"While we are calling this election, let's do it right and provide enough money for gas, water and electric light utilities," Mr. Higgins suggested. "If we vote $800,000 for this purpose we don't have to spend it all now. Take the town of Mt. Dora for instance. They were paying 14 1-2 cents for current, voted a $40,000 issue and then secured a contract for 4 1-2 cents. We could do the same thing here. If the public utilities company won't do what's right we would have the money to go ahead ourselves."
"The people want the election held at once," Mr. Holly declared. "And there should be no delay."
The commissioners then instructed City Attorney DeCottes to draw necessary papers calling for an election at an early date for an $800,000 bond issue looking to the end of securing municipal ownership and operation of gas, water and electric light plants.
A mass meeting will be held at the Court House at 8 o'clock Monday night at which time the proposal will be discussed and facts presented by the consulting engineer.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

ADMIT THE MASTER—Behold I stand at the door, and knock; if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me. He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith.—Rev. 3:20, 22.

THANKSGIVING IN THE COUNTRY

I suppose out in the country they are pillin' up the stuff. The jellies and the cookies, makin' sure they'll have enough; And the women in the kitchen are as busy as can be With their baking and their stewing and in fancy I can see The old man in the dooryard dressing Mister Turkey Cock, Who was proud up to the minute that he visited the block. Thanksgiving in the city yearly comes and goes to us, And we've little time for planning and we're not inclined to fuss, But Thanksgiving in the country means a week for making plans, With the clatter of the dishes and the rattling of the pans And the dusting and the sweeping and the baking of the pies For the visitors who're coming with real hunger in their eyes. It's time for hallelujahs and a day for being glad! It's a family reunion with nobody feeling sad, With a table set for twenty, piled with every sort of treat And more good stuff provided than a regiment could eat, With the children most impatient to be set upon the food; Oh, it's there there is real meaning in a prayer of gratitude. I suppose out in the country they are working hard today, Getting ready for the children who have grown and gone away, And are coming back Thanksgiving with a dim and misty eye. I can see a dozen barnyards where the turkey feathers fly, But we're living in the city and we've now no place to go For the old-time glad Thanksgiving which the country people know. —Edgar A. Guest. Don't be a joy-killer. Use your brains. That's what they are for. The kind of entertainment a person seeks marks him for the kind of person he is. Chronic complaints are probably pretty bad, but chronic complainers are much worse. "The way to peace is through agreement, not through force."—Charles Evans Hughes, Secretary of State. Sanford's busiest season is just getting underway. The dollar goes farther than it did a year ago, but there are still folks who insist upon making the dollar go its limit. Saving for a rainy day is not a popular pastime. "Cross Crossings Cautiously"—the slogan of the American Railroad Association. It will take more than those three 'C's' to educate the people. The large consignment of Chinese eggs sent this country may rival the importation of mah-jong sets and induce us when having our "ham and" to exclaim enthusiastically "Chow!" —New York Tribune. At the close of the present fruit and vegetable shipping season, Chase & Co., Inc., Jacksonville, Fla., will remove its main offices to Orlando, Fla. Office space has been leased in the new State Bank and Trust Bldg., which is now being completed in Orlando. No changes in the company's personnel or policies are contemplated.

How to Express Your Thanks

Today is Thanksgiving Day—a day to be observed by every man, woman and child in America. A day of thanksgiving for the blessings bestowed by kind Providence. Never before in the history of America have Americans more to be thankful for. Time was when the observance of Thanksgiving called for a church service, a big turkey dinner followed by some form of amusement. Today Americans everywhere are expressing their thanks in a more tangible fashion, first by rendering thanks to God for his goodness and blessing and then by giving of their money, influence and support to those in less fortunate positions. In Florida our people have long made the custom of contributing each Thanksgiving to the orphans in the Florida Children's Home Society located in Jacksonville. This work made possible by the big hearted people of this state, must be continued. No one will receive a full measure of happiness commensurate with Thanksgiving Day unless there is a thought for others expressed by aiding such an institution as "Florida's Greatest Charity" at Jacksonville. Don't let this day pass until you have contributed your share to the care of the state orphans. Don't let this opportunity pass to identify yourself with other Floridians in making possible the continuance of this great work.

A Britisher Speaks His Opinion

The Statute of Liberty every day welcomes an inexhaustible stream of foreigners to this country. Men and women from every section of Europe, princes and paupers, come here, some to make money, some to gain notoriety and some to be kow-towed to by ambitious social climbers. Every interview published in the papers, is the authority from some European personage that "America is the greatest of them all." The Atlanta Georgian, however, has discovered "something refreshing" in the statement of one Israel Zangwill of London, who seems to have "neglected the art of flattery" in expounding his honest-to-goodness opinion of our country. Here are some of his comments as published editorially by the Georgian: Americans are inefficient and lazy. They think without acting and act without thinking. They are the best half-educated people in the world. You applaud prominent men without regard to their true worth. When Lloyd George came the streets were thronged with people to greet him. When Dr. Nansen, the greatest man now living, came few people met him. Your Sunday newspapers weigh four pounds, while the Bible weighs only a few ounces. You begin $1,000,000 drives for charitable purposes without inquiring what the charity is for. You fought England because of taxation without representation, yet you tax me 8 per cent on my earning here, and I have no vote. You charge $10 as a head tax on tourists, but I must admit that the show is worth it. Most foreigners come here to flatter Americans and depart laughing at them. It is apparent that you do not like to be criticized. When Dickens came to this country his criticisms raised a storm of protest. Evidently this visitor is not here looking for favors and does not mind speaking out in court just what he firmly believes to be true. To this the Georgia Newspaper adds, "Americans have been fed on sweetmeats and whipped cream so long that a dose of gall and wormwood should do them good. Americans have heard so much flattery that isn't so, they should not resent a bit of unkind comment even though it, too, probably isn't so."

My Favorite Stories

Following the close of hostilities two members of a colored labor battalion—natives of the same inland Georgia town—were sitting on a dock at Brest. Naturally, their thoughts dwelt on what they would do when they had been shipped back to the States and mustered out of the service. "Me, I done got it all figured out," said one. "I been takin' a lesson from dese yere Frenchmens. Dey an't got no race-feelin's; dey don't draw no color-line. So, I 'spects to carry on w'en I gits back jest de same 'ez I 'e been doin' over yere—only mebbe mo' so. Things shorly must a' changed back home sence we been away. So, ez soon ez I strikes our ole town I 'e goin' git me some w'ite clothes, all w'ite frum head to foot—w'ite necktie, w'ite straw hat, w'ite shoes, ever'thing w'ite. An' I 'm goin' put dem on and' den I 'm goin' invite some w'ite gal to jine me an' wid her on my arm I 'm gwine walk slow down de street bound fur de ice-cream parlor. What does you aim to do w'en you gits back?" "Well," said his companion, "I 'spects to act diffe'nt frum you, an' yet, in a way, similar, I 'm goin' git me a black suit, black frum head to foot, and black shoes, an' I also is gwine walk slow down de street, just behime you—bound fur de cemetery!"

The Day of Opportunity Has Come

From MANUFACTURERS RECORD "In my opinion the South is standing on the threshold of a tremendous industrial and economic renaissance. She is about to enter into a long deferred heritage of progress and prosperity." That is a statement in a letter from C. H. Markham, president of the Illinois Central Railroad. Mr. Markham has rightly sized up the whole situation. In as intimate touch as he is with the West and with the South, knowing both sections thoroughly, he is in position to judge intelligently as to the future of the South. What he predicts of this section is in harmony with the prediction of every intelligent man who makes a close study of what the South is doing and the foundation on which it is building. Its progress and prosperity are coming on apace. The South is to be the heir of all the ages in material development, and what it has accomplished during the last twenty or thirty years is merely indicative of the greater things which are ahead of it. Bearing somewhat on the same subject is a letter from G. L. Miller of Atlanta and New York, whose house is a very large advertiser in northern and western papers of the opportunities for investment in mortgage bonds in the South. Mr. Miller writes that in reply to a recent advertisement, "Why Capital Is Going South," which he placed in many of the leading papers in the North, they received an extraordinary number of inquiries, showing that it aroused a large degree of interest in the South. He emphasizes the fact that the daily papers of the country, Southern as well as others, in their search for spectacular news are giving more attention to sensational stuff about lynchings, murders and the boll weevil than they are to the stories of the development of Southern life and activity. Mr. Miller adds: "It is needless to say that we will continue to spend our time, thought and money in educating the people of the United States concerning the wonderful section of the country below the Mason and Dixon line. Criticisms of the South are doomed to banish into thin air before the tide of truth which you and all those who have the interest of the South at heart are spreading. Does it not seem to you that the time is now at hand when all exponents of the South should get together and advertise the possibilities of the South?" Mr. Miller's letter is in direct harmony with statements made last week by Lincoln Green, vice-president of the Southern Railway, and published in the Manufacturers Record, in which Mr. Green urged that the people of all classes in the South, railroads and other corporations, towns, cities and states, should cooperate now for the biggest, broadest campaign of publicity to direct the tide of population from the West and the North to the South. The South's opportunity has come. It is here as never before. It is of the South avail ourselves of this opportunity we can hasten the progress and prosperity of this section beyond all that we have dreamed of in the

A Thanksgiving Thought

Health is the blessing of which we are to think first when we are enumerating reasons for thankfulness—And yet, health is but the gateway to better things—If we do not make of health the foundation for worth-while achievements, we are little better than the ox, which leisurely pursues the path of health that leads from its birth-place to the butcher shop. We cannot fail to be thankful for the intelligence that enables us to put the body to praiseworthy use, and yet, the mind is but the servant of the heart and mental training may be a curse to self and to others instead of a benefit, if not rightly used. We must, therefore, be grateful also for hearts so enlightened as to direct the mind along lines of service—And the heart itself must be inspired to things that are good or it may waste its energies on pleasures that degrade or on activities that work harm. Is not the heavenly vision, the greatest gift—the one that deserves our profoundest thanks—a heavenly vision that lifts the heart to its own proper realm where it can give direction to the mind and work to the hands so that the health we enjoy will mean the maximum of happiness to others, and therefore, of joy to ourselves. WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN

Little Talk 'On Thrift

By Nathan A. Straun What is thrift? Does it mean anything more than just saving money? Recently an elderly lady in New York lost her life-time savings amounting to $500 which she was carrying in a bag sewed in her clothing. Postmaster General New made the statement not long ago that $1,000,000,000 a year is lost by the people of the United States who purchase fraudulent securities through the mail—an amount, by the way, equal to two-thirds of the estimated total cost of government in the United States, including Federal, county, city, town and village expenses. The newspapers frequently tell us of cases where savings have been swept away through carelessness or cupidity. What, therefore, did these persons gain by saving their money? Would they not have been just as well off had they spent their funds as they earned them? These questions, which quite naturally arise in the minds of many, are but indications of the need of a more general understanding of real thrift. It is thrifty to save money. It is just as much a part of thrift to know what to do with it after it has been saved. And this fact points to one of our greatest public duties. Our government is doing everything it can to encourage the saving of money. Our banks are making similar laudable efforts. In our schools, children are being taught to save. School savings banks are growing rapidly all over the country. But not enough is being done and said to bring out the fact that the right care of savings constitutes a vital part of thrift practice. A billion dollars a year, absolutely thrown away, is a heavy penalty to pay for national ignorance in the science of personal management. TOM SIMS SAYS Be thankful you don't smoke. It's a bad habit. State Press Comment Jacksonville Times-Union: The sale of the Sanford Herald and the retirement of "Bob" Holly from the Florida newspaper field, is something that interests the people of a large section of the state. Editor Holly has been a "power for good" in the state press, and the Herald has steadily and substantially assisted in building up that wonderfully fertile part of Florida through its systematic and interesting "boosting." The fact that Mr. Holly will remain in Sanford and continue to write—while not perhaps always "boosting" for that particular place—is information that is most satisfactory. The Herald under new ownership will no doubt be held up to the high standard which it had maintained previously as the owners are well identified with the press of the state. Florida newspapermen regrets to lose Bob Holly from its regular ranks, but is ready to welcome Messrs. Combs, Dean and Berg, and predicts for them continued success.—Times-Union, Nov. 27. past. We trust that the daily and weekly papers of the South will concentrate their efforts upon material upbuilding and educational and moral progress rather than upon the petty party politics which have so long cursed this section.
