enough to the boat for me to sink in the gaff. Gaffing cobia has never been fun for me, and this 50

pounder proved to be no exception as it twisted wildly on the gail. Bob opened the fish box and we threw in the cobia and held down the lid.

We once again resumed our vigil. Before the day had ended, we had spotted around 25 fish. Some of the fish were too small. others ignored our jugs when the smoke cleared, we had landed live fish that averaged over 50 pounds. The heaviest fish strained the scales at Dolphin's Leap Marina to 58 n d s

Our fishing trip was a linge success because we had current fishing information, good weather conditions and tackle that was totally prepared. You. too, can experienc such great fishing trips with proper planning and preparation

Shupe's Scoop

Although the limit for cobia is two, my Marine Patrol friends state that this limit applies only to state waters - within three miles of land. Anglets can legally - keep more than two cobia per person if the lish are caught further offshore than three miles. The legal lentth limit for cobacts 37 inches Fishing forecast

George Hodge from Tammy's Balt and Tackle reports that bass fishing is hot with wild and domestic shiners. Some good bass are being taken from the river and Lake Monroe. Specks are still in the pads and grassy shallows

Steve Gard from Osteen Bridge Fish Camp said that high winds have hampered fishing but that specks are coming from shallow water in pails and grass Look for good fishing when the winds subside.

Snook season will open March I and anglers will be waiting inline at Sebastian Inlet. In the meantime: flounder, redfish.

bluefish and jack crevalle are biting with a vengence. Captain Jack at Port Canaveral reports high winds and unlishable conditions of-(shore, in the Port, it's the usual bluelish, jack crevalle, flounder and sheepshead. Trout and reds are beginning to roam the flats of the Banana and Indian rivers near Cocoa. Fish the deeper flats with Mirrorlures or gold spoons for sure action.

Ponce Inlet is red hot for Hounder, drum, redfish, bluefish, jack crevalle and other bottom lish. Live or dead shrimp will guarantee non-stop action from all species. Both the north and south jetties are rated as

For Casselberry racer Alex Job, the actual participation in an event like the 24 Hours of Daytona (above right) last month is the culmination of months of preparation.

Like most drivers, Job likes to keep his hand in the building and maintenance of his automobile, from the installation and fine tuning of the engine and transmission (bottom right) to the pulling in new brakes and suspension (below center). That way, all Job has to do on race day is suit up (below left) and drive.

His hours of pre-race preparation have paid dividends as Job

A key play in the game came with 4.08 to play. With Osceola ahead 61-54 Thompsom came for a dunk when fouled by J.J. Wiggins. Wiggins was called for an intentional foul, giving the Kowhoys two free throws and the ball. And while Osceola only got two points out of the play, it seemed to take the starch out of Seminole and they never threatened again.

"We just didn't play like we are capable of," said Robinson. "They didn't play like the team that had gone 14-3 since Christmas But we had a good year and we had some young kids that hopefully will continue to improve. Osceola coach Ed Kershner had nothing but praise for the Seminoles.

"That's a very good high school basketball team." said Kershner "They are wellcoached and play very hard. I feel like we did a good job defensively and also did a very good job of keeping them off the boards as best we could. We feel very lucky to have knocked them off for the third straight

In addition to Thompson, Osceola (5-26 on the season after forfeiting 18 victories for using an ineligible player), had Marcus Dickson (14 points) and Paul McCrimmon (11) score in double

Seminoles fall to Coles, Hokies

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE - Bimbo Coles scored 24 of his 37 points in the first half Saturday to lead Virginia Tech past Florida State 84-74 in a Metro Conference

The Hokies improved to 11-17 overall and 3.9 in the Metro after rallying from an early deficit. The Hokies closed to within two points seven times in the first half, the last time on a Thomas Elliot dunk with 3:24 left, but FSU scored eight straight after that to go into the locker room

Coles then scored 13 points in a 15-1 run to open the second half, giving the Hokies their first lead at 46-42. FSU led just once after that point, when Aubry Boyd hit a three-pointer to make It 55-53 with 9:49 left.

Elliot answered with another slam and the Hokies never trailed again.

FSU got to within 78-74, but Seminoles coach Pat Kennedy was called for a technical after arguing a call, and FSU's Irving Thomas was given a second

Coles made all four free throws to make it 82.74 and put the game out of reach.

Freshman Rod Wheeler scored 13 points and Elliot and David Herbster added 10 each for Virginia Tech. Coles became the all-time leading scorer in Metro conference history with his 25th point.

The Seminoles, who dropped to 15-14 overall and 5-8 in the Metro, were led by Thomas and Tharon Mayes, who scored 20 points aplece. Mayes was in his first game back after serving a seven game suspension.

Negotiations add to baseball lexicon

NEW YORK - Baseball's labor talks have yet to produce the cry of, "Play ball." But they have generated other words, words unlikely to become part of baseball jargon.

'incremental income" scarcely matches the clarity of "Kill the umpire." "Conditions of re-opener" will never become a box score entry. And the ever-present "arbitration eligibility" seems a poor bet to spur popcorn sales.

Such phrases come courtesy of Chuck O'Connor and Don Fehr, two lawyers on opposite sides of baseball's labor stoppage. The spring training lockout reached its 10th day Saturday and, for most of those days, O'Connor and Fehr have tossed out phrases you'll never hear in the

"When you consider the question of lockout you consider it not in the abstract but against the alternative," O'Connor said one day, probably not echoing the words of Babe Ruth and Rogers

"It would be incorrect of me to suggest that they have even hinted at the notion that there is so much as one day of service break in the eligibility requirements," said Fehr, who likely considered that sentence more pertinent than

A scouting report on O'Connor would liken him to a power pitcher with a good breaking ball. He can really throw the legalese, but once in a while he'll cross you up with a homespun cliche and a twinkle in the eye.

"Beauty is in the eye of the beholder." he says

O'Connor likes to assess the ranch, too. He emerged from one meeting admitting that it was Sometimes he'll change the venue, as in, "We viewed the waterfront.

Mostly, though, O'Connor favors the prepositional phrase, as many of them as possible. You get the feeling that, if confronted with the grandeur of the Grand Canyon, he might say, "In the context of the framework of what we're trying to accomplish here, it's really beautiful."

Fehr, on the other hand, is a bit more of a junkballer. Though able to fire legalisms of his own, he also mixes in sarcasm and irony. At one point, he said owners showed a "prescience" that he himself had never claimed.

While announcing that owners had shifted approach over 24 hours, Fehr said, "Obviously we have a lot of players to talk to and to bring up to date on these rapidly changing developments.

Fehr has made little use of one of his favorite rhetorical devices, the "If you're asking..."

"If you're asking (this), then the answer is yes." he'll say. "If, on the other hand, you're asking (that), then the answer is no."

The contrast in styles extends into the bullpen. Commissioner Fay Vincent will invite reporters into his office, talk literature for a few moments. then proceed with calm and reason.

Gene Orza, associate general counsel for the union, prefers a more direct approach. While talking to a reporter who sought a specific financial figure. Orza finally asked. "Would you agree that there can be a question that has no

Fehr said the union has proposed making what he called "substantial" concessions on pensions. But, as of now, no peace appears possible without an agreement on arbitration. The union wants players to become eligible after two years: management wants to retain the current level of three years.

"it's gonna be solved by but-tin' heads," Cone said. "We're gonna have to go back and find out just how strong the players' stand is on it. And I think it's gonna be pretty strong. We're a pretty strong union. We're gonna find out how strong the owners are, too."

Green form EZ but could be costly

Cut your

Editor's note: Fourth of a series.

By GEORGE W. SMITH Henry Ford once said you could have any color Moidel T Ford you wanted - so long as it was black.

The tax collector is a bit more flexible. Taxpayers have a choice of colors for filing their income tax returns. Besides the standard blue 1040 "long form" and the pink 1040A "short form," the Internal Revenue Service offers an even simpler form, the green 1040EZ. It is designed for single taxpayers who have taxable income of less than $50,000.

However, don't let the simplicity of Form 1040EZ and Form 1040A lure you into using one unless you are certain that it is in your best interest to do so. Using the 1040EZ or 1049A might cost you money you don't need to pay.

The way to tell which form to use is to do a rough calculation. Total your itemized deductions and compare them with your standard deduction. If your itemized deductions are greater than the standard deduction. you will pay less tax by itemizing. To itemize, you must file the long Form 1040.

To use Form 1040EZ, the green one, a taxpayer must: Be single.

Not be 65 or older, or blind. Claim no exemptions for children or any other dependents.

Have taxable income of less than $50,000.

Have earned income from wages, salaries, and tips only. Have interest income of $400 or leas.

Have no dividend income. Not itemize.

Claim no tax credits. The 1040EZ has less than a dozen lines to complete. Most of the instructions needed to complete the 1040EZ are on the back of the form. You will need the tax table from the 1040A Instructions to figure your tax.

If you have determined that you will not lower the amount of tax you owe by itemizing deductions, Form 1040A allows you a little more flexibility than the 1040EZ. Unlike Form 1040EZ, 1040A can be used if: You are married or single.

You are a qualifying widow or widower with a dependent child. You are claiming a credit for child care expenses or the earned income credit.

You had dividend income. You had interest income of any amount.

You had unemployment compensation. You made a contribution to an individual retirement account. You should file the 1040 long form if your itemized deductions total more than the standard deduction. Your tax bill will be lower if you do. However, the IRS requires some taxpayers to #### and save use Form 1040 even if they are not itemizing deductions.

You have to file Form 1040 if: Your taxable income is $50,000 or more.

You had Income from sources other than wages, salaries, tips, Interest, dividends and unemployment compensation. HOSTON - This year, about 500,000 Americans will develop skin cancer. Most will have a highly curable form, but 27,000 people will be diagnosed with a potentially deadly type known as melanoma

For melanoma sufferers. doctors say the best hope for long-term survival is early diagnosis. A new study suggests that a free nationwide screening program begun in 1975 can be highly effective in detecting melanoma and other skin cancern at an early stage.

The study marked the first comprehensive follow-up of people who were thought to have skin abnormalities when doctors examined them visually. They were told to go to their physifurther diagnoses.

By KARSH KLINGER sity's schools of medicine and public health tracked down 289 people out of 787 in Massachusetts who had seemingly abnormal screens when they were examined at 14 locations around the state in 1986 and 1987. Another 1,773 people screened at the same time had normal results. Dr. Howard Koh, who led the study, said that among these 289, there were nine confirmed cases of melanoma and 133 other types of skin cancers. To Koh, the figures indicate the screening program is successfully attracting people who are at greatest risk of developing

In the general population, the melanoma rate is one in 10,000. But among those in Koh's study. the rate was nearly one in 300.

at the university.

He said it also suggests the skin screenings, which are held each spring at scores of locations around United States, might someday prove as effective in detecting early skin cancer as Pap smear tests for cervical cancer or mammography for breast cancer.

"Although the screening program is not new, there had been very little effort to find out what happened to people after they were examined." Koh said. "We were very encouraged by what we found."

The screenings, usually held in May and June, are sponsored by the American Academy of Dermatology. The results of Koh's study appeared recently in the Journal Cancer.

Koh said the incidence of metanoma in the United States has reached "epidemic proportions" in recent years for reasons that are not fully understood. The National Cancer Institute says that between 1973 and 1986, the melanoma rate in-

The chief factors that predispose people to melanoma and other skin cancers are thought to be skin type and degree of exposure to sunlight, said Dr. Gary Rogers, who is co-director with Koh of a new skin cancer center at University Hospital in Boston.

WASHINGTON - The Food and Drug Administration has approved the first use of socalled fake fats, giving The use a low-calorie fat substitute made from milk or egg whites in frozen desaerts.

The new product, called Simplesse, is a blended, protein-based ingredient that provides a smooth and creamy taste sensation similar to fat in food. but with far fewer calories. Simplesse contains 1-1/3 calories per gram compared to 9 calortea per gram for regular fat. The major constituents of the fat substitute - egg whites and milk protein - have been safely eaten by people for many years. The FDA said it determined the heating and blending process used to make Simplesse appears to add no health threat, and the agency considers the product a 'generally recognized as safe' ingredient for foods.

FDA officials warned that because some people may be allergic to eggs or cow's milk. products containing Simplesse should list those ingredients on Simplesse tends to gel when heated, limiting its primary uses to uncooked products like ice cream, salad dressings, apreads and dips.

Nutrasweet, a subsidiary of the Monsanto Co. based in Deerfield. III., has proposed to first use Simplesse as a thickener or texturizer in frozen dessert products, the FDA said. The company filed for approval of the product in November 1988.

Jim Prescott, a spokesman for Nutrasweet, said the first product to be marketed using Simplesse will be an ice cream called "Simple Pleasures." A 4-ounce serving of the new dessert will contain 1 gram of fat and 120 calories, compared to 15 grams of fat and 250 calories for a similar portion of regular ice cream, he said.

Total calorie reduction in various products using Simplesse will range from 20 percent Nutrasweet Co. permission to to 80 percent, company officials naid.

Two other fake fats are currently under review by the FDA. In August, Kraft Inc. requested approval to use a fat substitute similar to Simplesse to frozen deserts. Procter & Gamble Co. has been waiting more than 21/2 years for a decision on Olestra, a no-calorie fat substitute made from augar and vegetable oil. Although it tastes and cooks like a fat, Olestra provides no calories because it passes through the body without being absorbed. Procter & Gamble said.

Lisa Lefferts, a spokeswoman for the Center for Science in the Public Interest, said Thursday she sees no safety problems with Simplesse if it is properly labeled

But the consumer advocacy group has objected to Olestra. citing studies that it says show the product increased the rate of cancer and birth defects in laboratory animals.

Clock towers, buildings, homes; no job too big for local movers

By LACY DOMEN Herald correspondent

SANFORD - Tom Youngblood picks up and moves about 30 times a year, and when he's ready to go.

people always get out of his way. The muscular Sanford man needs the roads cleared, because he uses a fleet of flatbed trucks and hydraulic jacks to move buildings all over the South, with his sons and business partners, Tandy and Randy.

The Youngbloods move about 6.6 million pounds a year, according to Randy, and have relocated a wide array of structures: portable classrooms, brick apartment buildings, shrimp boats, restaurants, fire stations, and clock lowers.

Currently, the crew is commandeering the move of the 130-ton historic Sanford home of Debbie and Henry Bowlin, who purchased the Oak Avenue property from the First Baptist Church of Sanford for $1 and with the stipulation that it be moved off the lot

"Rumor had it that it would be destroyed," Debbie said.

The Bowlins have a sentimental reason for wanting to preserve the house. Both Debbie's grandparents and great-grandparents lived in the century-old Victorian beauty.

"I even have a lot of my grandmother's original furniture." Debbie Laura Straehla, director of the Sanford Historic Trust, Inc., was gratified to see the house saved.

'When a homeowner goes to the extent of moving a family homestead, to preserve the structure and the area, it proves that preservation has reached the people. They care about a rich heritage here." she excitedly said.

Another onlooker, Walt Anderson, of Ormond Beach, was particularly Interested because his "grandfather was a Swedish immigrant who worked as a carpenter for General Sanford. He built that house around

Youngblood stressed that the house was solidly built and, thus, was unconcerned about its age

"That house is more solid than a new one," he said. "It's made of heart pine, and there's very little damage after 100 years."

Youngblood said: "Like this house, every job is different." he recalled some of those different

We also moved Fire Station No. 9 for the city of Orlando, and they estimated they saved over $300,000 by moving it instead of rebuilding," Youngblood remembered.

The Howlin's new home cost $27,000 to move and set on a new foundation, but they still had to negotiate Florida Power and Light's fee for raising the power lines high enough for the house to pass under.

The Spot-nosed Guenon is so named because of its unique facial coloration. This primate has a large white oval-shaped patch on its nose. The region of Africa in which the Spot-nosed Guenon resides is also home to many other species of Guenons. It is believed these guenon species have developed differences in coloration (i.e. white patch on nosc) so as to distinguish between themselves and other species of guenon.

Guenons live in social groups called "troops". Troop sizes range from 10 to 40 members. Guenon troops tend to be territorial, with the females being more actively involved in protecting the "turf" than the males. Only female guenous are permanent members. of the troop. At an early age, males may leave the troop to join a different troop, to form an all-male troop, or to lead a solitary life.

Female guenous typically give birth to one baby after a gestation period of approximately six months. Young guenous are weaned at four months.

Herald correspondent SANFORD. The men and women in the U.S. Army's 82nd Airborne Division have put on their boots and parachutes for immediate deployment to hot spots like Grenada, Honduras, and most recently, Panama. A group of these paratroopers, the Division's All American Chorus, recently descended on Central Florida and were deployed to Seminole High School, where they serenaded sports fans during pre-game and halftime ceremonies. The soldiers who participate in the chorus are on special duty, according to Sgt. John

They are used as a recruiting aid, and are available to all Army recruiting offices for particiation in community events.

Sanford recruiting station commander, Staff Sgt. Donna Gaddy, orchestrated the gig at Semihole high, and chauffeured some of the chorus members during their stay here.

'A lot of people don't realize the opportunity is there to do things like this in the Army." she said. "The Chorus is an example of the choices available to anyone willing to put forth an

Sgt. Russ White, who serves as spokesperson for the group, recounted some of the more exciting performances the Chorus has given.

More than 700 parachutes billowed out over France, members of the Chorus among them, when "we all (the 82nd Airborne) parachuted in for the 45th reunion of the Normandy invasion," White said. "We've performed at Jerry Lewis telethons, pro-wrestling events, Disney, and the Army Ball in Beverly Hills."

Maione, who has recorded a soon-to-bereleased album, added, "And we've been on

White jokingly said: "I think the most exciting time we've ever had is driving with Sgt. Gaddy through Orlando!"

PFC Victor Aramanda, an All American Chorus member for just a month, laughed and agreed. "But I've only been with them a short time," he said.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

Here is a deal that played with such ease that the major slip by the defenders could have gone unnoticed. After the heart lead. declarer went right up with dummy's king and led a diamond. East played low, and South's jack was won by West's king. West now switched to the apade 10, won by dummy's king. Another diamond was led; East won the ace and continued with the spade queen. Declarer discarded a heart, played king and ace of clubs and then ran the remaining diamonds. At the finish, there was no guess in hearts, since West had to blank the heart queen or else throw away the queen of clubs. So declarer made 11 tricks. An interesting aspect of this deal is that the defense would no doubt have prevailed if North was the no-trump declarer with his 18 high-card points and South was the dummy with his long diamond suit. Then both East and West would have played low on the first lead of diamonds. And that would have held North-South to only one diamond trick. Are you getting the drift? West had an opportunity to beat the contract. All he had to do was play low on the first diamond lead. Granted, it's a little more difficult when declarer's long diamond suit is concealed, but it is not too difficult to assume that South has something good in diamonds. Letting him win the first trick may well scuttle his entries for the tricks he needs in the suit. That was the winning defense against today's three

Rewarded with "money" for good behavior, such as being attentive in class and doing all ussigned work, the students are able to purchase items in the school store.

By VICKI DoSORMIER Herald staff writer

WINTER SPRINGS - Tom McDowell, the new principal of Winter Springs Elementary School, spent most of his first day on the Job meeting teachers or being visited in his office by curious students.

When McDowell and his wife, Molly, moved to Seminote County in 1978, McDowell worked as a language arts teacher at Longwood Elementary School before moving to the district office as an educational diagnostician.

As educational diagnostician. "I was in charge of formulating educational plans for exceptional education students with severe speech problems in all grades," he explatned.

He was then promoted to the position of coordinator of language arts for the district. "But I miseed being in the schools," McDowell admitted. He entered the assistant principal pool and was soon assigned to Wekiya Elementary School.

"It was fun." he said of his time at Wekiya, where his son-Jimmy is a third grade student. "But I'm glad, too, to be here at Winter Springs." McDowell said that he will allow Jimmy to make the decision as to whether he will transfer to Winter Springs after this school year or not. "I want him to make that choice," he said.

McDowell said his mid-year transition to Winter Springs has been an easy one because of the support he has received from the staff. "They are a wonderful staff," he said. "They have helped me meet the challenges that I've had so

McDowell has been involved in education for nearly two and a half decades, a career that came to him almost by accident. "I had been involved in working with hearing impared students." he said. He carned his degree in education at Ball State University in Muncie, Indiana where one of his fraternity brothers was Jim Davis, creator of the Garfield eartoons. He was also a classifiate of . David Letterman, host of Late Night with David Letterman. "We didn't stay in close contact," he said of his more famous schoolmates.

Beginning his career as a language arts instructor in Illinois, McDowell moved to the west coast of Florida 19 years ago.

While the McDowells enjoy working in education, they like to get away as often as possible. "We love to travel." he said. "And play miniature golf."

The report also proposed a program of undergraduate loan forgiveness for students who pursue doctoral degrees, noting that many students do not go on to graduate school

From staff, wire reports

The Supreme Court will hear a drunk-driving case this week that could have an impact on enlorcement of the DUI laws here in Seminole County and all across the country.

In 1986, a half-dozen Michigan lawmakers became incensed over a sobriety checkpoint program designed to snare drunken drivers. saying it trampled the rights of countless unocent people. Michigan State Police, who say they took great pains to create a roadblock system that was both sale and legal, were forced by court order to shut down the operation. which netted two arrests after a little more than an hour-

The high court will hear the Michigan case Feb. 27. In addition the court also will heat a Pennsylvania case involving sobit ety field tests.

Harriett said the checks bring increased safety for all and should be welcomed by the drivers who comply with the law. In 1988, Harriett said, city police here arrested 133 suspected drunk drivers. In 1989 that count was 94.

In the two calendar years of 1988. and 1989. Semmole County Sherall's Lt. Jerry Riggins said county officers, state troopers and Lake Mary police here arrested a total of 617 suspected drunk drivers.

The average blood alcohol level of the drivers who took breath tests was 173 percent. A BAL of 10 and above is considered intoxicated. In those two years 86 suspects refused. to take the breath test and thus lost their driver's licenses. Riggins said. Women arrested totaled 69 and

Sen. Jack Welborn, R Kalamazoo, was among the group that stopped the sobriety checkpoint program.

Philosophically, I'm a conservative. Welborn says. I want to stop the drink drivers. I want to bust anybody carrying alcohol or drigs, but at the same time, but I'm also very much pro-individual

School bond issue needed to educate 21st century child

Voters in Seminole County will be faced Tuesday with the awesome responsibility of deciding the best way to pay for the management of a whopping growth rate so that it does not stampede the process of orderly, effective education.

According to the school district, the solution lies in approval of its proposed $520 million bond haue. The money would pay for land acquisition and construction of 27 new schools, as well as building renovation, high technology and other improvements to existing schools over the next eight years.

Voters will decide the issue on the basis of three considerations:

ORhetoric: Is what the district says believable - and reasonable? In other words, can school officials be trusted to have done their homework and to accomplish the tasks they have set for themselves?

• Economics: is what the school district wants worth the cost? In other words, can the taxpayers afford it?

• Morality: What is the right thing to do? In other words, economics and rhetoric aside, what is best for our children's education?

The cost to taxpayers would begin at $1.88 per $1,000 of taxable property — about $94 in the first year for the owner of a $75,000 home who takes the homestead exemption. That would increase to about $4 per $1,000 of taxable property at the end of the eight-year building period - $200 for that $75,000 house. Then, school officials assume, taxes will decrease because of an increased tax

Opponents don't contest the need for more classrooms; rather, their emential challenges focus on school officials' projections for the amount and pace of the growth, and their ability to manage economically such a massive project. Instead of the bond issue, critics advocate a scaled-back, no frills construction program paid for by a 2-mili levy, which, if necessary, could be renewed periodically by voters. Such a levy would cost $2 per $1,000 of taxable property, or $100 per year for that $75,000 house with homestead exemption.

Opposition over cost was predictable.

But, considerable other criticism and mistrust also have arisen. That's partially because, at the outset, school officials seemed to have had a casual, if not cavalier, attitude about explaining details.

School officials have reacted positively, setting up a committee to work with critical clements in the business communities. In other forums, their explanations now, while still vague if not revisionist on some points. nevertheless amount to a compelling case in favor of bond-issue approval.

The numbers underscore the importance of moving now to lay the foundation for educating the 21st Century child.

Bond-issue money, supplemented by state subsidies, would be used over the next eight years to increase the number of schools from 44 to 71 - a slightly more than 60 percent increase. The new schools are needed to accommodate a projected enrollment increase of 46,600 students to 75,649 - a slightly more than 60 percent rise.

By the time school opens in 1991, according to school officials, four new elementary schools and one middle school will be needed, as will expansion of two others. The bond issue would provide money to pay for that construction. But, if the bonds are defeated, there would be only enough levy and state-subsidy money to build two schools.

As quickly and simply as that, by next year the school district would have fallen behind without the money to catch up. And the predicament caused by overcrowding would

Or, so school officials would have us believe. Critics, in the extreme, accuse the district of scare tactics and empire building. Milder versions focus on the "generosity" of school officials at the expense of taxpayers.

In making up your mind, consider this: The current school administration's track record of accomplishment, though not perfect, is commendable, both in managing growth and in educating children.

School officials, therefore, should be entitled to the benefit of the doubt when they say a $520 million bond issue should be approved next Tuesday.

We urge all voters go to the polls and vote

Free speech taken one step too far

speech includes the right to burn a flag, beg in a subway and, now, to pour fake blood on a public

I happen to agree with the first two of those decisions. But the third one is downright bizarre. Perhaps you hadn't even heard of this new right of free speech. It was conceived in Denver not long ago when a judge threw out a case against Indian activist Russell Means, whom officials had charged with defacing a statue of Christopher Columbus. Means considers Col-umbus a "genocidal murderer." and so he dumped fake blood and mutilated Indian baby dolls on the statue last year to protest the Columbus Day holiday.

The judge who absolved Means obviously had taken the Supreme Court's flag-burning decision very much to heart. Unfortunately, she entirely missed a vital distinction: The statue of Columbus was not Means' personal property, it was not his draft card or his American flag. It belonged to taxpayers, and they were the ones who had to pay to clean it up.

What's more, a heavy burden of proof rests on those who seek to expand the shield of free speech to cover physical behavior. I've never understood, for example, how some absolutists conclude that nude dancing falls under the First some of the reasoning behind last year's defense of flag-burning.

Not that cranks should be stopped from burning their flags. They should be able to trash their furniture and cut up their art collections. too. But applying the Pirst Amendment to such behavior is a difficult stretch.

Begging, on the other hand, is undentably speech - which is all a federal judge really said when he ruled not long ago that New York could not ban panhandling in its subways. Such was the outery, however. that you would have thought Judge

Leonard Sand had legalized spouse-beating. Begging is not always welcome speech, of course, especially when the fellow with his hand out is as big as Grizzly Adams, stinks like a

Army garment ruck. But then lots of speech that rains upon us is unwelcome, including just about everything that passes through the lips of

That hasn't fazed the critics, though, most of whose objections fall into two categories:

"Beggars in large cities today don't just ask for money: they intimidate." Well, some do and some don't. And for those who do, there are still laws on the books against menacing behavior and threatened assault.

"Begging is not political speech." Of course it isn't, and it probably wasn't the sort of thing the Founders meant to protect when they wrote the

It's a little late, however, to return to original intent in free-speech law. Americans today not only have the right to say virtually anything they want, but they clearly value that freedom. If we're going to revert to traditional notions of free speech, at the very least we'll have to roll back the protections of commercial expression that have developed during the past quarter century.

The meaning of the First Amendment has clearly grown during the past two centuries. Of that we can even be proud. But surely free speech, even at this late date, does not include the right to deface public property.

Bush likes Beijing's leaders

WASHINGTON - For the moment. U.S.-China relations are off the public's mind. When President Bush told a new conference on incoln's Birthday that he was "disturbed" by news tht Beijing authorities had just raised new barriers to students' coming to the United States, the Washington Post did not even bother to report the comment.

But this is an issue that will not go away. What happens in that nation of one billion people is far too important to ignore for long. And George Bush made China policy a partisan domestic political issue when he rounded up enough Republican senators in January to sustain his veto of a bill providing extended stays in the United States for 40,000 Chinese students worried about their fate at the hands of the regime that crushed the student demonstrations in Tiananmen Square last June. Bush said his decision to handle the students' status by administrative action. rather than legislation, would keep the Chinese from slamming the door on other exchanges. More broadly, he defended that unpopular decision and the two high-level missions he sent to Beijing last year on the grounds that he, Bush, had been the U.S. envoy to China in the Seventies and should not be second-guessed.

So far, unhappily, the Chinese are providing more ammunition for his critics than they are for Bush. While martial law has been lifted in Beijing, arrests continue, peaceful demonstrations are still banned, journalists are still restricted and the Voice of America is still being jammed. New rules requiring students to work for five years before applying to continue their educations abroad are so crippling that even Bush called them "counterproductive."

The disquiet Republicans feel about Bush's policy of cultivating the current Chinese leaders was demonstrated on Feb. 7 when Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger tried to defend the policy before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Eagleburger had accompanied White House National Security Adviser Brent Scoweroft on the July and December missions to Beijing. Sen. Frank Murkowski (R-Alaska) begged him just to "take a scrap of paper and write out a paragraph I can use" in justifying administration policy to angry Chinese students. "Shouldn't the Chinese be making conciliatory gestures to us?" he asked. "Don't they need us more than we need them?"

Foreign policy experts in the hearing room snickered at what they considered the naivete of Murkowski's questions. But my hunch is that those are exactly the questions that will be at the heart of the domestic political debate if the Chinese leaders continue to make Bush's gamble look bad

Thanks to skillful questioning by three of the committee Democrats, Sens. Joseph Biden (Del.). Paul Sarbanes (Md.) and John Kerry (Mass.). Eagleburger was led into laying out the assumptions underlying the administration's policy more clearly than anyone else has

The approach to China is utterly different from the approach to Eastern Europe, he said. There, we lent our moral support and assistance to the pro-democracy forces, like Solidarity, challenging the Communist regimes. In China, we are not betting on demonstrators in the streets, apparently because we doubt those urban workers and students really have mass support in the rural peasantry. Instead, we are betting on elements in the current leadership we hope will someday pursue policies of economic reform. We are gambling. in other words, on being able to inflieence the internal power struggle over the succession to the aged Deng Xiaoping, on the grounds, as Eagleburger put it, that "the process of change in China so far has largely been led from the top."

What happens

in that nation

of one billion people is far too important to ignore for long

That makes sense to many China experts from past Democratic as well as Republican administrations with whom I've talked. But it has huge risks. Eagleburger conceded that we have "limited" influence on the power struggles within the Beijing Hierarchy. Others. including former Ambassador to China Winston Lord, argue that we are squandering whatever influence we may have. Clearly we are not making points with the pro-democracy students who represent China's future, he said, "and I don't think we strengthen the reformers (within the current leadership) by suggesting that China's leaders can continue repression without paying a price" in their relationship with the United States.

Eagleburger insisted that it also means the leaders of the Kremlin, or any other rulers, should not think we'd be as tolerant of their running tanks over their own people as we've been of the Chinese. And that is too much for most people to swallow.

Is the USSR prime for rampant crime?

WASHINGTON — The new and improved Soviet Union is experiencing a bit of Western culture that the Eastern Bloc would just as soon skip - an increase in crime. According to our sources in the Soviet Union, in too many cases it appears that the police are in league with the criminals, and the criminals' are part of a rapidly growing organized crime syndicate. Recently, during a single 24-hour period in the western part of the Georgian republic, weapons were atolen from eight different police stations and the security transportation service. The thieves made off with 1,441 weapons, including 56 machine guns. The raids occurred without the police firing a single shot. apparently having been paid off. Using secret Soviet records, our source calculated the total number of firearms ''lost'' or stolen throughout the Soviet Union on the same day as the Georgian thefts occurred. Various police training centers lost 2.069

guns; the military lost 1,952; the interior ministry police lost 1,502: other police lost 1.039; bank guards lost 296; the KGB lost 138; and Aeroflot lost 28. Either the Soviets have slippery fingers or someone is amassing a huge cache of weapons without meeting any resistance.

As the weapons get distributed to criminals, the rate of violent crime in the Soviet Union takes on Western proportions. One who has publicly bemoaned the increase is top Soviet filmmaker Stanislav Govorukhin. He makes action films and works closely with the police to develop his plots. He wrote a candid article for the Soviet magazine "Sovetskaya Kultura" and our intelligence sources tell us that the article made Mikhail Gorbachev sit up and take notice. Govorukhin related the following encounters with crime that he had over a short period:

His neighbors had saved most of their adult lives for a car. They parked it for 15 minutes. and it was stolen:

Govorukhin rented a room at a country house for cinematographers to work on a script. He heard a noise downstairs and rushed to investigate. A fellow film director had left her room for five minutes, and it was being burglarized. The police admit to an increase in such hit-and-run room burglaries. "When the resident leaves the room, they break in." Govorukhin wrote. "But that's today. Tomorrow, maybe they'll just walk in, strangle the elderly resident and take what they want."

Govorukhin's cameraman lost a wallet and important papers to a thief. Then the bold thief called him on the phone and offered to return the documents for money.

Govorukhin's research takes him through grim police cases. "How can one stay calm while looking at the photos of the dead people who were skinned alive in Fergana? How can one not shrink with horror looking at the innocent face of a boy who, together with his friends, raped his own mother? And then there are pictures of young girls with heavy makeup. They are only 11-12 years old, but they are prostitutes. They were recruited for the rich 'sheiks' in Central Asia." he wrote. "The wave of crime is rolling over the country. The streets of our cities smell of it. The thieves, the muggers, the killers are right on our doorstep. Not everybody understands that. Otherwise, the Congress of Deputies would have paid more attention to it. Govorukhin concluded by pleading for more glasnost, more openness, when it comes to talking about crime and the solutions. Publication of articles such as his indicate that Gorbachev is open to taking that discussion public.

Bond issue equals ineffectiveness

I am writing with regard to the newest "political football" in the Seminole County political arena, namely the forthcoming $520 million school bond issue referendum. It is my opinion that the cart is being placed before the horse in the manner with which the voters have been informed that their taxes will be raised to support the building of so many new schools. whether this bond issue passes or not. It will be a bitter pill to swallow regardless of the result.

My particular bone to pick, however, is with the apparent lack of consideration given by school district officials to other possible alternatives to the referendum. Several have been raised by concerned citizens who are both taxpayers and registered voters. I speak of such ideas as implementing a mandatory seventh period and year-round schools, negotiating for temporary use of church education facilities that sit idle during the weekdays, and the possible arrangements for use of vacant shopping centers around the county. The lack of concerted efforts towards these proposals is a testimony to the 'good ole boy" syndrome inherent in Seminole County politics and facilities use planning.

Playing catchup is difficult under normal circumstances, but with the added problems caused by poorly managed growth management, the task becomes overwhelming. I am a recent addition to the county, having just retired from active naval service and ignorant of the growth management problems until now... I find myself being affected more and more by what the county administrators do or not do. I am upset as much by what I see not being done, as by much of what I see being done. Why is it that they find it so difficult to resolve the schools issues and yet find it so easy to approve another shopping center or subdivision or office facility or industrial park, each of which will bring more congestion and pollution to the county? This referendum is a testimony to their ineffectiveness as managers of the public good and should be taken to task for it! I see the bond issue failing to pass for lack of solid justification and viable alterntives offered. I see an already beleagured educational system suffering further for lack of inspirational leadership where it matters most! I see John Q. Citizen being hit in the wallet again to finance further mismanagement in Seminole County. When and where will it stop?

Bicyclists must learn rules of road

It came to my attention (on a recent), beautiful Saturday morning as I was trying to drive to work in Lake Mary, that I was sharing the highway with some people that have a total disregard for the law.

The laws I refer to are: coming to a complete stop at a stop sign; yielding right of way; proper hand signal when turning;

and let's not forget the speed limit, to mention only a few. Yes. I'm speaking of the "Pedal Pushers" of our area that have nothing better to do on a Saturday morning than to travel our already over crowded highway, sometimes as many as 10-20 (bicyclists) together, two or three abreast-

Hooray for freedom, democracy

Ridiculous! Impossible! I don't believe it! Just a few years ago these would have been the comments if the following had taken place then. Recently we attended a concert at the Orlando Naval Training Base as a Soviet Major General conducted an 80 piece Soviet military orchestra playing the American national anthem, followed by the Soviet national anthem, and climaxing an hour and a half concert with Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever."

Several months ago in Budapest, Hungary, crowds jammed a stadium for a Billy Graham evngelistic service, said to be the largest religious service ever held in Eastern Europe. In Romanta celebrants publicly observed Christmas for the first and bullets, beginning World War II.

In the 1990's Perestroika presents a different image. Scrap metal from Soviet SS20 missiles, dismantled by terms of the 1987 treaty, is being exported to California and London. It is then transformed into bracelets, alarm clocks, ball point pens. and jewelry items. The Berlin Wall, longitime symbol of repression and separation, suddenly finds its destruction a symbol of newly-owned freedom and democracy.

Maybe they didn't use the same words, but some of the ancient Prophets had something to say about what is happening today. In Isaiah (2:4) and in Micah (4:3) we note these words: "For they shall change their swords into ploughshares, and their spears into printing books. They shall not lift up swords against another nation...neither shall they learn war any more.

Marxist philosophy calls religion the "opiate" of the people. In Eastern Europe religion has become the "antidote" to the plague of totalitarianism. Religious faith and ideals have been erupting into an energy which breaks the chains, tears down the walls, and points the way to freedom, human rights, and

So often we relegate religious faith and ideals to the sidelines. There seems to be some remarkable similarities between the thoughts of the prophets, and the events of today. have always been supportive of the neighborhood school concept. Rev. Oliver Brown concurred with this concept. Particularly, when his seven year old daugher had to take hazardous routes to her bus stop. From her bus stop she was transported to Monroe Elementary School. Her options were: to walk down a busy thoroughfare. where there were no sidewalks or walk six blocks on the grass that grew between the local train tracks. There was a neighborhood school, but Linda could not attend it because she was an Afrian-American.

Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall, then an attorney for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, was one of the attorneys who petitioned to have Linda admitted to her neighborhood school. Chief Justice Earl Warren and the Supreme Court handed down a landmark decision May 1954. In Brown vs. the Board of Education of Topeka Kansas the court unanimously declared 'separate was inherently unequal." This decision challenged the Plessy vs. Ferguson decision of 1896.

The 1860's and 1960's were turbulent times, although a century apart. The Civil War took place during the 1860's and the Civil Rights Movement during the 1980's Both dramatically changed America. The 1960's were marked by demonstrations and sit-ins. Americans of all races, creeds. colors, religions, protested the treatment accorded blacks.

After Reconstruction and Plessy va Ferguson a peonage system was instituted. Physically blacks had been freed, but the chains of economic disadvantage persisted. Economic disadvantage brought with it the concomitant ills of inadequate: housing, health care, nutrition and clothing. Abraham Maslows hierarchy of needs theory suggests that people are not free to become self actualized, when they are struggling to meet basic needs.

The experiences of many African Americans have been markedly different from any other group that has entered this land. Although the Airtean American presence in America predates the arrival of the Pilgrims. their fate has been a continuous struggle generation after generation to enjoy all the priviledges of citizenship.

The black experience differs from the immigrants to this country because they were not permitted to participate in the decisions that designed their life. secisions to enter this country, be enslaved, be segregated, be economically deprived, be socially ostracized and psychologically disdained. The judicial and legislative branches of the colonial governments initially legitimatized this treatment.

In the history of this country no other peoples have had to face and overcome concerted, consistent, systematic structures that impede their progress in realizing the American dream.

Brown vs. The Board of Education of Topeka Kansas was a landmark decision. The Civil Rights legislation of the 1960's also wrought changes. However, genuine changes in race relations are dependent upon individual commitment to the fatherbood of God and the brotherhood of man.

Noriega team of prosecutors in disarray

By ROBERT J. WAGMAN

MIAMI - The official word here from Acting U.S. Attorney Dexter W. Lehtmen and other Justice Department lawyers working on the Manuel Noreiga case is that things are progressing smoothly. Privately, however, sources close to the prosecution paint a very different picture. - one of confusion, concern and internal bickering

One measure of how things are going thus far is how relieved federal prosecutors were when U.S. District Judge William Hoeveler ruled that the former Panamanian strongman could be tried in a U.S. court despite his contention that he is a prisoner of war. They were even more relieved when Hoeveler relented on his previous demand that the trial start in early

Poll: Respect for labor unions increasing

BY DE'ANN WEIMER

BAL HARBOR - The union bashing that characterized the Reagan era is giving way to increasing respect for the labor movement, according to new Roper polls.

"Increasingly, the American public sees its own fate as tied to the fate of the average worker. and as a result, confidence in labor leaders is rebounding dramatically." Edward B. Keller. executive vice president of The Roper Organization, told reporters at a meeting of the AFL-CIO executive council here last week.

A compilation of recent polls. commissioned by the AFL-CIO and conducted 10 times annually in the homes of 2,000 people over age 18, show 50 percent have a good opinion of labor. compared to 37 percent in 1982. he said.

A surprising finding was that for the first time, respondents said leisure, not work, is a primary objective in their personal lives.

The use of the word "union" affected respondents' answers. with only 43 percent responding positively when asked about 'union'' leaders, compared to 50 percent for "labor" leaders

President Reagan's firing of air traffic controllers during their 1981 strike and the administration's rallying of public support for the action led to labor being made a scapegoat for many of the nation's woes. Keller said.

However, rising dissatisfaction Keller cautioned that despite among workers has helped fuel the dramatic jump in approval. their rising opinion of labor, he

"More people say they instinctively side with a union (33) percent) than a company (25) percent) when they first hear of a strike and before they know any of the details." the report concluded.

That is the highest level of support for unions recorded since the question was first asked 12 years ago. Keller said.

One of the enduring legacies of the restructuring of corporate America in the 1980s is apparently less company loyalty and more alteration on the part of employees." the report said.

"While Americans say they would need the relatively modest sum of $75,000 per year to fulfill all their dreams, this is a 50 percent increase from the $50,000 they wanted in 1987." he said.

Keller said he will tell the executive council Thursday in a private meeting that there is "an opportunity for labor to take a national leadership role on some of these issues."

If men gave birth, and other alien thoughts

Millions of American women were glued to their TV sets recently to watch the pre-gnancy and birth of a baby — to a man.

The blessed event took place in the fertile ground of the Fox Network's "Alten Nation," where 250,000 space aliens, called "Newcomers," live and work in Los Angeles. The Newcomers share many traits with humans, but not when it comes to childbearing. Newcomer men and women share pregnancy. The baby is conceived in the woman, and she carries it until the final stage of its development. That's when the mother transfers the developing child to the father, where it continues developing in Dad's "ling pod flap" until he gives birth.

The alien pregnancy was tender, touching and great fun. Alien lather George - he's a police detective - starts having contractions at work, grunting and grunacing George, cut it out? his partner implores. That was really embarrassing in the weapons locker." "That was just the pod, rotating for ejection." George explains. Later. George does the Peter Fonda pregnancy workout tape in front of his TV at home, and he overreacts when his partner temporarily works with another detective.

What, are you jealous?" his partner asks... 'No I'm just emotional poor hormone-rayaged George replies. The episodes gave both sexes a chance to experience a little of what it might be like it.

the delivery tables were turned. I couldn't help but let my imagination drift. What would it be like if human men could be pregnant and give birth? For one thing, I feel sure the bigger the baby and more difficult the birth, the more masculine the man I can imagine a conversation much like this, perhaps over a couple brewskis.

Yeah, it was rough, awright, 36 hours of labor that felt like someone was tryin' to pull my backside up over my ears. But I'm proud to say I never let out a peep, except to cuss my wife a little for doing this to me. But you should aheard the wimp next to me! Why, he sounded like a Chevy Fleetside throwin a rod and losin its muffler at the same time!

There would be Lawrence Taylor paternity clothes: "Big Togs for the Big Man with a Big Job." Nike would develop a line of comfortable shoes for those swelling ankles and falling arches, the Michael Jordan "Air Pregasus" line. Craftsman would come out with a stretch-panel paternity tool belt, and NAPA would introduce a crawler that would allow a man in late pregnancy to roll under the car and work sideways.

Congress would enact the National Paternity Act, to provide paternity leave and medical benefits for pregnant workers There would be tax breaks for companies that lose the services of valuable employees during their paternity leaves, and all childbirth expenses would be free.

I looked back over my list of changes that would accompany male childbearing and realized there was one major flaw in my logic: I was under the assumption that it men could give birth it would continue to be a process of inconvenience and pain. I don't think so.

If men gave birth, male dominated medical schools would have made the drawbacks of childbearing the No. 1 medical priority several centuries back and they'd have been climinated a long time ago. Better vet-I suspect the male-dominated world of science would have eliminated physical childbirth, and it would all take place in a glass chamber where we could watch the whole miraculous process in comfort (C) 1990 Newspaper Enterprise Association

A beautiful British novel

Passing On By Pessiope Lively (Greve Weldenfeld, 210 pp. 17.98)

"Passing On," Penelope Lively's new work is one of those lovely, quiet English novels that take an event, a moment in a life, and then let us watch it reveal or form character.

In "Passing On" the event is the death of 80-year-old Dorothy, domineering mother of Helen, Edward and Louise.

Helen, 52, and Edward, somewhat younger spinster and bachelor — are just this side of eccentric, having been unable to break out of the web their tyrannical mother kept them in at the ramshackle, decaying family home of Greystone in a small English village. Louise, the third child, has rebelled, broken loose and lives — by today's standards — a fairly normal family life in London, complete with adolescent children going through their punk. loose-ends stage.

As the novel opens, at Dorothy's funeral, we are given a taste of Dorothy in Helen's unspoken prayer: "If she was created in Thy Image, then the system is an imperfect one."

Lively's title carries a kind of double meaning. The story is not only the story of Dorothy's passing on and out of the lives of her children, but also of their passing out of her tyranny as her almost palpable presence recedes from the house and their minds.

Life goes on, Lively is saying, or, in this case, life must begin, with its small victories and defeats, and it is these events that provide the dramatic core for this perfectly realized study of character and the human condition.

Body of Opinion By Susannah Stacey (Bummit, 159 pp., 817.96)

It's hard to believe Susannah Stacey could get any better, but with her third book she does seem to have mastered the more complex

"Body of Opinion" starts out rather conventionally for a murder mystery. A party in a stately British home ends with a corpse in one bed and a list of more or less prominent suspects. After that Stacey sends the reader speculating in several directions at once, some of them kinky, as she dissects the private lives of the victim and the suspects. Murder isn't the only crime here, and Stacey is adept at keeping one wondering who perpertated what.

To figure out whodunit, Stacey enlists Inspector Robert Bone and a cast of other characters from her two previous books. They include the rock star who gave the party, an elderly woman whose ESP confounds nononsense cops, and the schoolteacher who seems destined to help ease Bone's pain over his wife's death.

What I Saw at the Revolution By Peggy Noonan (Random House, 335 pp., 819.95)

Speechwriters who put words in the presi-for anonymity.

Peggy Noonan is an exception, and then some. She also has the pride of authorship that made it possible to overcome many of the obstacles she faced as President Reagan's most eloquent speechwriter.

To prove it, she wrote a book, "What I Saw At the Revolution: A Political Life in the Reagan Era."

Noonan's talents shone through, although she ran into a lot of other egos in and around the White House, all of whom wanted to put their marks on the president's most important

Her opus is skillfully written, fun to read, mean spirited toward a lot of people who were in high places, and makes an admirable attempt at analyzing and understanding her fortune - good and bad - to have been where she was. One minute she is a wide-eyed Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm and the next minute she is the infallible "Miss Know it All."

It's also a book about her hero worship of Ronald Reagan, her faltering attempts to meet with him and to fathom him - although he did not seem to know her from Adam. The adulation continued even as she patronized him as an old man.

Because of her writing talent and research of the words of other presidents and of poets and scholars, she turned out good copy. Among the memorable speeches she wrote was Reagan's address to the nation when the shuttle Challenger exploded.

Noonan is from an Irish Catholic family of Democrats and says she was the first among her kin to see the light and become a Republican.

Her great awakening came when she was riding a bus on her way to an anti-war demonstration in Washington. She became upset by her fellow protestors' taunts against the government and decided that America's involvement in Vietnam was an attempt to help people resist a communist takeover.

After college she went to work eventually at CBS as a writer for Dan Rather and his nightly news program.

She left to become speechwriter and to her distress, found that at the White House, "the speech is a fondue pot and everyone has a fork. And I mean everyone.

Some of her toughest moments came from the "mice" as she and others called aides to White House chief of staff Donald Regan, who insisted on editing her words.

She makes it clear that she was a misfit among the wealthy young women who got their jobs through family connections. She disdained being asked to write a speech for Nancy Reagan or Maureen Reagan.

Noonan had her pals in the White House, including conservative spokesman Pat Buchanan, of whom she writes: "There's something in good conservatives that makes them happy to sit for an hour with a janitor and talk about life and the world in a way that one suspects a Ralph Nader (consumer activist) or Ralph Neas (civil rights leader) never could.'

She somehow missed the fact that she was serving in an administration where ketchup was called a vegetable, where former White House counselor Edwin Meese said people go to soup lines because they don't want to pay for their lunch, and where two Education Department officials questioned giving aid to handicapped children because they were holding back "normal" children.

She also manages to smooth over or ignore some of the crueler aspects of the Reagan

When she was bypassed for the job of chief speechwriter. Noonan left the White House. She was later pulled into George Bush's 1988 presidential campaign to spruce up his speeches.

She wrote his nomination acceptance speech, coining the phrase "kinder and gentler," which her book never was and never

History colors West European worries over single Germany

United Press International

BRUSSELS, Belglum - The slogans, only partly in jest, are many, each reflecting Western Europe's concerns over a unified Germany.

We love Germany so much we wish forever there will be two of them," says a Danish politiclan with obvious sarcasm.

NATO, the pundits say, was invented after World War II to keep the Americans in Western Europe, the Russians out and the Germans down.

And these days, usually deft diplomats are decrying the "ketchup effect" of German unification: Western Europe has been banging the bottom of the bottle, urging a splash of freedom, but ended up with a flood.

In other words, if you say you want something badly enough you just might get it. People who for decades advocated German unification (safely, they thought, seeing no realistic chancel now face it as an imminent certainty.
"Many people believe that unification is step one, that step two will be a strong Germany militarily, and that they will then want to discuss borders," said one diplomat at the 12nation European Community.

Many disagree, maintaining the catchy sayings are merely the crutchwords of cynics, and the polls support the cynic-

A survey published several days ago found 68 percent of the French population favoring unilication, compared to 61 percent in Britain, 78 percent in Italy and 73 percent in Spain. Only in Poland did a majority oppose unification.

Still, many people who say they favor unification quickly add qualifiers, much like an American politician who swears off any tax increase but favors "other revenue enhancers.

It is clearly uncool in Europe these days to oppose unification. especially among the young. The generation who lived through country's Nazi past. World War II is more outspoken.

"We wouldn't be opposed to a unification sought by the people. but European peace requires us to impose indispensable condi-tions for a new Germany, (including) the respect for borders." said Michel Debre, the French prime minister from 1959 to

On the Docklands in East London, sentiment ranges from outright hostility toward unification (Eric Boulton, 59: "Before long there'll be World War III. It's happened twice already") to historical resignation (Nick Hogan, 36: It's Germany's own business. England was an aggressive power in the past, for hundreds of years. We all have our moments"). Although some world Jewish leaders have expressed reservations, citing lingering memories of the Holocaust, Germany seems to be a non-issue in the large Orthodox Jewish community of Antwerp, Belgium. The streets there are filled with men in dark coats, dark hats and long beards. Many older residents have identity numbers tattooed on their arms, a grim reminder of Hitler's hell. "We are not thinking much about Germany." said Rachel Menezer, whose family owns a Jewish bookstore near the famed Antwerp diamond exchange. We are studying the Torah and doing good deeds and what will happen is in God's hands."

Adds another nearby Jewish merchant, "If they're acting like normal people, why not be unified. We are more interested in the politics of Israel than Germany.

In West Germany, the heady enthusiasm over unification fone newspaper headline: "God bless our German fatherland") drowns out the few voices expressing fear of future military might.

One such voice is that of noted author Guenther Grass ("The Tin Drum"), born in Poland but itving in West Germany. He rejects the concept of a united Germany because of the

"A modern crime of this extent - and Auschwitz (a concentration camp in Poland) was only part of it all - can only be done by a unified state." he said on German TV. Any cocktail-party argument against unification based merely on economic strength will quickly empty a room. West Germany is already, by far, the dominant economic power in Europe and will not "become" (the alarmists' term) a colossus by incorporating the crippled

East German economy. West Germany's $1.3 trillion gross national product accounted for one-fourth of the European Community's 95.2 trillion GDP last year. And West Germany this year will pass Japan as the country with the biggest trade surplus, at $80 billion.

Some politicians in Brussels are concerned that a merged German currency, quickly approaching, will stifle the European Community's own plan for economic and monetary union by the end of 1992.

Specifically, they are worried that the strong West German Deutschemark, the linchpin of the exchange rate mechanism of the European Monetary System. will be weakened through absorption of the East German Ostmark, driving up inflation throughout Europe.

Germany will provide a new market for companies from other nations in Western Europe and help those firms penetrate other recently democratized but still consumer-goods-starved countries of Eastern Europe.

Others counter that a unified

Freedom cries in Eastern Europe were heard all around the world

United Press International

The pro-democracy demonstrations echoing through the cobbled squares of Eastern Europe were a long way from the dusty white-washed African co-Ionial city of Maputo the first week of the new decade, when lose Catorze sat down to write his weekly column "Byway." But Catorze, a former propaganda minister for Mozambique's ruling Marxist-orientated Frelimo Party, saw certain parallels between the demise of communism in Eastern Europe and Mozambique's own growing disappointment with Marxist tdeals. A week after his column, entitled "Hope and an Uncertainty," appeared in the staterun Noticias. Catorze was fired as editor of the paper by Inlormation Minister Tendato Hunguana, who said his column portrayed communism in a negative light. "Primitive anti-communism ... is not a tradition in our country." Hunguano said when he announced the dismissal of the popular 40-year-old editor. The dispute over Catorze's column in tiny Mozambique was one of hundreds of similar ideological clashes occurring in totalitarian governments throughout the world - in Arab Kuwait and Latin Cuba; Himalayan Nepal and troubled China: in kingdoms and dictatorships as the dramatic events in East Europe unfolded.

When a confrontation between American farmers and British troops crupted in gunfire at a Massachusetts bridge on April 19, 1775, historians said it was a shot heard around the world.

leading to the eventual demise of the colonial system.

International observers say the massive movement toward democratic reform in East Europe may well be a blast heard around the world — beamed instantaneously via television satellites to the far corners of the "An earlier revolution, a technical revolution, has made this an era of mass politics," said Robert Hunter, former national security adviser from 1977 to 1980 under President Jimmy Carter. The role of telecommunications is changing the way governments are controlling their countries." Hunter said. "Right now, democracies are getting very good play."

In the recent months following the dramatic popular revolts in East Europe that toppled hardline communist governments:

-Over 300 members and sympathizers of the banned Nepali Congress Party were arrested and a half dozen newspapers banned when they pushed for democratic reform in the kingdom of Nepal.

-Indonesia's Observer newspaper took a daring, if veiled, swipe at President Suharto when it said. "(Romania's) Nicolae Ceausescu was, after all, another dictator who has found his demise in a way that seems to have become a somber promise for rulers refusing to climb off the tiger they are riding while the dismounting is still safe."

-Arabs demanding the restoration of Kuwait's banned Parliament were dispersed by tear gas and water cannons in a series of demonstrations in Kuwait City that have grown larger and more frequent.

You can be sure totalitarian governments are paying close attention to what has befallen East Europe and the Soviet Union." said a government official in Washington who did not want to be identified. "You can also be sure their people are

Observers of international alfairs say it is almost impossible for any government to keep the dramatic news from its people. Cable News Network, which has provided extensive coverage of the fall of the Berlin Wall and the bloody revolution in Romania, is beamed directly to 90 countries, spokeswoman Kitsle Riggall said from the company's headquarters in Atlanta. Radio networks, such as the United State's Radio Marti. almed at Cuba, and Voice of America, are easily accessible and microwave transmissions have made it possible for international newspapers and magazines to publish throughout the world. Only North Korea, and to a lesser extent China, have come close to sealing their borders. China's news reports on East Europe have been terse and infrequent and North Korean President Kim II-Sung, the longest surviving ruler in the communist world, has kept his country's doors closed to foreign visitors, publications and ideas. "He has kept people from owning radios and done the most thorough job of keeping his people from learning things." Hunter said. "But in general, it's hard to keep a country hermetically sealed in this day and age."

Arguments will be heard Feb. 27 in that appeal brought by Pennsylvania authorities against convicted drunken driver inocencio Muniz.

Muniz's conviction was overturned by a state appeals court, which found police should have read him his rights before asking him to calculate the date of his sixth birthday, count a series of numbers, and recite his address, height and weight.

PROGRESS EDITION

Seminole sails into the 1990s

Lake Monroe provides a signature landmark for the city of Sanford. The body of water attracts fishermen, boating enthusiasts and wind surfers from all over the area. Lake Monroe gained attention on a much broader scale early in February when the Sunlish World Championships were held here. The series of sailboat races were originally scheduled to be held in Central America but a less than desirable climate prompted race officials to move the event to Lake Monroe.

Zoo enters the 90s with new boss, more money

The number of visitors to various wildlife facilities increased dramatically during the 1980s. But the long-term outlook for new facilities is said to be in doubt because the market is becoming steadily saturated.

By SUSAN LODEN Herald staff writer

SANFORD — The Central Florida Zoological Park has entered an era of new optimism with a new director and for the first time ever, some tax-based financial support.

New director Ed Posey took charge of the facility in January and said zoo officials, after years of dissatisfaction with the park's lowland site northwest of the city near Lake Monroe, are now firmly committed to Seminole County as the zoo's home.

Posey said if a more suitable site were available in the county, a move would be considered. But a move to Orange County, a proposal from the past, is no longer a factor in the future of the zoo.

Instead, changes are being made to adapt the zoo to its present environment off of U.S. Highway 17-92 near Interstate 4, with the addition of boardwalks that clevate vistors above the marshy grounds.

Restrooms and landscaping have been improved. There are also some additions — a toucan dispay and a small spotted calf exhibit — and improvements to animal display areas such as the crocodile exhibit, Poscy said.

For educational purposes. Posey said, efforts are being made to stock the zoo with more animals native to the state and therefore more adaptable to the climate here. The zoo's emphasis on exotic animals will continue, but the Sanford zoo will also be a place to study and enjoy the local fauna as well, he

In 1989 the zoo benefited by a 6122,000 share of a new Seminole County Tourism Development Council (TDC) fund. Posey said the money was used where the animals and the public would appreciate it most.

"It affords us to move in new directions a lot faster than we would be able to. In some cases it's probably a lifesaver. It's very appreciated." Posey said of the money.

In the 53-year-history of a Sanford-based zoo, which began downtown as a fire department project for abandoned exotic animals and moved to the current site in 1975. Posey said the zoo has never before received any tax support.

As a non-profit organization, with policy set by a 15-member board. Posey said, the zoo has operated on grants, donations and admission fees and concession sales. There have been many lean years and unexpected forces such as severe cold that kept sight-seers away, and increased heating costs, have taken a toll on the budget.

Operation cost in 1989 was $1.1 million. Admissions brought in one-half million dollars and another quarter million was earned through the sale of gifts and concessions. The zoo generates about $1 million a year of its own revenue. Posey said.

The zoo is a research facility with its first major grant of $35,000 to study reproduction of

Several local museums plan expansions, improvements

By SUSAN LODEN Herald staff writer

SANFORD — For those who probe the past. Seminole County accommodates with four museums and a historical Longwood house, open for tours.

•The Henry Shelton Sanford Memorial Library and Museum, at 520 E. First Street, Sanford, is a city-owned museum, which charges no admission.

This museum chronicles the development of Sanford from 1836 to today, its primary focus is on the books, papers, art collection and household furnishings of Henry Shelton Sanford, who founded the city.

The Sanford museum, staffed by Curator Afficia Clarke, Associate Currator Mildred M. Caskey, and a clerk-typist is open Tuesday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday hours are from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Tours are geared to the desire of the visitor, who may choose to wander independently to see the exhibits. Group tours can be scheduled by calling 330-5698.

On guided tours, Henry Shelton Sanford is usually the first topic. Research is a focus of the Sanford museum, with assistance offered to students and hobbyists who are researching the history of Sanford or the time of its development, with special emphasis on the first 20 years.

The museum has auxiliary support from the Sanford Historical Society, which works to raise funds for the museum and to provide volunteers.

provide volunteers. The fundralsers will face in major challege this year as they work to raise the revenue to pay for expansion to double the size of the museum. Clarke said the go has been given and plans have be ordered drawn for the addition, but the project is in a very early stage. The expansion will bring more space for exhibits and storage.

•The Seminole County Historical Museum, located at the Five Points government complex on U.S. Highway 17-92, south of Sanford, chronicles the history of the area with displays from the early transportation, citrus, ranch, turpentine and farming industries.

Also on display at the museum, which is housed in what was originally the "County Home" for the indigent and infirmed when built in 1926, are displays of everyday life and household furnishings common in an earlier era.

The museum was developed by volunteers from the Seminole County Historical Commission. The volunteers and Curator Lorraine Whiting, of Geneva, and county employees Julie Scott, staff the museum. It is open weekdays from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. It's closed weekends in the summer, but has weekend flours during other seasons. There's no admission charge and group tours can be arranged in advance.

Big news at this museum this year is the installation of a heating and air conditioning system. The general store and the turpentine industry exhibits have been expanded.

A special addition is the Martha Fox Room, which recreates the 1920s era parlor of "Aunt Martha," a Sanford resident who was in her 80s when she died about a year ago. As a memorial to Fox, Whiting said, her relatives donated and arranged her beautiful antique furnishing for display at the Whiting said the Seminole County Historical Society is key to the operation of this museum, and helps with extra funding and special projects. Donations of litems of historical interest are welcomed.

eThe Geneva Historical Museum is a privately supported and operated museum founded and managed by The Geneva Historical and Genealogical Society. This museum, on First Street in Geneva, offers a personal glimpse into the past of the residents of this village east of Sanford. The exhibits, which can be viewed free of charge from 2 to 4 p.m. Sundays, except in the summer, traces the history of Geneva from the 1870s, when the community of Harney Cove became Geneva.

Lorraine Whiting also serves as curator of this museum. Whiting, who is from a family of Geneva pioneers, said the museum, which was developed in the 1950s, is "the personal story about Geneva. It's about someons who lived here, who worked here, who went to school

However, the collection also reflects the broader perspective of the era in which Geneva was developed until today, with exhibits of personal items as well as artifacts of business enterprises.

Whiting said those items are being rearranged so special focus can be given to specific pioneer families and to specific industries.

The 13-room, 3-story house, was originally located at the corner of what is now State Road 436 and Maitland Avenue, Altamonte Springs. In the early 1970s it was moved to its current location at 130 Warren Ave., Longwood. The house is the primary focus of the Central Florida Society for Historic Preservation.

The Bradlee-McIntyre House was built by Nathaniel Bradlee as a winter cottage. A unique feature of this Victorian house is the absence of a kitchen. Food for the original residents was cooked at the hotel, which was part of the same complex.

History is still being made in downtown Sanford area

By LAURA L. BULLIVAN Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Citizens concerned about preservation of the city's downtown district, which was named to the National Register of Historic Places in January, was formed in 1989 to make a future for Sanford's history.

The Sanford Historic Trust was formed last year to encourage restoration and preservation of the downtown area. The non-profit group hopes to raise enough money to offer grants for restoring homes in the area.

The Sanford Historic Trust held its first event May 21. during National Historic Preservation Week. The group sponsored a free walking tour through the downtown residential district, showcasing predominant architectural styles of the area and narrating documented histories of the homes.

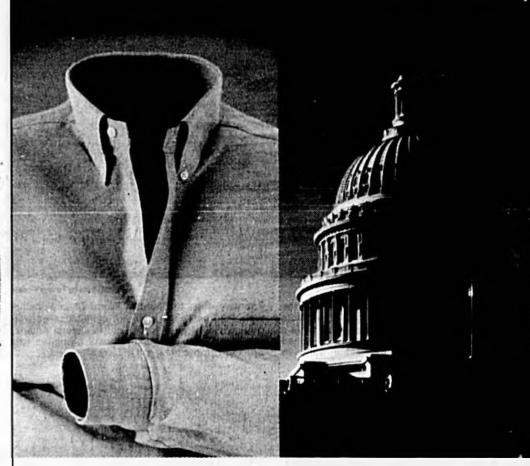

The trust's first fundraiser, a December interior four of homes, raised about $5,000. Eight families opened their homes to show off the restoration work they have done over the past few years.

On Dec. 2, more than 500

On Dec. 2, more than 500 people strolled downtown streets and browsed through the homes, some of which date back to the 1880s. Each of the homeowners told about the history of their home and antique furnishings, and about work invested in the home.

Homes on the two tours in January joined the downtown business district and 54,000 other entries nationwide on

Cruise ship provides a little 'Romance' for Sanford visitors

By BRAD CHURCH Herald staff writer

SANFORD - 1989 was a memorable year for the Romance of Florida company. A new three-deck replica of a 19th Century steamboat replaced the twin-hulled Romance in offering cruises down the St. Johns River from the

The Grand Romance arrived in Sanford on June 27 after a week-long 1,200-mile trip from the Florida Panhandle city of Freeport, where she was built, all the way around the Florida peninsula, then down the St. Johns River from Jacksonville.

The new boat made her inaugural cruises on July 1, as the old Ramance started on her long trip to New York, where she spent her first of many summers making dinner curises in New York harbor, encircling the Statue of Liberty.

The Grand romance has gained fame plying the St. Johns in the few months she has had in serivce. She was named one of the "outstanding passenger vessels of 1989" by the trade magazine Maritime Reporter, and was one of five ships pictured on the cover of the magazine's January issue.

Nanci Yuronis, president of Romance of Florida, and the Grand Romance will appear on a syndicated television show. Travel Almanac. produced by Arthur Fromer, famous for his travel books on Europe and America.

Yuronis said the changeover from operating the old Romance to the new boat was "a real challenge." The new boat is 35 feet longer than

Expressway loses some battles, but not the

SANFORD - If 1989 will be remembered as the year the Seminole County Expressway Authority lost four bouts with state lawmakers to obtain financing for a $136.4 million county toll road, let it also be remembered as the year expressway officials dusted off their hands after the scrap and developed a financing plan to build the toll road without state assistance.

And let January 1990 be remembered as the month the financing plan was approved and expressway officials OK'd selling $158.3 million in bonds to build at least 11.7 miles of the expressway between State Road 426 and Lake Mary Boulevard. The roadway could be opened for traffic in 1993.
"After so much time, all you're saying is you're wasting time," said SCEA chairman Fred Streetman after the January meeting during which authority members unanimously approved the plan.

Gerald Brinton, SCEA executive director, said he is optimistic the entire proposed County line to Interstate 4 will be completed by the year 2000. or soon thereafter.

But SCEA's January decision followed 12 frustrating months for expressway officials. Hopes the state would approve a bond-financed program to build toll roads throughout the state were lifted four times and then dashed four times by statewide political rivalries.

Since the early 1970s, central Florida officials have envisioned a "beltway" circling the entire Orlando urban and suburban areas. 1-4, the central artery for become hopelessly congested by the end of the century with growth spurred by the then-new Walt Dianey World south of Orlando.

The beltway would loop to the west from north Seminole County then return to 1-4 south below Disney World to divert tourist traffic from 1-4.

An eastern beltway, passing in the vicinity of Sanford and curving southeast then south to the Orlando International Airport, then west to I-4 near Disney World, would serve commuters from Seminole and Volusia County in getting to the Orlando airport and downtown.

Work on the beltway got under way during the middle 1980s. with responsibility for Seminole County portions deligated to SCEA and Orange County sections constructed by the Orlando-Orange County Expressway Authority (OOCEA). The western portion, because it would pass through Orange, Seminole and Lake Counties, was assigned to the Plorida Department of Transportation.

In Orange County, beltway sections were completed between the Bee Line Expressway lines. An new extension of the East-West Expressway to Colontal Drive was connected to the new expressway links.

In Seminole County, the northern terminus of the Orange County section was extended one-half mile from the county line to State Road 426. The Seminole County section was built with a $5.7 million loan from the county. The state subesequently loaned the authority $15 million for road design and land purchases.

During Amtrak's fiscal year which ended Sept. 30 - 16.617 people rode Amtrak trains through the Sanford passenger Terminal. Amtrak public relations officer Cliff Black said. The Sanford Auto Train station saw 227,527 people and cars — about 151,000 people and their automobiles - during the same

"Amtrak is a major component of the Sanford business community," Black said.

Amtrak purchases $1.5 miltion in goods and services in the Sanford area every year, Black said, and a total of $4 million in goods and services across the state. About 800 Florida residents, earning a total of $22 million annually, work for Amtrak, he said.

Transit system officials eye expansion of service area

By J. MARK BARFIELD Herald staff writer

SANFORD - 1989 was the year a sleeping giant stirred. turned over, and went back to

OSOTA - the Orange Seminote Osceola Transportation Authority sought to reform Itself into an agency with powers of taxation, bonding and condemnation. Seminole and Orange Counties and the city of Orlando looked at the proposal and suggested it needs more review

OSOTA is the 17-year-old agency that operates the 92-bus

Tri-County Transii system in Seminole and Orange Countles which carries about six million riders annually. Each county contributes towards the $13.5 million operating budget. OS-OTA also receives state and federal transit funds. Osceola County receives no service and does not contribute towards the system's operations.

OSOTA members, appointed from the three countles and Orlando, wants to expand the system to provide routes to the growing southeast Seminole County area and Deltona north of Seminole County. Limitedstopping express routes could extend to western Volusia money needed to go ahead and other facilities, officails say. County and eastward to Daytona Beach on the coast.

Because OSOTA is largely restricted to the county's con-tributions, they say the chance of expansion outside the tricounty area as slim.

Each year, we go with hat in hand, seeking handouts from each of the counties, saying This is what we need to do and this is what we need to do it." say Don Zafrron. OSOTA chairman. "If we had a dedicated do some of the things we want to

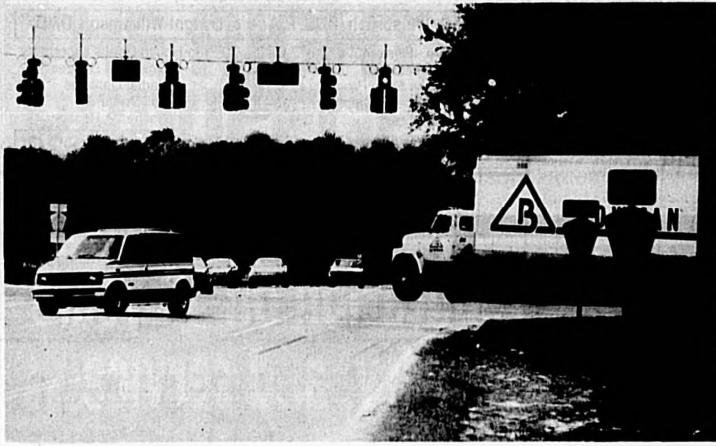

By "dedicated funding" source, Zaffron and the OSOTA officials want to be able to levy a portion of a penny sales tax, be able to sell bonds and condemnland. An eight of the penny sales tax could raise $14.3 million annually, about $800,000 more than OSOTA's current budget. Bonding would enable the agency to borrow money from investors to expand the system.

Eminent domain powers funding source, we wouldn't would allow OSOTA to condemn have to do that. We'd have the land to build new terminals and

But to gain the powers, OS-OTA needs legislative approval to levy the tax and reform itself into the "Central Florida Public Transit Authority" (CFPTA). As a state-created agency. Zaffron says the transit system would be more likely to receive legislative approval for taxation and the other capabilities.

Orange County and Orlando officials have blocked OSOTA's plans to reform into the CFPTA. OSOTA's cooperative agreement with the three counties will expire in 1992 and Orange County county and city officials have directed their staffs to prepare an agreement to extend that agreement, not to assist towards the creation of the CFPTA.

Orange County officials are in the process of reviewing possible creation of a "multi-modal" agency that would have coordinating and planning ability for all methods of central Florida transportation, air and land. A legislatively-created agency might not be as answerable to the multi-modal agency as one formed by a multi-party agreement.

The new highway intersects with Country Road 427 (Sanford Ave.) just south of Airport Boulevard. Lake Mary Boulevard extension a popular new route

By J. MARK BARFIELD Herald staff writer

SANFORD - Since 4t first opened in April 1989, more than 5,000 motorists a day have discovered the convenience of the two-mile extension of Lake Mary Boulevard between U.S. Highway 17-92 and Sanford

A planned interchange with the Seminole County Expressway will make the extension even more useful to Sanford and Lake Mary motorists traveling to and from the southern portions of the county and the University of Central Florida area in Orange

The first new road built by Seminole County in about 10 years, the Lake Mary Boulevard extension provides direct access from the busy U.S. 17-92 corridor to the industrial areas along Sanford Avenue. The roadway also relieves the congested U.S. *17-92 by providing an alternate route for traffic traveling between Airport Boulevard and Lake Mary Boulevard.

Begun in 1988, the two-lane road cost about $1.6 million to bulld. Land cost nearly $800,000. On Oct. 11, 1988, 5,419 vehicles were counted on the road during a 24-hour period, said Mark Bevis, county traffle analyst.

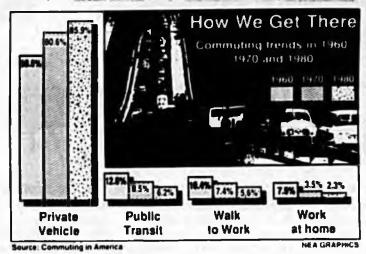

Design for the road was underway for about five years before construction began, said Fran VanPelt, county project engineer. VanPelt said early roadpath had to be shifted when deep pockets of muck were discovered. When the Seminole County Expressway path was established in Nov. 1987, other design modifications were made.

Gerald Brinton, director of the Seminole County Expressway Authority, said the Lake Mary Boulevard extension will become a major interchange with the expressay, now expected to be completed to Lake Mary Boulevard by 1993.

An American Trans Air Boeing 727 chartered by NTS Development of Louisville. Ky., picked up 20 passengers in Sanford Feb. 8 en route to St. Martin, the Virgin Islands.

Sanford rec department saw changes

By DEAN SMITH Herald sports correspondent

it was a year of change that officials hope will build toward a great future for the Sanford Recreation Department.

The Parks and Recreation Department went through a major reorganization with the Parks Department and the Recreation Department becoming seperate entitles. With the change, Mike Kirby was elevated to the position of Recreation Director.

The Department also added a new full-time employee to the staff when It hired Rocky Ellingsworth away from the Ft. Lauderdale Recreation Department.

Ellingsworth has been given the job, along with Jim Adams, of rebuilding the baseball program into the excellent program it once was. "I am ready to do whatever it takes to bring the baseball program back to the level it once was. One thing we want to strive to do is get the parents involved in the program again." Said Ellingsworth. "Over the past few years we had almost become a babysitting service with parents dropping off their kids and picking them up after the games. We are going to start the games later and try other things to get them (parents) in-

The department also took on a monumental task in hosting the Central Florida Soap Box Derby Championships in July and under the guidance of Kirby, passed with flying colors. The winners of the two groups, the kid cars and masters division, won free trips to Akron, Ohio in August to compete for the National Championship. The Department is already planning the event for this year and they hope to put on the event for years to come. The event was held on 17-92 on the hill in front of the Sanford Middle School. However, future plans call for the depart-ment to build a hill of its own in another part of the Other accomplishments in the past year were the continued growth of the Golden Age Olympics for elderly contestants and the sponsorahip of several road races and boating events.

Also making a resurgance in the last year was the softball leagues. Two years ago the league consisted of three women's teams and five men's teams competing in one summer league. Today there are six women's teams and 16 men's teams playing in four leagues, a spring, a summer, a fall and a polar bear league. The Department hopes in the future to have six teams a night playing five nights a week.

Also last year the Little Major Baseball American League all-star team (boys ages 10-12) finished second in the Leesburg sub-district and advanced to the district tournament in Port Orange. The lassic and junior girls softball all-star teams both advanced to the state tournament as did the intermediate boy's basketball team (boy's ages 14-15).

Brinton said the extention interchange with the expressway will have a greater effect on U.S. 17-92. Motorist now traveling south on U.S. 17-92 from Lake Mary and Sanford to southeast Seminole County and northeast Orange County will find the expressway a quicker route to take, he said.

Sanford becomes key site for Derby racers

By LAURA L. SULLIVAN Herald staff writer

SANFORD - About 25 area racers competed in the first Central Florida Soap Box Derby-July 15. The 13-member derby board of directors have already begun planning for the second annual event.

Immediately after the city paid $1,000 to receive its first race franchise in December 1988. Recreation Director Mike Kirby said calls from across Florida began to swamp the recreation department. The local franchise is one of 73 across the country.

The race featured a Kit Car division for younger drivers and a Masters division for older competitors.

The opportunity to compete in the race was made available to all area children ages 9 to 16 through the sponsorship of local merchants. With the technical help of mechanics from the Seminole Community College automotive technology department, the racers built their derby cars over a four-month period prior to the race.

fiberglass and built to strictlyregulated specifications. Total weight of car and driver was limited to 206 pounds for Kit Cars and 238 pounds for Masters Cars, with weights added to bring the cars up to the maximum limit for greater speed going downhill.

A ramp was built to launch the derby cars down the 900-foot race strip on French Avenue. where traffic was blocked off for nearly 12 hours while the 86 race heats were held.

Tina Hopkins. 11. Bradenton. won the Kit Car division locally. then placed 10th among 96 competitors in the All-American Soap Box Derby in Akron, Ohio In August.

Stephen Smith, 14, Winter Park, placed first in the Masters division in the Central Florida race. With Hopkins, he was given an all-expense paid trip to the All-American race in Akron.

Planning for the second annual race in Sanford has already begun. The race will be held July 14 on French Avenue between 13th and 18th Streets.

SCC teams continued to shine in '89

Herald sports correspondent

The athletic programs at Seminole Community College continue to be some of the most respected in the state, if not in the country. The men's basketball team, under coach Bill

Payne, advanced to the semifinals of the Mid-Florida Conference while posting its ninth straight season with at least 20 victories.

The basketball team has never had a losing season in the 24 years of the school's existence. Raider sophomores Terell Barnes and Terry Acox were both named to the all-conference team and played in the North-South All-Star game in Bradenion. Barnes and Acox are currently playing at Armstrong State in Savannah. Ga.

Among other players from last year's squad who accepted scholarships were Robert Ricciardelli (Flagler) and Vincent Emerson (University of Buffalol.

The women's softball team, under lleana Gallagher and Jim Robinson, finished with the first winning season in the school's history and advanced to the state tournament where they finished in fifth place. The team was paced by a pair of All-Americans in right fielder Tracy Smith and third baseman Kim King.

Community unites to build unique playground for kids

By LAURA L. SULLIVAN Herald staff writer

SANFORD — The spirit of volunteerism was strong in Sanford during 1989 as Central Florida residents gathered to build the community play-fround at Park on Park, the first sandicapped-accessible facility for children in Seminole County.

More than 1.500 volunteers turned out during the first week of November to build the playground, hammering donated lumber with borrowed tools.

Park on Park began as one unlandscaped acre at Park Avenue and Eighth Street. After the park had traded hands from All Souls School to the city, the small downtown plot went largely unnoticed and unused.

The city Scenic Improvement board adopted the city block as a project in its Pick-a-Park program. SIB, relying heavily on of uniteers, completed a three-month landscaping project in February 1989.

Volunteerism, from SiB's first difforts in the park, was the key to developing Park on Park. One volunteer, for example, put her landscaping business on hold to plant more than $20,000 in donated trees and flowers at the park. By the park's completion, Leslie Wilber had donated nearly 2,000 hours to the project.

As the second phase of the project, SIB decided to build a playground at the park. The hoard turned down the city's offer to place $17,000 of traditional metal playground equipment there in favor of something different — something that would require the assistance of the entire community to get done.

After researching types of wooden, metal and plastic play-ground equipment, the board recommended to the city commission in April 1988 hiring the Robert Leathers architect firm, renown for designing community playgrounds across the country. Architect Rachel Wagner demonstrated to parents and children what makes the Leather method of design different from conventional playgrounds on Design Day in April.

On April 17, Wagner met with schoolchildren to hear what they wanted in their future playground. Once her sketches were complete, she narrated a trip through their playground-to-be as if she were a nine-year-old girl, listing for the children elements they had requested earlier that day; a mirror maze, a space shuttle, a race car, a haunted house, access for hand-leapped children.

The architect's visit initiated the major thrust behind a communitywide fundraising effort to build the playground. The SIB playground committee marked off contributions toward its $50,000 goal on a fundraising thermometer located in the park.

The committee held a number of fundraising activities in working toward its goal, from riverboat cruises to lemonade stands. A children's festival in the park May 6, the first major fundraising event for the project, and cruises on the St. Johns See Park, Page 16

A tale of two high schools

Seminole High stood small but proud during '89 season

By TONY Desormier Herald Sports Editor

Despite having the smallest enrollment of any public high school in Seminole County. Sunford Seminole High School's athletic program continued its proud tradition of being a state power during 1989.

For starters, the Fighting Seminole girls track team won its fourth consecutive state championship. Individual champions Michelle Pearson (110 high burdles) and Adrian Illisman (330 hurdles, as well as the 440 and mile relays) provided many of the highlights.

Winning the state title last year was one of the final acts of Emory Blake as coach of the Seminole girls' track team. Blake stepped down to devote all of his energy to guiding the Seminole football team.

Fish camp owners report little progress, and they wouldn't have it any other way

By SUSAN LODEN Herald staff writer

OVIEDO - What puts the "camp" in a fish camp, when many in this era don't offer campsites?

George Cheney, who has owned the Wektva River Haven for 31 years said "Thirty years ago a fish camp was a place to pitch a tent and camp. Now it's mostly boat rentals, and no camping."

But the label and atmosphere remain pretty much the same. rustic and friendly.

Lynn Patrick, one of the new owners of the Black Hammock Fish Camp outside Oviedo, said to her a "camp" is a meeting place for persons with similar interests. In the case of Seminole County's fishermen, that interest doesn't waver, as they continue to seek out these area fish camps to help fill their needs when they're intent on reeling in the big one. The camps are also places to find ready listners for stories of "the one that got

Bill does offer boat rentals and bait and tackle. No food is available. Hours are 6:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., except in the summer, when the camp is open until 8

Full of all the sparkle and magic of the holiday season, the three-day festival debuted in December, 1989, St. Lucia is celebrated in Sweden and Scandinavia as the "Saint of Light" on Dec. 13 to mark the time when winter yields to longer days.

The featival celebrates Swedish roots in this city, which was settled by Swedish immigrants in the 1870s when General Henry Shelton Sanford had them his orange groves. But it meant more than that, according to Mayor Bettye Smith. She said it

HEATHROW - The Lake Mary-Heathrow Festival of the Arts, held each year on the expansive pastures of L&L Acres Ranch across from the Heathrow community, has never had to mature into something bigger.

The festival, which began in 1987 as an idea of several Lake Mary commissioners, was billed "largest in the history of Seminole County" when it debuted in October of that same year with an audience of more than 50,000 people.

Since then, the festival has continued to be held every October and has outdone itself each time. This past year, the third annual festival was held under perfect weather conditions and nearly 100,000 men. women and children strolled the grounds. Visitors examined, critiqued and bought the artwork of the approximately 125 artists who entered, while enjoying the rich variety of entertainment and the many delicacies at the food stands.

The attendance was up slightly from the previous year.

JoAnne Lucas, board member and finance director of the festival, provided statistics which showed attendance increased each year. About 50,000

PUBLIC SAFETY FACILITIES

Lake Mary 'heartbeat'

By SUGAM LODGE Horald staff writer

LAKE MARY - Progress in the field of public safety for Lake Mary came in the form of a new 81 million Public Safety-Public Works complex, located on Rhinehart Road.

Charles Lauderdale, who serves as the city's public safety director and police chief, said the new complex reflects the overlapping of safety services offered by the city. About half hecostofthe 20,000-square-foot facility was provided from impact fees and the remainder was supplied from general city coffers. Lauderdale

Lake Mary police are crosstrained to perform emergency medical and fire services under the "first responder" concept. Lauderdale said six of his officers are certified public safety officers, able to perform the same duties of emergency medical technicians. The first responder concept means that the first public assistance at a scene comes from a police officer, who evaluates the situation, calls for appropriate assistance and lends the injured, before dealing with police-related issues such as traffic, Lauderdale said.

Lauderdale hopes to expand that service in the future to "advanced life support" (ALS) service, with city paramedics assigned to field work, to respond quickly to emergencies. and provide care beyond the capabilities of EMTs. The paramedics might be stationed in the field and not in the station house, which is common practice, Lauderdale said.

For ALS to materialize. paramedics would have to be on staff, and Lauderdale said he has two volunteer paramedics on staff. But the department also needs a state license for the service and special equipment to qualify for the license, he said. so development of the program

The volunteer fire fighting force, under the command of Fire Chief Robert Stoddard, continues to work in conjunction with the new salaried firefighters, Lauderdale said. He added that in-house training for all firefighters has been upgraded_

This year, Landerdale said the public safety department is drawing more on volunteer resources from the community, not only in the fire department, but for police and support services as well. The city, he said, is actively scouting college training grounds for qualified firefighters. who might work first for Lake Mary as volunteers. They might. he said send up with a career in public afety, which he said now has a glut of candidates in training schools. "The police academies and fire-fighting schools are filled, but not all are ent out to be police officers or Brefighters," Lauderdale said.

We're primarily looking for home-grown folks who live in and around the city," Lauderdale said. "We're looking for people who want to pursue a full-time career as a firefighter or public safety officer, who has already started a school pro-gram, particularly at Seminole Community College. We're also trying to show youngsters in high school a direction to con-

A Volunteers in Public Safety (VIPS) program has been initalated, and is recruiting volunteers for city service, Lauderdale said. The police department benefits from a volunteer, fully certified investigator, and seven other "reserve," workers in ad-ministrative services.

The fire department has 27 "reserve," or volunteer firefighter.

A unit of youths is being formed as an "Explorer," support group for police, in conjunction with the Boy Scouts of America, Lauderdale said.

As police chief, Lauderdale commands 29 sworn police officers, and 13 civilians who provide support and dispatch ervices to police and firelighters. The public safety budget totals $1.5 million a year, with about $800,000 carmarked for police and $335,000 for fire

Police plan expansion of narcotics lab

By SUSAN LODEN Herald stall writer

SANFORD - A great stride for Seminole County sheriff's deputies in 1989 was the development of an in-house lab to analyze narcottes samples.

Lt. Marty LaBrusciano said the progress will advance further, to include lab testing for other area police agencies if a new analysis machine is purchased this year.

Until sheriff's department chemist Chris Alt was hired last year, a circa 1960 gas chromatograph/mass spectrometer (GC/MS) machine donated to the department after a county environmental services lab closed, went unused.

LaBrusciano said Alt. a former chemist for the Florida De-partment of Law Enforcement using the old machine to test for content of narcotics samples confiscated by sheriff's deputies.

Alt's analisis of about 40 such samples each week cuts the case load for the FDLE lab in Orlando. which serves many Central Florusually backlogged for months.

Alt can have test results usually within one day. LaBrusciano said, and helps keep drug cases from being lost or continued while judges wait for LaBrusciano said he hopes this year that Alt, who also serves as a crime scene technician, will be assigned only to duty as a chemist, and that she may get a new GC/MS to work with. An intern, LaBrusciano said, also needs to be trained, to be able to Crime Lab in Orlando, began fill in for Alt when she is on vacation.

By updating and using the old machine for several months. LaBrusciano said, "With minor cost we've shown it's possible to eliminate the backlog. But in anticipating growth and down ida police agencies and is time of the old machine, we want the new to gain ground.'

The department, he said, is considering buying a demonstrator GC/MS which with accessories and service fees would cost about $55,000. Money forfeited by drug suspects might be used to pay for the new machine.

LaBrusciano said the newer machine is more advanced technologically and is more efficient to use and less likely to break down.

"It would increase service and output without running the machine into the ground." LaBrusciano said.

The new machine, he said, could also be used to test the quality of drugs, to determine how close police are to original trafficking sources, based on the purity of the drug and how many times it has been mixed with another substance. The more diluted the drug, the further it is from the original source, he said.

With the additional machine. LaBrusciano said, the sheriff's department could offer drugtesting to other police agencies in the county, bringing them quicker results and further reducing the burden on the FDLE tab. It would also help eliminate a backlog of drug-related court cases. The new machine would allow prisoners who only serve time on the weekend, or trusty prisoners who work outside the jail, to be routinely tested for narcotics when they return to jail. LaBrusciano said.

The machines can be used to analyze blood and urine samples for drug or alcohol content, but their primary use at the sheriff's department, LaBrusciano said. will be to analyze drug samples in connection with narcotics

"It's a tool to prove innocence too," he said of the machine. The sheriff's department, LaBrusciano said, has a drug screening policy for empoyees as an "administrative tool.

Progress at county jail measured in classes for guards and inmates

Herald staff writer

SANFORD - This year and last, training for both inmates and jail guards is the hallmark of progress at the Seminole County

More than one-third of the Jail's average total of about 670 prisoners participate in some iype of jail-sponsored training.

Also, all 200 jail guards will have their job-skills training beefed up this year, beyond the basics required by the state, jail officials said.

Training manager Linda Cumble joined the jail staff in January in a step to fulfill long-term training improvements for guards and to upgrade standards at the jail, said jail administrator Duane Rutledge.

Cumble held a similar training supervisor position with the state department of corrections for 11 years, serving Central Florida from an Orlando base. Her move to the county fail at a salary of about $28,000 a year. she said, "Is something I've wanted to do. It will be a challenge to develop a new program. The plan. Rutledge said, is for Cumble to interview all 200 jail guards to evaluate their specific training needs. She will also develop a test, which she said be improved. The training will be specialized to serve the specific needs of the jail. Topics for increased training include suicide prevention, basic CPR and first-aid. fire training. stress taining, communications and report writing.

"They've had a lot of the basics, but they need to requilify on a lot of these things yearly." Cumble said.

Rutledge said guards are required by the state to have 40 hours of in-service training every four years. At the Seminole County Jail, he said. Cumble will increase those hours to at least 40 each year for each guard, with ongoing in-house training programs.

Cumbie said she will draw on the skills of some jail staffers as teachers. The guards will also receive some training outside the jail facility. Cumble said.
"I have the knowledge and I have the contacts." to get the job done. Cumble said. Rutledge said she is a certified Florida Department of Law Enforcement instructor and a firearms instructor. She is also certified by the state as a leacher.

This (Cumble:s addition) will make our staff more professional," Rutledge said.

•The Student Museum and Center for Social Studies at 301 W. Seventh St., Sanford, was opened by the Seminole County School District in 1964. The building once housed Benford Grammar School, and was renamed the Margaret K. Reynolds Building in honor of a former Sanford principal.

The building first served an a high school when established in 1902. All of Seminole County's schools use the museum as a teaching tool for students, with fourth and eighth graders benefiting from scheduled one-day field trips to the museum, for a hands-on-learning experinece.

It is also open to the public free of charge from 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. Groups of five or more should call 322-1902 to schedule a tour.

The museum is staffed by Dr. Donald Bates, dean of the museum, and resource teachers Adrienne Jones and Stanley Shave. Bales said this museum accepts donations of relevant items, but doesn't need volunteers.

The student museum features a Native American room, with Seminole Indian artifacts such as a thatched hut and canoes.

The decor of the Grand Romance is in the style of its exterior appearance, that of a 19th century steamboat of the type that was common on the St. Johns when Sanford was a major Florida river port, In keeping with the old steamboating theme, the Grand Romance will inaugurate a "River Daze Revue" showboat-type show on May 15, with fancy costumes, lively riverboat-type

The boat's cruise schedule will be expanded and the show will be presented on evening dinner crusies every Tuesday, Wednes-day and Thursday.

Now, the Grand Romance only offers dinner cruises on Fridays and Saturdays, and offers luncheon crusies during the week. Yuronia says the boat is docked at all other times, unless it is chartered.

tion has proven successful. The authority has collected an average of about $40,000 monthly in tolls at the SR 426 plaza.

But county planners envisioned an 18-mile expressway in Seminole County, not a half-mile entrance to the Orange County sections. In 1987, state road officials first suggested bonding the toll collections from Florida's Turnpike to raise money to build toll roads throughout the state.

The proposal was considered by the Florida Legislature in 1988, which developed a feasibility formula. The formula required tolls from "candidate" projects to pay half their expenses on opening and fully within 15 years. Seminole County's expressway met that

Four times in 1989, during the regular April-to-July session, a one-day extension, and two subsequent special sessions. lawmakers failed to put aside regional squabbling to agree to approving bonds for a toll road-building plan of any kind. The Seminole County Expressway bounced up and down on proposal lists, ranging from 12th place to second.

But amid much fingerpointing, lawmakers and Gov. Bob Martinez failed to reach an agreement for a toll road construction program. State lawmakers said there is little chance of a program coming out of the upcoming April session.

The fallure proved so frustrating that Heathrow developer Jeno Paulucci offered to arrange to build the road using private financing in return for keeping tolls for 30 or 40 years and carn a small profit. Expressway officials considered the offer, but state laws that would have to be changed and other hurdles to the plan made it unattractive to them now.

Defeated by the state and with little apparent alternatives. expressway officials developed a plan late last year to sell bonds. to be repaid in the form of tolls. and build the road locally. Traflic and toll estimates indicated $158.3 million in bonds could be sold, enough to finance a scaled-down version of the expressway that would terminate at the new Lake Mary

Boulevard extension.

The bonds would also repay $18.5 million owed the state and $6.6 million owed the county in loans and interest.

Under the plan, expressway officials found the most affordsble design would be to extend the four-lane toll road from its current stopping point at SR 426 north to State Road 434. The highway would then merge to two lanes and continue north over Lake Jesup up to County Road 427. Exil and entrance ramps would then tie the expressway to Lake Mary Boulevard.

Unless bids are received that are substantially lower than expected, expressway officials don't anticipate building the complete four-lane road to U.S.

17.92. Toll revenues from the additional half-mile between Lake Mary Boulevard and U.S. 17-92 would not pay the additional $14.5 million it will cost to build the additional roadway and the interchange at U.S. 17-92.

SCEA director Brinton said lower-than-expected bids may be received because the state has cut road-building and road contractors are hungry for work.

The bonding program will require Seminole County commissioners, who comprise five of the seven SCEA members, to pledge $3.1 million in county gasoline taxes and state-shared revenue annually to secure the highest bond rating and assure a quicker sale. The bond has nearly $11 million in contingency funds, so bond drafters say use of the county revenues is unlikely.

If toll revenues exceed projections for two years running, the county pledge will be released. County commissioners were scheduled to consider the piedge proposal in February.

If the bonds are sold later this year, construction on the road can begin in 1991 and be completed by late 1993, Brinton

Brinton said even if a smaller-scale toll road is built by 1993, he is confident the fourlane expressway will reach 1-4 by the year 2000. Brinton said toll projections show excess tolls beyond what is needed to pay the bond debt could be used to complete the expressway to U.S. 17-92 if the $158.3 million bond does not pay the full cost to build a four-laned road to U.S. 17-92.

wasn't as great as expected, the bottom line was far greater than any prior years." Lucas commented about last year's turnout. Her report showed the festival raised $89,109 last year. as compared to $75,135 in 1987. Its net income was $25,252.

'We have projected a net income of $35,000 in 1990," Lucas said.

The festival depends on the generous donations of its sponsors - the Heathrow community at the L&L Acres Ranch and numerous area businesses. Contributions last year reached $36,000, as compared to $22,000 in 1987 and $24,000 in 1988, according to Lucas' report.

"We're delighted at the support at both the individual and corporate levels, and feel the community has made a strong statement that they are supporting the arts," said Festival Chairman Bonnie Manjura.

To avoid a conflict with another festival this year, the board of directors who carefully organize the event, has already decided that it should run Oct. 6 and 7, so both festivals can enjoy maximum attendance.

'We project a dramatic increase in attendance in 1990, based on the assumption that there will be no competition on our dates, and we intend to invite three times as many artists," Lucas said, noting that the ranch can handle 200,000 people and can also accomodate evening entertainment on two large stages.

Last year was the first time evening entertainment was offered. The Florida Symphony Orchesten, which performed in concert was the only ticketed event and proceeds from that performance helped raise funds for the orchestra. Organizers say if all goes according to plan, they expect the orchestra to return this year.

The entertainment during the 1989 festival ranged from local talents and storytellers for children to nationally-acclaimed performers. There were international strolling bands wearing authentic costumes and childrens' art workshops.

Winning artists received $15,000 in cash awards, not including purchase awards.

A unique feature about the festival is that it donates a portion of its income exclusively for art scholarships to area high schools and colleges.

Lake Mary led county in 1989 commercial growth

By J. MARK BARFIELD Herald stall writer

SANFORD — Seminole County commercial construction lagged in 1989, showing increases in Lake Mary but decreases in Sanford and unincorporated Seminole County.

Industrial parks experienced steady growth during 1989, with most reporting new tenants.

In 1989, there were 750 commercial construction permits tasued by the Seminole County Building Department, which permits construction in the unincorporated areas of the county. That number was down sharply from 1988, when 876 commercial construction permits were issued.

The Sanford Building Department witnessed a similar sharp decrease, dropping from 21 commercial and industrial permits issued in 1988 to 10 commercial permits in 1989. No industrial permits were issued last year.

Lake Mary showed continued growth. The city building department issued seven commercial permits between Oct. 1, 1987 and Sept. 30, 1988. The city issued 13 commercial permits during the 12 months following Oct. 1, 1988.

Area commerce parks report steady growth, with each park in the county reporting one or more new tenants. The Heathrow international Business Center west of interstate 4 gained the most recognizable new tenant in the county — the American Automobile Association.

AAA opened the doors to its 400,000-square-foot national corporate offices in November after moving from Falls Church.

A shopping center will open later this year on this site off U.S. 17-92 near Seminole Community College.

County chamber official sees bright future

By J. MARK BARFIELD Herald staff writer

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Oflicials of the Greater Seminole County Chamber of Commerce look ahead to the 1990s with hopes of playing a greater role throughout the county.

"1989 was the first year the chamber truely became a countywide agency," said chamber executive president Bob Lewis. "I think we will continue to develop that trend into the 90s."

Begun as a south Seminole County business organization in 1974. Lewis says about 1,000 the 1,500 chamber members are from businesses outside of the A I t a m o n t e S p r ings-Longwood-Casselberry area. Just two years ago, two-thirds of the chamber's membership came from the three cities, Lewis said.

The percentage of members from Altamonte Springs alone dropped from 40 percent in 1987 to 18 percent in 1989. Lewis says. "I think we'll continue that trend as we become more of a countywide voice," he says.

We had to come to grips with the fact that chambers are changing. Businessmen no longer join chambers to provide service to the community, they now join Rotary or the other groups for that. They join the chamber to make money.

-Bob Lewis, Executive President Greater Seminole County Chamber of Commerce

Lewis is quick to add that as the chamber grows to true countywide status, that growth will not be at the cost if city chambers, including the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce.

"We'll be striving for less conflicts and more cooperation." Lewis said. In 1989, the Seminole and Sanford chambers conducted several joint meetings, one to consider a proposal for a $542 million school construction program and another to consider the economic forecast for the 90s.

The Seminole chamber moved into a more public role through continuation of the popular

Politician's Hob Nob each fall which brings the community together with candidates. A computerized straw poll was first taken at the Hob Nob in 1987 and has proven a close gauge of election-day outcomes.

In preparing for the 1990s, Lewis said the chamber developed their first five-year plan that sets goals in four major areas — government affairs, economic development, education and member services.

"We had to come to grips with the fact that chambers are changing." Lewis said. "Businessmen no longer join chambers to provide service to the community, they now join Rotary or the other groups for that.
They join the chamber to make money."

To more firmly establish itself as a component of the government affairs of the county. Lewis said the chamber will continue its endorsements of issues and other public forums to firmly place the chamber's views as a vital component of community opinion.

To promote economic development. Lewis said the chamber plans to continue on its goal of redevelopment of U.S. Highway 17-92 as the "Main Street" of the county. Lewis said the chamber also wants to be the county's economic development agency, not only in cooperation with the Industrial Development Commission of Mid-Florida Inc., but also as the advocate for Seminole County.

In the area of education, Lewis said the chamber will strive toward establishment and promotion of Seminole Community College in Sanford as a business resource for use in not See Chamber, Page 27

SANFORD — Southern Bell in 1989 brought technology of the future to Seminole County, making Heathrow the country's first community to be offered a new fiber optic network.

Southern Bell serves 52,400 residential and business access lines — or about 50,000 customers — in Sanford, Lake Mary, Winter Springs, Geneva and Oviedo. The number of customers in Seminole County grew by nearly nine percent last year, according to Larry Strickler of Southern Bell.

Heathrow was heralded as the city of the future last year when it became the first community in the nation to be offered the Fiber to the Home service, the first such network used to deliver digital voice, data and video services over the same

Call Return, a feature which dials the number of the last person to call, is one of the capabilities of Touchstar. In other areas where the new technology is available, including Miami, additional features available include the capability of identifying from a customer phone the telephone number of prank callers.

Southern Bell may be able to offer additional services and technologies in the future. If Congress allows Bell companies entry into other areas of telecommunications. Strickler said. The companies have asked Congress to allow them in the fields of manufacturing, long Bee Phones, Page 27

SANFORD - The Seminole County School Board has brought controversy upon itself as it trys to look into the future.

"Because of our rapid growth in this district," board chairman Ann Neiswender said, "we can not afford to act slowly. We have to be prepared to move ahead to keep pace with the growth."

On Feb. 27, the voters of Seminole County will be voting on a proposed half-billion dollar bond issue to build 27 new schools, a new district administration building and to renovate the existing 44 schools over the next eight years.

School officials say the building plan is necessary to accommodate the estimated 27,000 to 30,000 students who will enroll in the public schools during that time.

Under the proposed bond issue, the owner of a $100,000 house in Seminole County will have to pay an additional $80.44 per year in school taxes. According to Carey Ferrell, district assistant superintendent for business and finance, that figure is at the high end of the scale. noting that he'd "rather estimate too high than too low."

Ferrell said that he hopes the tax bills would reflect an increase of little more than $75 on a $100,000 home.

The bond issue had originally been projected to be about $300 million, but increased to nearly $520 million as budget proposals were more clearly de-

For a time the board considered using impact fees to pay for some of the proposed projects. but a court ruling in St. John's County ruled that impact fees were illegal. While that ruling only affected that northeastern Florida county, board members decided that it would be better not to count on those dollars in case the fees were ruled to be

Protests caused a revision of the figures. The new proposal called for 318 sixth, seventhand eightle-graders and 264 high school students to attend new schools in the fall. At public hearings, parents continued to protest and the board agreed to transfer only 150 students to

Elsewhere in the district. Greenwood Lakes Middle School. 601 Lake Park Drive in Lake Mary, was selected as a National Secondary School of Excellence by the U.S. Department of Excellence.

The school was chosen for its success in academic achievements. Principal Ted Barker credits an active parent and volunteer group for the success of the school's many programs.

He also attributes the school's ability to meet the needs of a diverse student population, including the trainably mentally handicapped and the Knowledge Master Program for gifted students.

"We had a very productive 1989," said school board chairmn Ann Neiswender, "We accomplished some goals and are closing in on some others. but we can not afford to look back. We must always look to the future."

No slowdown in sight for surging school system enrollment figures

By VICKI DeSORMIER Herald stall writer

Seminole County schools have been growing by leaps and bounds over the last few years and it seems unlikely that the trend will change any time soon.

Over the last five years, the district's student population has increased significantly for the kindergarten through fifth grade and the ninth through twelveth grade levels. Middle school numbers have increased only

The small increase, .8 percent ver the five-year period from 1983 to 1988 (the last year for which exact figures are available), in the number of sixth through eighth graders reflects the statewide birth rate figures which show that the number of births in Florida reached its lowest point in 1975 and have increased steadily since that

These projected figures are not arrived at lightly. They are based on a formula that has been very accurate in the past.

-Ann Nelswender School board chairman

In 1983, there were 16.281 elementary school students enrolled in Seminole County schools. In 1988 there were 21.028. That 29.2 percent increase represented the need for space and services for 4.747 new students. It is expected that by 1993, there will be 29,300 youngsters in the Seminole County elementary schools. Student populations increased 18.1 percent in the district's high schools between 1983 and 1988, jumping from 37,599 to 44,408. By 1993, there will be 57,690 high school age youngsters in the schools

"These projected figures are not arrived at lightly," com-mented school board chairman Ann Neiswender, "They are based on a formula that has been very accurate in the past."

The high schools have actually en a decrease in the number of students in the last few years. Currently, there are approximately 960 fewer ninth through twelveth graders than there were in 1988. The number is expected to rise steadily beginning next year. The short-lived decrease is, again, linked to the drop in the birth rate in the mid-1970s

Some schools forced to look for more teaching space

By VICKI Desormien

OVIEDO - The youth population of Seminole County is expanding faster than classrooms can be built to accomodate them.

At Oviedo's Stenstrom Elementary School there are 1,136 students enrolled in a facility designed for 773.

"Students are getting an education," Martanna Stronko, the president of the Stenstrom Parent Teacher Association (PTA) said recently, "but they are being taught in planning areas and resource rooms."

The makeshift classrooms are approximately 12 feet by 11 feet. Teachers have to pile furniture out of the way to make room for reading circles.

PTA officials are not happy with the conditions.

In a survey done at the beginning of the school year, one

Principal Norma Ragsdale is acutely aware of the problem.

We are in one of the fastest growing areas of the county and Seminole is one of the fastest growing counties in the state," she said. "There is no end in sight for this growth."

For four months before

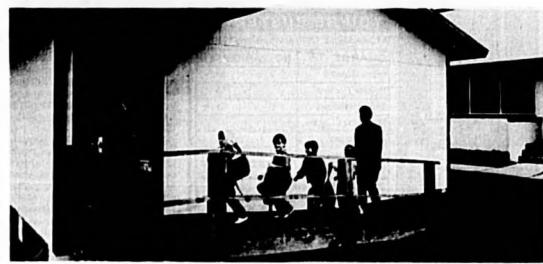

Stenstrom opened its doors at its current location, it was housed in portable classrooms on the campus of Lawton Elementary School

"We were overcrowded before we even moved in here." Ragsdale said.

Twenty eight percent of the parents said they would not object to realigning the school attendance zones so that their children could attend classes in less crowded conditions. Fiftyseven percent of the survey's respondents felt the more efficient use of available space, through a modified calendar (year-round classes) would be the most destrable solution.

The Seminole County School Board recently voted to implement a pilot modified calendar program in at least one elemetary school in 1991.

Special CCIB agents will comb county for drugs this year

By SUSAN LODEN Herald staff writer

SANFORD - The development this year of a specialized unit of experienced drug agents to focus on long-term investigations targeting narcotics truflickers, is a major project of the City County Investigative Bureau (CCIB).

Seminole Sheriff's Lt. Donald Eslinger heads CCIB. a countywide drug-vice task force comprised of support staff, sheriff's deputies and city police officers. Sanford, Lake Mary. Longwood, Oviedo, Altamonte Springs and Casselberry police all provide one agent each to the Eslinger said this year his unit will continue its involvement with the Florida Sheriff's Association Statewide Crack Cocaine Task Force, which in three statewide busts last year netted about 5,500 suspects, most of whom were crack cocaine users. Eslinger is the coordinator of that task force in the eightcounty Central Florida zone.

CCIB's usual activity includes investigating, infiltrating and arresting local street dealers, buyers and drug traffickers, as well as those suspected of other vice crimes such as prostitution.

Special emphasis this year, he said, with the new CCIB unit of special agents, will be on major drug traffickers living and operating in Seminole Couty. We will be taking advantage of the new 'king pin statute,' which targets individuals who run criminal organizations." Estinger said.

A cooperative effort not only involving various police agencles, but other elements of the criminal justice system, Eslinger said, in the past year enhanced drug enforcement on all levels.

By operating reverse stings, with police selling drugs to users, both in the Sheriff's Association stings, and numerous independent operations. Eslinger said he feels CCIB was responsive to complaints from affected communities. He said he expects to continue to support community efforts, which involve cooperative citizens in busting drug operations through their tips.

SANFORD — Seminole County Sheriff John Polk said his de-partment will take a big step forward this year if the Seminole County Commission and voters approve a one-year, one-cent local sales tax to pay for a new sheriff's administrative building and an addition of 400 dormstyle bed spaces at the county

Polk said the tax, which is similar to one in effect in 1985 that financed an 800-bed addition and renovation project at the jail, would be in effect in 1991 if approved by voters this

City police departments would also receive a portion of the tax to pay for capital outlay projects. Polk said. The county's estimated share would be about $14 million and construction should be completed on the administration building at the Five Points county government complex in 1992.

The current sheriff's office is Teased from the Sanford airport authorities and is too small to house all of Polk's staff, he said. Patro-deputies operate out of the Longwood police station and will continue to do so until a new

In 1992, Polk, a Republican, who is in his 21st year as Seminole County sheriff, will seek a seventh term in office, he said. Polk underwent a double heart bypass surgery in Nov.

This year, Polk. 58, will operate his department, which includes the county jail and the City County Investigative Bureau (CCIB), with an annual budget of $21 million, up from $18.5 million last year. Of that total, $500,000 is earmarked for CCIB, for which the sheriff provides all support and administrative services and equipment, as well as more than two-thirds of the manpower. CCIB is a countywide drug-vice task force under the command of Seminole Sheriff's Lt. Donald Eslinger. In addition to sheriff's deputies as agents. CCIB is also served by one agent from each of the city police forces in the county. City police departments who provide CCB agents are responsible for those agents' salaries. Winter Springs is the lone city without an officer in CCIB.

Polk supervises a staff of 187 sworn officers, with a total of almost 500 workers in both the department and at the county jail. He will ask the county to fund 33 new positions in the coming year.

Cops on foot and improved radio communications gear marked Sanford PD progress

By SUSAN LODEN Herald stall writer

SANFORD - Improved for Sanford police, with the addition of a new 800 megahertz police radio system, as well as initiation of community based policing, which last year put some patrolmen on foot in some troubled areas.

The foot patrel came to the public housing projects in West Sanford after Sanford Police Officer Tim Welter suffered a gunshot wound to the head while answering a call there May

Police responded to the shooting by trying to get closer to the good citizens in that drug-plagued area, so mutual support could develop, said Police Chief Steven Harriett.

Harriett said community based policing began here in August with four officers and has been successful thus far. The service may be extened to other areas this year, Harriett

The new radio system gives police greater privacy in their communications, because criminals can't monitor police talk as easily as they could in the past. The new $1.5 million system also has a greater channel capacity, which Harriett said is necessary as the demand for police services increase. In 1989, he said, city police received a record number of calls for service - more than 65,000. Arrests were made on 4.200 individual charges with some filed against the same suspects. Harriett said.

Harriett, 36, who has been police chief almost live years, supervises a staff of 100, including 80 sworn officers. Four of those officers were added in 1989 along with one records clerk, he said. Sanford police operate with an annual budget of almost $4 million.

The department also received about $50,000 in funds forfeited by narcotics suspects last year. That money is carmarked to purchase items needed in the war against drugs.

Police Chief Steven Harriett

'Drugs and related crime continue to be the most pressing problem we face. With attending violence we face retaliation and injury or death to innocent parties. Enforcement, prevention and education, is the thrust behind our school resource of-ficer program." Harriett said.

This year in the city, the SRO program was expanded to Goldsboro Elementary and Crooms School of Choice. In the past, all high schools and middle schools in the county have had armed lawmen on duty in the schools to teach, counsel, support youngsters, and to enforce the law. Harriett said he expects to see greater expansion of the program to include all elementary schools in the future. The school district and participating law enforcement agencies equally share the cost of the

Longwood PD has 'come a long way'

Herald staff writer

LONGWOOD - "We've come a long way, but have a lot further to go," Longwood Police Chief Greg Manning said of police efforts to keep pace with Manning has been a Longwood policeman for 18 years and has served as the city's police chief 13 years.

Manning said that in the 'old days," Longwood lawmen would deal with about 75 calls for service each month. The total, which includes calls from citizens as well as traffic tickets issued and accidents investigated, is up to about 2,500 calls a month at present, with an anticipated increase this year to 3.300. Manning said.

Longwood police investigated 1.500 traffic accidents last year. Capt. Terry Baker said. Outside traffic brings the number of cars traveling State Road 434 through the city to 56,000 every 24-hours

The daytime population of Longwood, Manning said, swells from 4,200 residents to 60,000 people, with 25,000 who live or work in that city spending at least eight hours a day there.

When Manning, 41, became a Longwood policeman, he said the city had a stable residential population of 3,300 and 100 businesses. Today the city is home to 1,900 businesses

Because of the rapid growth and the transient population, Manning said his force is pushed to provide police services. Last year, community relations and Neighborhood Watch, and robbery alert programs had to be dropped. The manpower had to be used just to keep abreast of breaking crime and responding to demands for service related to actual crimes.

Manning supervises 30 full-time and four part-time sworn police officers as well as a support staff of five full-time and one part-time worker. The department had two volunteers. No new police officers have been added to the force in four years Manning said.

This year he is asking for four. and expects to receive funds from the city to hire two new workers. One of those will be a civilian, hired at a lesser cost than a police officer, to work as an investigations researcher and and some who in the past had fingerprint technician. The other will be assigned to the motorcycle patrol force. Manning said.

We're reactive. That's all we have been for the last two years." Manning said. "The city is going to have to bite the bullet and add officers. We're no longer a small town. We have a large transient population. A lot of criminals come in from outside the city, and that calls for a lot of investigative follow-up.

Manning said his officers are well-trained and added. "There's not too much we have to ask someone else (another agency) come in and do for us." However. Manning said he doesn't hesitate to draw on expertise or equipment offered by other agencies as needed.

He contributes an agent to the county-wide vice task force, the City County Investigative Bureau, but added that Longwood detectives sometimes investigate their own drug cases.

Last year for the first time Longwood police were issued semi-automatic 9 mm sidearms. Manning, who perefers the old style revolver himself, said his officers like their new weapons trouble meeting the mandatory 85-percent score on their every-other month firing range test had an easier time achieving that score with the new weapons.

Longwood police, he said, also rely heavily on stunguns, which administer a 50,000 volt electrical shock and offer police greater protection, with less chance of seriously injuring a suspect in a fight.

To add to routine in-service training. Manning linked his departmet into a national police television feed last year. The system broadcasts programs on all topics pertaining to law enforcement training and legal updates, he said.

Last year, Longwood police became the focus of controversy when a police sergeant pursued the fleeing car of a 15-year-old Lake Mary boy and his two companions on a high-speed chase into Orange County. The chase ended in a crash that killed the boy, one of the girls in his car, and a 20-year-old mother whose car was struck head-on by the boy's car.

LONGWOOD - In this age of video. Longwood police are taking advantage of a new national police training program yhat began last summer.

Satellite transmissions from the Texas-based Law Enforcement Television Network (LETN) feed law enforcement officers lessons, news, court rulings, and analysis of police issues into the police station 24 hours a day. Police Chief Greg Manning said his department and Mount Dora police are among the first in the nation to link up to the system. "Just because we're Longwood, doesn't mean we can't be progressive." Manning said. We feel proud to be among the first. Some like the concept and some don't. My only concern is for my agency. It serves my agency. That's my primary concern. The network draws on the experience of retired law enforcement officers and a legal staff. Manning said, to produce programming to train lawmen at all levels of experience. Longwood police have a oneyear contract for the system at a cost of $4,500 a year. The system supplements, but doesn't eliminate the need for other types of training, including guest lectures at the station, attending outside schools and other video training devices, Manning said.

Longwood police may record and re-show the LETN material. Manning said a schedule of monthy topics is issued and

SANFORD — A return to "pounding a beat," and getting to know area residents paid off for Sanford police last year.

Police Chief Steven Harriett said he hopes to expand the program and to add two new community based patrolmen to the four-man force.

The return to this oldfashioned style of patrolling came to Sanford's westside public housing projects in June, In response to high-daug related crime in that area and the gunshot wounding of Police Officer Tim Welter in May, Harriett

"It seems to be a trend of law enforcement as a whole, this thrust toward community or-lented policing," Harriett said.

"Our thrust this year is to expand this concept under this style of policing, It's a philoso-phy that seems to reap benefits by concentrating specific officers in specific areas. It frees other officers to address other issues on a community wide basis. I think we made a positive re-sponse to a negative situation," Harriett said.

THE PERFORMING ARTS

Several opportunities available for aspiring actors, dancers

By SANDRA BOUCHAMME Herald People Editor

SANFORD - In terms of cultural arts. Seminole County is a cornucopia of talent.

Seminole Community College, for example, has a Fine and Performing Arts Department which offers a comprehensive program encompassing art. music and theater.

According to Dr. Karen Copp. cultural arts coordinator at the college, the program is strong. and so is the public demand for

The college contains a gallery from which the public can view eight different exhibits of artwork, a theater and a concert hall, and "classroom space to support all these areas." Copp says. There is also an instrumental and choral room with many practice areas.

In the art wing, there are several studio spaces and classrooms. The theater features a furnished workshop area and a storage area.

The college students present four plays a year, with seven performances of each.

This represents a recent expansion in 1989 from five performances to seven, Copp says. The next play, "Under Milkwood", a drama written by the late British poet Dylan Thomas, is now under way and is scheduled to run through the weekend of March 2-4.

The final production of the year will be Richard Nash's "The Rainmaker." It will be directed by Richard Fallon, who will be in residence at the college beginning March. Fallon is the founder of the prestigious School of Theatre at Florida State University who has collaborated with Burt Reynolds in creating the Burt Reynolds Actor Training Institute in Jupiter, Fla.

With Central Florida's new role in the entertainment industry, Copp says the college finds its enrollment in arts "tend to be full."

To accomodate the demand, the college plans to add acting classes for its fall season in late August, she says.

Although Copp says no building expansion is planned, she says she feels that it may one day become necessary.

We're certainly bursting at the scams," she says.

Copp says that about 18,000 people during 1987-88 have been through the college for recitals, plays, concerts or art exhibits, but she notes that some of these individuals are repeat visitors.

"We have quite an active building here," she says.

Another indicator of a strong cultural arts scene here, is the opening of a motion picture and television production studio in Longwood.

Producer Jeff Singleton, who has produced a number of television shows, started Sliver Eagle Films/World Affairs Center.

Singleton, recently voted to the board of directors of the Motion Picture and Television Guild of Florida, says he expects to see more and more production from Central Florida. He has opened his Seminole County studio, even though he has taped television shows in the far-flung capitols of the world, because he says he believes the area is where the action will be.

Singleton recently filmed a movie at The Barn, a countrywestern nightelub, the Holiday Inn-Lake Monroe and other areas in Sanford, using local talent and even some political figures, such as county commissioner Jen-nifer Kelley, as guest actors. "The Faded Circle" is scheduled to appear on television sometime this year.

Dance and music also has a large following in Seminole County

The Ballet Guild of Sanford Seminole, a non-profit civic organization, provides extraportunities for youngsters and perpetuates an appreciation for dance in the community.

The guild was formed 22 years ago by Valerie Weld and Miriam Wright, co-directors and also co-owners of the School of Dance Arts in Sanford and Lake Mary. It is governed by a board of directors and is supported by

"The purpose is to bring culture in the form of dance to the community," Weld says.

It has succeeded in the accomplishment of that goal quite auccessfully in its numerous shows for service organizations. art festivals, and school lecture demonstrations in Seminole and Volusia counties.

Last year, the guild presented a monumental ballet. "Doo Wah Diddy", a spring concert which involved 87 people. The produc-tion was viewed by an audience of 1,500 people including guild sponsors and the general public and was filmed by Channel 35.

Also last year, guild dancers performed a balletle vignette for the first St. Lucia entitled the "Circle of Light". And they co-sponsored a visit of an entourage of Soviet dance choreographers who are associated with the Bolshoi theater company. It gave many sponsors and other interested persons the opportunity to meet and socialize with the Soviet people, and dancers were lucky enough to be able to take dance lessons by these renowned artists. For the new decade, Miriam and Weld say they are working on a ballet entitled "Who Shot Diddy?", a murder mystery which Weld says is a take-off of the popular "Do-Wah-Diddy."

This will premiere in 1991. "It's a two-year project." Wright says.

in April, the ballet guild will sponsor its annual party to thank the sponsors for their continued support.

"We try to develop ballets that have a lot of appeal, and that's what the ballet guild is famous for," Weld says. Membership to the guild begins at age 10 and is by audition only. Concert loyers have no lack of music due to the efforts of the Seminole Community Concert Association which is in its 51st

For its 1989-90 season, three concerts were scheduled. Members' tickets are reciprocal with concerts by New Smyrna Beach Community Concert Associapany.

Cardinal, which manufactors modular living units for use in homes, condominiums, apartments and motels, began in the early 1970s developing projects financed by investors and bank loans. The bank loans, which financed the majority of the cost of each individual project, were made based on the "seed" money put in by the investors.

Federal tax laws through the 1970s into the early 1980s made investment earnings attractive to small groups investors who would be joined together into partnerships with Cardinal to finance the hotel or apartment or other development projects comprised of the Cardinalmanufactured modules.

The program was incredibly successful and by 1986, Cardinal was one of the top five builders in the United States doing more than $800 million in business from five factories throughout the country.

But the Tax Reform Act of 1986 changed all that. The tax incentives were virtually removed and combined with climbing interest rates. Cardinal's investment market dried up. And when no investors were providing seed money for projects, banks stopped making Debts mounted and counid not be paid. Operations were consolidated and layoffs followed. And continued.

Cardinal began placing em-phasis on home sales, targeting first-time buyers, but the downfall came swiftly and in May, the parent corporation and its subsidiaries filed for federal bankruptcy protection. The case is still pending.

Rick Colegrove, a lawyer representing about 20 employees said they would meet to decide whether to ask the company for unpaid benefits.

Longwood. They said new bus routes, drawn up by management without consulting the drivers or school officials, had left many students standing on street corners waiting for transportation to school and put loo many students on some buses and too few on others.

Drivers voiced complaints about entire apartment complexes and housing developments being excluded from routes. leaving hundreds of students without a way to get to school.

The drivers were also unhappy about the way that many of the district's mentally and physically handicapped students were mainstreamed into the system. While no transportation employee complained about the mainstreaming of those students, they said that they were given neither the special training nor the assistance they needed to deal with particular needs of the handicapped students.

"This is not just the 'start of the school year bugs' that need to be worked out," one driver said at the time. "These aren't problems of one or two students being left off a route. We have some drivers with 10 students on an 88-seat bus and others with 99 kids on the same size bus."

The protesters claimed that neither transportation director Benny Arnold, a former school principal and athletic coach, nor his assistant Tom Preston, a former Melbourne police officer, have any experience with routing procedures, yet they were the ones who designed all bus routes. Drivers contend that this lack of knowledge led to the chaos in the department.

Richard Wells, assistant superintendent for facilities and transportation and former director of transportation, conducted a three month investigation into the drivers' claims.

Drivers claim that while many of the problems have been worked out and complaints have to what officials are calling a "normal" level, there are still problems.

Preston has been embroiled in a legal confrontation with a driver who claims that he did nothing when he reportedly witnessed a middle management supervisor allegedly humiliate her.

partment in 1989. Polk said. He plans to add new and better equipment to that lab, which will enable him to offer such lesting to local police. That will, Polk said, reduce a backlog of drug cases, caused by the overload of tests scheduled at the Florida Department of Law Enforcement Crime Lab in Orlando.

In the coming year, Polk said, his department and CCIB will continue to work with the Florida Sheriff's Assocation Statewide Crack Cocaine Task Force, which in three statewide busis last year netted about 5,500 suspects, most of whom were crack users. In three unlified busis.

Two new $13,000 bomb suits purchased last October for the Seminole County Sheriff's Department bomb squad allow the two bomb technicians to "concentrate on the job, and not worry about the equipment." Lt. Marty LaBrusciano said.

Before the addition of the two suits, which are equipped with communications and cooling systems. LaBrusciano and deputy David Smith, who was trained to assist him last year, usually worked without protective gear.

Sometimes when defusing explosives or checking out reported bombs. LaBrusciano would wear portions of an outdated bomb suit, which afforded him little or no protection. He said the old suit hindered his movement and ability to see in some case.

Smith worked without any protection.

The suits are intended to protect the wearers from explosion fragments, with some protection from pressure and heat. Only the hands are left unshielded. The old suits weighed about 90 pounds each. The new weigh about half that and are less tiring to the wearer, LaBrusciano said.

The move last year of the volunteer victim's advocate program from support services to the criminal investigations divison of the sheriff's department, was an advance for that program. Capt. Roy Hughey

Investigator Theresa Jereczek was named coordinator of the volunteers, whose duty it is to provide immediate support to victims of violent crimes at the scene. Hughey said. "They have no police role, but are there to support the victim." he said.

support the victim." he said.

The program has existed for about a decade, but in recent years. Hughey said, the program had drifted from its original focus, with the former coordinator and volunteers attempting to provide long-term counseling to victims, which is beyond the experise and responsibility of the sheriff's staff. Referrals are now made to appropriate professionals if victims appear to need follow-up of new laws targeting career criminals and habitual criminals, which bring stiffer sentences," he said. Federal prosecution was also used to bring longer prison sentences for some local drug suspects. Eslinger said. "We feel that will cut down on recividism rates — returning to business (drug trafficking) in the community," he said.

CCIB operates with an annual budget of $500,000 provided by Seminole County Sheriff John Polk. Polk provides more than two-thirds of CCIB's staff including agents, and all equipment and administrative services. The participating police agencies pay the salary and benifits for the agent they provide. Eslinger said. "Winter Springs is the only police agency in the county not involved in the task force." Eslinger said.

Lake Mary Police Chief Charles Lauderdale said he was "delighted," with his department's first full year of participating in CCIB last year. "I'm 100-percent satisfied with our (CCIB) investigator's performance and the performance of CCIB. I commend Lt. Eslinger and the way he handles that operation," Lauderdale said.

CCIB receives additional funds and vehicles through the state forfeiture process, which takes property from suspects involved in narcottes deals and converts it to police use to fight drugs. Eslinger said CCIB and the participating police agencies receive vehicles as well as a share cure-all.

in conflacated cash. There is about $400,000 earmarked for CCiB, which is currently being processed through forfeiture hearings, Eslinger said.

That money must be used to buy non-general-budget items used to fight narcotics crime.

Ealinger, 32, has been CCIB's commander for nearly three years. He has been a sheriff's deputy for 11 years and was named Seminole County Public Safety Officer of the Year in 1989 by the Seminole County Chamber of Commerce. In the past, he was also assigned as a federal Drug Enforcement Adminstration agent for a couple of years.

There has been a dramatic increase in arrests by the decade-old task force under Eslinger's command. In 1969, Eslinger said his agents made a total of 809 arrests, including their share of the busts related to the Florida Sheriff's Association task force sweeps.

task force sweeps.

Of those CCIB arrests, 428 were made in the North Street/County Road 427 area of rural Altamonte Springs, known as a site of open street sales of crack cocaine, Estinger said. Areas of Sanford, Midway and Oviedo are also identified as hot spots for drug deals.

Eslinger said a new county ordinance giving police authority to search suspects loitering in known drug dealing areas who are acting suspiciously "has been a benefit. We've made 10 or 11 cases. It's a beneficial tool. It was never meant to be a cure-all."

Of the total arrests, 542 were related to crack cocaine: 31 were arrested as drug traffickers. Seventy-seven were arrested on marijuana charges, 81 on vice charges such as prostitution, and there were 39 arrests for other types of crime, he said.

In 1969, CCIB seized 152 vehicle and $122,000 cash. About $400,000 worth of pot plants, a total of 219 plants were seized along with 14 pounds of cocaine valued at about $650,000. An additional 20 pounds of marijuana valued at about $30,000 was also seized. Eslinger said.

"Last year we emphasized and initiated some demand reduction strategies, which we believe have proven quite successful — targeting the drug user," Estinger said. "Although this may not work across the board with trafficking, in some geographical areas it's proven quite successful when a couple of conditions exist." Those conditions are, he said, open, street sales of drugs which draw buyers from ouiside that community.

that community.

This year. Eslinger said, he expects to see a more active role by the citizens in drug-affected communities such as Midway. In support of that, he said, "We will maintain a pro-active stance in the war on drugs. Sheriff Polk encourages CCIB's involvement in these types of inititives.

"We have a lot more to do," he said. He added there must be continued emphasis on drug education and rehabilitation.

Terrace, Lake Monroe Terrace and Seminole Gardens, all located in a half-mile-square area of northwest Sanford.

Officer David Semones. assigned to this duty, said when police came in on foot in June they forced drug dealers and loiterers from many outdoor meeting places, including playgrounds.

The new rule, Semones said, is "If you don't live here, you're not going to hang (around) here." As a result of this closecontact police work. Semones said drug dealers and users in many cases have moved their operations to more commercial and less residential areas of these communities. The drug problem hasn't been eliminated, but residents feel safer at home.

Semones said the accused drug dealers and users in the neighborhood tended to gather outside houses of other residents. In some cases alcoves under stairways had been turned into open, public totlets.

"They have no respect for anything. They have no respect for themselves," Semones said.

But in the months under this new style of policing, which encourages commulcation and trust between "good" citizens and police, Harriett said, a mutual respect has evolved.

Some residents remain hostile toward police, and Semones said when real trouble develops, police know they are still on their own. "We deal with a lot of contradictions," he said, adding the person who befriends him one minute may attack him the next if he has to arrest a friend or relative.

Officer Victor Burns, who was one of the first community police pairolmen, but who has a different assignment now, said "The police officer on foot rubbing shoulders with the people has a better rapport. It's a return to the old days when everybody knew everybody else.

"The objective is for people who live there to feel safe. If they don't feel safe h's not safe for you or I out there. There's very little dope out there now," Burns said. "There used to be a lot," of drug activity in the projects.

"We've convinced people no matter what happens we're go-ing to be out there. Even if one of us gets shot, we're going to be there," Burns said. "When you walk around the community every day you develop a feel for the people. You're not there to guard, but to be a freind and to walk the same streets they do," he said.

Tenants again praised the SHA commission in November after a unanimous vote to fund the first active Seminole Joint Tenant Council in over two years. The commission awarded $1.440 to the newly-activated tenant group for activities in the housing projects.

Against the protests of an angry crowd, the SHA commission voted 3 to 2 Dec. 14 to fire Williams, who had been an SHA employee for 18 years.

In December, angry tenants demanded the city commission look into Williams' ouster. The commission decided to look into the legality of the decision when questions were raised about possible violations.

"We can save an enormous amount of time by recording it and having officers review it during their shifts," Manning said. The quality of training is high, and Manning said that helps ensure the safety of Longwood police and their community. Also, police are less likely to be sued, if they are highly trained, he said.

The training can be selected according to the needs and experience of each officer, with all taking advantages on updates on ever-changing lwas and court rulings, Manning said. Manning said he trys to schedule a video session each week for each officer.

The program is funded through the "second dollar funding." — the 82 the department receives from each traffic citation issued by its officers. The cost is based on the size of the department, which has 30 fulltime aworn officers.

Manning said his officer followed Longwood chase policy and was not at fault in the case. However, he said, area police chiefs have been trying to work out a uniform pursuit policy. Longwood police, Manning said. will never give up their ability to pursue fleeing suspects. because, "If they know you not going to chase, they're not going

1989 was a year of ups and downs in county government

By J. MARK BARFIELD Herald staff writer

SANFORD - 1989 was certainly a year of ups and downs for Seminole County.

On the up side, everyone toasted the relocation of the American Automobile Association's national corporate offices in Heathrow as a crowning jewel in the establishment of the county's independence from "downtown" Orlando. The county completed three showcase projects, including a new $1.5 million animal shelter and a $683,000 juvenile court-

On the downside, 1989 saw the flowering of a new voting block of three county commissloners who toppled the top three county administrators. The shakeup left a strongly divided commission and a bill that could reach $253,000 or more in severance payments and consulting fees paid for an assistant to Acting County Manager Bob McMillan, the county's

Commissioners this year will also put in place a recycling program that will affect every resident of the county to meet a state mandate that garbage disposal be reduced by 30 percent by 1994.

The opening of the new AAA April 1991 due date of their headquarters in November was hailed as a major accomplishment for the county. Orange County leaders had fought for the prize of saying they would be home of the most-recognized automobile club in the world. But frozen food king Jeno Paulucel's prestigious Heathrow development, located west of Interstate 4, was successful in luring AAA to the office park.

Seminole County officials have at least three visible reasons for pride that were built in 1989. In March, the county opened the doors to a new $1.5 million Animal Control Shelter built next to the orginal county shelter. The older unheated structure was pest-ridden and cramped.
