Levine planned the flight some two months ago, but weather conditions and mechanical trouble delayed the hop-off until last night. The distance, from here to Havana is about 1,500 miles. The plane carries 250 gallons of gasoline and 20 gallons of oil.

Weather conditions were not too favorable for the take-off. Stultz had trouble in lifting the plane from the ground and after circling for some time, headed due south in front of a southerly wind. The plane was in the air for 13 hours and 15 minutes, arriving in Havana at about 11:35 o'clock.

Miss Ball's mother, Mrs. Josephine Ball, and Mrs. Levine were present in New York. Levine's mother, Mrs. Levine, and his father, Mr. Levine, were also present. The flight was a triumph for the aviation industry.

The state allowed her to plead "guilty of murder in the second degree," the penalty for which is life imprisonment.

It was exactly three months ago today that the 21-year old blonde defendant bent her husband T. Edward West, to death with a hammer in their "honeymoon bungalow" at Perry and then dashed off in her green roadster to a bridge party.

She came before the bar of justice to be tried for murder in the first degree, but before even a prospective jury could be examined her attorneys launched this successful move to have the charge against her reduced.

Fascist Regime Undergoes Crisis Resembling Recent Shakeup In Soviet Russia

LONDON, MAR. 6.—(INS)—The Fascist regime in Italy is undergoing a crisis that curiously resembles the Trotskyist crisis in Soviet Russia. This was charged in a special dispatch to the Daily Herald, the British labor organ, from a special correspondent on the Italian frontier.

A number of the most prominent Fascist leaders, this article declares, "including Signor Farinacci, formerly Secretary-General of the Party, and Signor Rossoni, acting Secretary-General of the Fascist Trade Unions, are being threatened with severe disciplinary measures, including expulsion from the Party and deportation to the Lipari Islands."

These "oppositionists" are accused of trying to create a faction within the Fascist Party. They are accused of demanding the 'democratization' of the Party.

They accuse the Government, through the Ministry of Corporations, of being in league with the profiteers and the big employers, and of checking every attempt by the Fascist Trade Unions to resist wage cuts or to enforce observation of the Labor Laws.

They have launched in the union the slogan "No More Wage Cuts," and they are demanding the restoration of the right to strike.

The Government is threatening strong measures. At Fascist parades at Bologna and Milan, Signor Arnaldo Mussolini, the Duke's brother, have announced that there will be no compromise, and that any action expelled from the party would become a bare and lifeless branch and last no longer than a fire of straw.

The Fascist authorities in several Italian towns had prohibited the playing of Farinacci's melodramatic "Furberine" as its performance, it was feared, would give a pretext for Farinacci to demonstrate against the present system of Government.

LEAGUE IS ASKED TO HELP MONKS OF MOUNT ATHOS

Ancient Nation, Where Women Are Not Allowed, Appeals To League Of Nations Due To Seizure Of Its Property

LONDON, MAR. 6.—(INS)—An ancient republic where no woman is allowed, where even female animals are taboo, and where men live cut off from all worldly pursuits has been brought before the public eye with the announcement that the State of Mount Athos has appealed to the League of Nations for redress against the seizure by the Greek Government of certain of its property.

Situated on a mountainous promontory sixty miles long and twenty broad, Mount Athos is really a monastic stronghold jutting out into the Aegean Sea.

Originally the home of a pagan oracle of Apollo and noted in ancient Greek times for the number of pilgrimages to its temple, the Mount was purged of its idols in Christian times and about the fifth century A. D. became the haunt of holy hermits.

They lived in caves and huts, but with the increase of royal benefactions and growth of monastic life more substantial dwellings were erected, and groups of monks, formed monasteries with chapels, libraries, guest houses and even battlements and catapults to keep off aggressive pirates.

There are about twenty vast, fortress-like monasteries in the promontory, all built between the ninth and fifteenth centuries. Their vicarages would fill a book; Arab invasions, pirate raids, looting by Crusaders, massacres by the Papals, and Turkish barbarism. But always, through more than 1,500 years, the monks have stood loyal to Orthodox Catholicism against all attacks.

Woman has always been treated with particular rigor. No woman has ever been allowed to set a foot on Mount Athos and no bird or beast of that sex is tolerated.

Monks Respected
The rights of the monks have been respected down the centuries by the Turks under whose jurisdiction they lived. At the Peace Conference of Lausanne Mount Athos was to have been given an international status, but it was finally handed over to Greece, the Power assuming all the old obligations of Turkey towards the monks.

Greece solemnly undertook to respect the terms of the articles of handing over, but it is stated she has now taken possession of the farms belonging to the Russian section of the monastery. Situated on the mainland, these farms the monks with food since they are not allowed to breed animals or have any female of bird or beast on the Mount. Hence the Russian monks are practically condemned to starvation and the State has taken the matter up with the League.

NEW DISCOVERY OF COSMIC RAYS TOLD BY EXPERTS

Thrilling Discovery By Californian Professor Of Energetic Rays That Penetrate With Ease Is Made Known

LONDON, MAR. 6.—(INS)—The existence of cosmic rays, which come from beyond the Milky Way, and whose energy is one-tenth of the total energy coming into the earth's atmosphere in the form of starlight and heat, is said to be the latest discovery of power in another universe.

The thrilling story of the discovery of these extraordinary rays is told by Professor R. A. Millikan, the expert astronomer, in an article published in Nature, the British scientific magazine.

Starting Discovery
Classing the rays as the most startling discovery of modern science, Professor Millikan claims they are capable of penetrating 100 feet of water and sixteen feet of lead before their energy is completely absorbed.

The existence of these rays was first brought to light in 1903 by two astronomers, McMillan and Rutherford. But it was then generally believed that they originated from some nearby region of planet, and the rays were forgotten until 1910 when a Swiss physicist, Geckel, took an enclosed electroscopie in a balloon to a height of nearly 15,000 feet, and found that the radiation was higher than at the surface of the earth.

Since then astronomers all over the world have tried to trace the source of the rays origin. In 1921, Professor Millikan made his first experiments when he sent up sounding balloons to a height of nearly ten miles—more than nine-tenths of the way to the top of our atmosphere. He repeated this experiment again in 1922 and then in 1925, assisted by Mr. Cameron, he made further experiments in deep, high-altitude snow-covered lakes.

Ands Experiments
During 1926 and the latter part of last year, he carried out experiments in the Bohemian Alps, in altitudes up to 15,000 feet.

As a result of his many experiments, coupled with the data gathered by other star-gazers, Professor Millikan states that it is quite impossible to limit the source of the rays to the upper tenth of our atmosphere or to any astronomically nearby region. "There is no possible way of assigning the rays to any other than a cosmic origin," concludes the Professor. "These rays come from another universe. Beyond the sun, moon, and stars which have no appreciable influence on their radiation."

PIANIST'S SKILL IS REFLECTED IN VARIED PROGRAM

Enthusiastic Acclaim Greeted His Rendition Of The Chopin Group While The Intricate Scherzo Is Equally As Good

Rachmaninoff—the name itself inspires respect from those who have heard his operas, cantatas, chamber music, his great symphony or his disconcerting preludes for the piano.

However, after hearing him in recital the same people cannot but have remarkable admiration for him as a pianist. Invariably there is a tumult of enthusiastic acclaim when he plays the massive Liszt, the symphonic, poetic and structurally inventive Chopin, the electric Dolmazy and the ingenious and intense Rachmaninoff with equal skill.

"The Chopin group is the test of the all-around pianist," is an old axiom of criticism, and Rachmaninoff meets that test nobly. The lively ballade, the poetic nocturne, the intricate Scherzo, and the superb waltzes are all accompanied with a mastery interpretation that brings delight to the most critical as well as the casual listener.

His very popular, and somewhat academic, C-sharp minor prelude if not on the programme, is eagerly demanded as an encore. This he plays in a most impressive manner, frequently follows it with his "Polka de W. R." which is in a rickety mood, with irresistible rhythmic flow in style, joyous in inspiration.

The great Russian's touch is absolutely unerring and his interpretation superbly Rachmaninoff, whether his offering be gleaned from Liszt, Chopin, or from any of the other great composers. As the artist who possesses both soul and gift, Rachmaninoff so controls the hearts of his listeners that they obey the dictates of his reverential bow.

Life Imprisonment Given Velma West In Hammer Murder

Seth Paulin, prosecutor of Lake county, then said:

"Your honor, my associate, Homer Harper, and myself, have considered the question of accepting this plea offered by counsel for the defense and we recommend that it be accepted."

The question of how Velma was to plead was put and dried. It had been threshed out in all day conferences yesterday by attorneys for both sides, in the judge's chambers, with Judge Barnes present. Attorney Paulson motioned for Velma to stand up. She came over beside him and both stood directly before the bar. Addressing the trembling, pale-faced Velma, the court said:

"Is that your decision?—to plead guilty of murder in the second degree?"

"It is," she said in a barely audible voice.

"Have you anything to say at this time as to why the court should not now pass sentence upon you?" asked the silver-haired kindly-faced judge in tones a father would use in addressing his daughter.

"No sir, I have not," replied Velma, her hands nervously clasping and unclasping a handkerchief.

Then with Velma and Attorney Paulson standing before him, the judge launched into an explanation of his position before he pronounced the sentence.

"This matter of your being allowed to plead guilty of murder in the second degree did not come up, suddenly," Judge Barnes said, speaking to Velma.

"It had been discussed by lawyers for both sides in chambers yesterday. The lawyers took the matter up with the court and asked what they should do under the circumstances."

"I went over the matter thoroughly, I also conferred with Judge Reynolds (the judge who presided at Velma's arraignment)."

"This court and Judge Reynolds came to the conclusion that in view of the evidence the state could not expect to get a conviction of higher than murder in the second degree. "I don't think this is the time for talking about this case. The community knows all about it. It has had its regrettable part. The mandate of the law is the mandate of all and that mandate must be fulfilled."

"Never before in my career as a judge have I sent a woman to a case of this kind."

The law says that the punishment for second degree murder shall be confinement in the reformatory for a term not to exceed the term of the natural life. That is the sentence the court imposes upon you."

A plain mantled Velma's neck, her hair twisted and she seemed to collapse. When she returned to her seat, the nation, Mrs. C. A. Nash, pulled her's roughly on the shoulder. Then her father came over and they cried softly together.

Pikudski Party (government bloc) between 90 and 100 seats; Combined Communists and Socialists between 60 and 70 seats; Minority Parties—approximately 100 seats.

The remaining seats were won by smaller and unimportant parties. It was stated that later returns from isolated districts might change these figures slightly.

Fine Fishing In Winter

WINTER time is the time for fish and your catch depends on the fish you like best. Cod, herrings, mackerel and salmon are waiting for you, and you can even go out after clams, crabs, lobsters, oysters and shrimps if you like. This fishing is not in Florida, nor yet in California, but just around the corner at the little grocery store. You probably know the fresh fish store, if you have ever come back with an empty fish bucket and needed a string of fish so as to have the ear-marks of a big-time fisherman.

Store or Fish Pond? But do you know the fish is to be had at the grocery or delicatessen in cans? Fish in every kind, ready cleaned and cooked? It is a wonderful convenience to find the delicious white meat of crabs and oysters ready to put quickly into your salads, cocktails or other delicacies. Your shelves should be well stocked with canned fish as they afford a pleasing variation and contain an abundance of iodine, so essential to our diet. Fish are also rich in a nutritive oil which our bodies need in winter time. Many fish are packed in gold enamel lined cans which preserve the color and flavor perfectly.

Here is a popular new cocktail for your holiday dinners: Crab Meat Cocktail: Flake the contents of a 6 1/2 ounce can of crab meat. Add two hard-cooked eggs, finely chopped and six sliced stuffed olives. Fork in lightly one-half cup of crushed shredded lettuce. Add one-half cup of plain cocktail sauce and serve in green pepper cups made from six small peppers.

League Discusses U.S. Suggestion To Ban War In Future

GENEVA, March 6.—(INS)—Private discussions of America's proposals for a general treaty outlawing war almost overshadowed everything else among the delegates to the League of Nations council meeting today.

An important conference was arranged for 5 o'clock this afternoon among the following delegation chiefs: Sir William Chamberlain, of England; Foreign Minister Briand, of France; Signor Sialoja, of Italy; Foreign Secretary Stresemann, of Germany; and M. Adachi, of Japan.

The object of the meeting was to discuss the latest treaty note sent by Secretary of State Kellogg, of the United States, to France. This note is of especial importance because it touched upon the resolution adopted by the Pan-American conference at Havana pledging the American republics to ban war. Most of the public representatives at the League meeting were from the United States.

Greatest Immigration In History Of Modern Times Is Taking Place In China

BEIKING, Mar. 6.—(INS)—The migration of people in the history of modern times is now taking place in China. The immigrants, chiefly from Shantung province but some from Chihli, Szechuan and other provinces of China, are pouring into Manchuria in literally endless droves. Their coming into Manchuria constitutes both a promise and a peril.

It is estimated that during 1927, more than 800,000 Chinese immigrants came into Manchuria. During 1928, unless all signs fail, at least 2,000,000 will come into Manchuria from the Chinese provinces of the south. This, at least, is the opinion of Chinese, Japanese and American officials engaged in handling the incoming hordes.

There are several reasons for this tremendous migration. The Japanese, after the signing of the Twenty-One Demands, was restored to its sovereignty so that the Chinese happily under their own flag. Chinese have been leaving their homes as rapidly as they can get away.

Banditry increases. The increase of banditry by robbers, almost constant warfare between rival factions, intolerable taxation burdens and general oppression of the peasants has made it impossible for many to remain in their homes. Similar conditions prevail to a greater or less extent in other provinces. Consequently, the hope of almost every peasant is to be able to leave and seek a better life and greater prosperity elsewhere.

Manchuria offers the one heaven which they can retreat. In the Manchurian provinces, under the control of Generalissimo Chang, order and peace prevail. Taxation burdens, while particularly light, are much lighter and much more systematic than imposed than elsewhere in China.

Furthermore, by far the greater part of Manchuria is a flat, fertile, well adapted to the farming of wheat and other crops. The vast majority of the immigrants, crop raisers have been experienced in planting in recent years, causing but little disorientation to the farmers, and adding hundreds of thousands settle immediately upon the land.

Once in Manchuria these pe-nants settle immediately upon the land. The result is that Manchuria, probably, is developing more rapidly now in its agricultural resources than another section of the world. Its annual production is increasing tremendously and the influx of these hordes of people make it likewise a rapidly developing market for products from other countries.

Japanese in Control
Although the political sovereignty of Manchuria is Chinese, the economic control is Japanese. The Japanese control Kwantung Peninsula as leased territory. They own and operate the South Manchuria railway, and they have built and control Dairen, the port which is the gateway to Manchuria's treasure house. It is Japan's power to block the trade activities of any other nation in Manchuria.

Japan, however, is not endeavoring to keep out other nations. A writer recently traveled through out Manchuria and talked with large numbers of Japanese officials and foreign business men. Nowhere was any evidence discovered that Japan is anything other than a competitor of other nations for Manchuria's rich trade.

An official of the South Manchuria railway told the writer frankly that Japan does not fear competition in Manchuria but welcomes it. He expressed the belief that Japan could obtain an equal share of trade, regardless of competition, and he declared that the markets so big and so developing so rapidly that there is room for all.

German business men, apparently, have realized the trade possibilities of Manchuria ahead of the rest of the world. They are coming in to that section in large numbers, and, while records are not available, appearances indicate they are doing a satisfactory and growing business.

British business men also are on hand, competing with the Japanese, and there are representatives of many American firms constantly in Dairen, Mukden, Harbin and other Manchurian cities. The American representation is by no means American industries seeking foreign markets have on of their best openings awaiting them in Manchuria with its constantly increasing population and rapidly developing resources.

DENVER RECLUSE LEAVES FORTUNE TO SHEP, HIS DOG

Greater Part Of Estate Put At $110,000 Will Provide For Pal's Needs; Relatives Fail To Break Man's Will

DENVER, Mar. 6.—(INS)—Shep, a shaggy old dog, need never worry about a warm place to sleep, nor what he is going to eat when feeding time comes. Shep has inherited part of a fortune of $110,000.

Fred H. Forrester, for many years an eccentric Denver resident, who lived, according to neighbors in a manner that rivaled Silas Marner of fiction, willed almost his entire fortune to his pet dog Shep and to other canine inhabitants of the State of Colorado. Shep had been Forrester's pal for a decade. Relatives of Forrester filed objections to the will in county court here but were overruled. Judge A. Luxford, deciding that the property constituted a legitimate charity fund that will be handled by the Colorado Bureau of Child and Animal Protection.

His Only Pal
Shep had long been the only pal of Forrester, who postponed a long contemplated trip to California, even until his death, because he could not take Shep with him. He said he could not arrange to take the dog on a train, and that he would not be allowed to keep him in a hotel room.

Forrester and the dog lived in an eight room house here for several years. When neighbors broke into the house after noting Forrester's absence they found his body lying on the floor with the faithful dog standing guard.

For many years Shep refused to eat, seeming to grieve for his master. He was removed to a local kennel and after making the acquaintance of children in the neighborhood has apparently become reconciled and forgotten his dead pal.

Objection Overruled
Forrester had lived frugally, and the furniture in the large house he and Shep occupied was valued at only $78.00.

Chief among the objectors to the will were Sarah and Edward Barium, of Connecticut. Their objections stated that Forrester was out of his mind and that the beneficiaries were vague and indefinite.

When the objections were overruled and a new trial denied, they stated they would appeal the case to the District and Supreme Courts in an effort to prove their asserted rights.

Woman Of England Sues Rich Kansan For Spouse's Death

KANSAS CITY, Mar. 6.—(INS)—An English woman has filed suit against a wealthy Kansas City realtor, asking $10,000 damages in connection with death of her husband, a former Captain in the English Army, who was gored to death by an infuriated bull on the rich man's farm near here, September 27, last.

Mrs. Anna Fraser of London, contends in her petition filed here, that the land owner, A. J. King, was negligent in allowing Fraser to work near the bull when he knew, or should have known that the animal "possessed vicious propensities."

William T. Alford, Mrs. Fraser's attorney, declares his client to be destitute, and that she had been totally dependent upon small sums of money sent her by her husband before his death.

Fraser was attacked by the bull as he was leading it to water. Mr. King and his chauffeur, William Piper attempted to rescue the Englishman, and were severely injured when the bull turned on them.

Just as it appeared that all three of the men would be gored or trampled to death, George Oppenheimer, an insurance man visiting the King farm, drove a $5,000 automobile into the animal with terrific force. Again and again Oppenheimer charged the animal with the expensive limousine, but the attack only made the animal more ferocious.

While Fraser lay mortally wounded, King and the chauffeur lay beneath the animal, "Jack", a German Police dog of King's, rushed in at the bull, biting and snapping at its heels, until the animal took up the fight with the dog and King and Piper were able to escape to safety.

COMPETITION HAS ENTERED POTATO GROWING SECTION

Farmers, Both East And West, Are Trying To Gain Lead In Raising Finest Spuds For Discriminating Patronage

PRESQUE ISLE, Me. Mar. 6.—(INS)—Merchandising has hit the body spud. The "table murphy's" are stepping into the class of the fruits of California, Florida, and Oregon.

The West and the East are engaged in a potato supremacy contest with Idaho and Maine in the vanguard to date.

Idaho began it, Maine has "hit the trail." The spuds are being dressed up in fancy sizes, neatly packed in boxes and sent to the markets and direct to the homes.

T. M. Hoyt started the merchandising of potatoes among Aroostook County, Maine, potato men. He raised 55,000 barrels. Table stock was pronounced of the finest quality.

Adopts Idaho Plan
Not content with improving and perfecting his method of production, Mr. Hoyt adopted the progressive Idaho method of marketing.

Table stock is sorted into two grades, medium and large size. The medium size spuds are packed in paste-board cartons. Each carton contains a peck. The large spuds go into wooden boxes holding a bushel.

A grading machine, not a driven, moves the potatoes along a carrier half as fast as they are carried in ordinary grading.

When the potatoes are shoveled from the bin into the grading machine, they are graded.

Legal Technicalities Forbid Girl From Making Home In United States

MEXICALI, Mex., Mar. 6.—(INS)—Entangled in a mass of legal technicalities forbidding her entry to the United States, beautiful 18 year old Sophie Malouf is attending high school in this little Mexican border town while her wealthy Syrian parents are living across the street in Calexico, Calif. And back of the strange situation, it was revealed today, lies the treacherous desire of a powerful Greek girl returned to Syria.

Several years ago Miss Malouf, whose parents claim she was born in Los Angeles, visited relatives in Syria with her brother, Charlie Malouf. Her brunette beauty made an imprint on the heart of the young Greek, but his love was not reciprocated. In a successful effort to obtain quick departure from Syria via France, the girl and her brother told French authorities she was born in Syria—but when they attempted to enter the United States at the Calexico-Mexicali border, immigration authorities held the pretty girl because of the expiration of the Syrian quota.

When the case was checked in France, the Evclorn sheik is said to have presented records to prove Miss Malouf was born in Syria and should, therefore, be returned to that country. Her wealthy parents at once retained John A. Hadaller, San Bernardino, Calif., attorney, to fight the case.

Hadaller has filed an appeal with immigration officials. If it fails, he said today, it is probable Miss Malouf will cross the line into California, submit to arrest for illegal entry and then launch a court contest of her deportation.

An Unwise Suggestion

Governor Fuller of Massachusetts has suggested with considerable enthusiasm that Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh be made a candidate for vice-president on the Republican ticket with Herbert Hoover. The Bay State chief executive believes this would be an appropriate tribute to further express the love and admiration which the people of the United States hold for the young Flying Colonel. In addition Governor Fuller is of the opinion that Col. Lindbergh's entrance into national politics would have a profound influence in cleaning up the situation.

Colonel Lindbergh occupies a lofty position in the eyes not only of Americans but of the entire world. He has attained a popularity that perhaps no other individual has ever enjoyed, and here in this country he is the center of hero worship. Not only has he contributed much to cement friendly relations between America and other nations but any other person. The young flier has a personality and a sense of diplomacy that are rarely combined, and in many ways he is one of the most remarkable men in world history.

With all of this in mind, we cannot see the wisdom of Governor Fuller's suggestion. It would be extremely unfortunate, not only for Col. Lindbergh but for the country as well to link him with politics. The proposal, as John Temple Graves points out, is utterly out of keeping with the position which the hero of the Atlantic now holds in American hearts. We seriously doubt if Col. Lindbergh himself would take kindly to the idea, and we believe without casting any reflections upon him, that he is not experienced enough to fulfill the duties of the office.

Unquestionably Governor Fuller was sincere in his suggestion, but we believe it would be a grave mistake to follow it. Let the trans-Atlantic flier stay out of politics. Leave that to others. Col. Lindbergh means too much to the nation to allow him to pursue such a course.

About The Flapper

What of the flapper? Is she dead or has she undergone a transformation? Is the girl of today unchanged from the new type, which appeared in 1918, or is she materially different? This is the question which the Junior League Magazine, national publication for the younger social sets of thirty-five American cities, asks and then quotes a number of persons with interesting comments on the subject.

A national survey has been conducted by the Junior Leaguers, who describe the 1928 model of feminine charm as being a "young woman with poise, self-toned and correct speech, soberly costumed and with long hair." We are somewhat in doubt as to what is meant by being "self-toned," but we are willing to grant that the maiden of today is somewhat different from the regular flapper of 1923 and even more so when compared to the girl of ten years ago, when the flapper movement was inaugurated. An interesting observation is made by Miss Patsy Brooks of Waterbury, Conn., who furnishes a recipe for the flapper that was and is:

"Take two bare knees, two rolled stockings, two flapping taloshe, two plucked eyebrows, one short skirt, one lipstick, one powder puff, 1,000 bobbed hairs, 32 cigarettes and a 'boy friend' with a 'hip' Season with a pinch of salt and dash of pep and cover all with a spicy sauce and you have a flapper."

Now take the above ingredients and bake in a hot oven, two or three years and you have what is known as a "hot baby". Then let it cool for another year and you have the modern flapper—two bare knees, two thinner stockings, one shorter skirt, 1,000 short hairs, two lip-ticks, three powder puffs, 132 cigarettes and three "boy friends" with "hips" and last but not least an expression of utter boredom.

Somewhat different in the point of view is the comment of Mrs. Alexander Kirk of Chicago, who after careful consideration, remarks that "the flapper was a post-war creation. Her hair, ornaments resembled a Botticelli's; her skirts ended about her knees, she smoked her brother's cigarettes and swore like a trooper. She chewed gum, gurgled wads of it, vigorously and incessantly, her makeup was as crude as a clown's, she was supposed to be a 'moo, moo, moo' artist", home-bound and human smile-stalk." And Mrs. Kirk continues:

"The flapper wasn't half so sophisticated as the present-day girl, smoother, more polished. Young 1928 uses more subtle methods, that is all. She wears black satin instead of cerise; she blends her rouge evenly; she inhales her cigarettes without puffing furiously; she dances gracefully to muffled jazz and drinks liquor quite as much as her predecessor, but from a tumbler rather than a flask. She is more refined and veils her frankness with artful politeness, takes life for granted and lives frankly and with calmness—if not wisely."

Our personal preference in the numerous conclusions on the subject is found in the discussion of Miss Katherine Wigmore of Los Angeles, who discusses the mental qualities of Miss 1928. You frequently "find her in art galleries and book shops," says Miss Wigmore. "She is able to swim without conversation plunges her into deep waters of political philosophy, and the flapper 'lives' with its 'wise cracks' is, in fact, being no longer considered essential for the successful girl."

THE DOUGHBOY IS PERMANENT NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE

Army men have heard a great deal about "mechanization and motorization" of late. The virtues of the armored car, armored tank, hot air balloon and, of course, of airplanes have been dimmed into the background by military men. "We are in a new age," proponents of these various machines exclaim, "and the next war will be new, different and fought with machines and non-human devices."

Recent events have fortified this contention. The decorations of Colonel "Billy" Mitchell, showing that the next war would be fought almost entirely in the air, and the public interest in aviation following Colonel Lindbergh's flights have made military men say: "Machines are everything; what is the use of the poor, ordinary men—the Doughboys, the Infantrymen?"

Machines Almost Human. The army is now full of new machines, many of them almost human. The newly developed anti-aircraft guns, electrically controlled from a distance, turn and twist, adjust themselves to the perpendicular and to the horizontal, and even fire without and visible human aid.

Brigadier General Charles G. Treat, who was commander in chief of the American forces in Italy during the war.

Drew Cartoons For Trenches. He drew these cartoons for the 1st Division Trenches, which is to be held in New York on March 10 and which, from all appearances, will be attended by soldiers of the "old school" who still believe that no amount of machinery can take the place of manly brains.

Captain Butler has never, say his friends here, drawn for any magazine or publication of any sort, so that all he does springs only from personal inclination. As only General Summerall during the war he used to etch cartoons of everyday army life on a mimeograph sheet. These cartoons were then mimeographed and distributed to each battalion. They were all comic and ere said to have had a most cheering effect on the men of the 1st Division.

In these latest cartoons he seems to be on solid ground. The belief is growing here that "motorization and mechanization" the blanket phrase used in the Army, can never be more than an auxiliary.

It is admitted that it is a most important and vital auxiliary, but the feeling seems to be that the enthusiasm for the different mechanical arms was a thing of the moment, similar to the enthusiasm of a child over a new toy.

It is true that the proponents of the airplane and other mechanical devices always encounter one stumbling block when it is pointed out to them that with their devices it is impossible to effect a real "transfer of power." In other words, with airplanes it is impossible to take anything. When one moves to a brigade of cavalry or a division of infantry from one village to another forty miles beyond, one has effected a genuine "transfer of power." The brigade or division can equit in that village and keep it. It is their; they have taken it.

But if he flies to this same village he cannot take it. He can destroy it; he may be able to prevent others from taking it for some time. But call it his own. He has, in other words, effected no real "transfer of power." The navy has learned the same thing. They have learned that an airplane or a dirigible can never replace the scouting cruiser, because neither of them can settle down in a particular area and control it. Neither of them can they either a "transfer of power."

The doughboy, therefore, is to be exalted. He must not be forgotten in spite of the fact that there are so many new and amusing devices with which to experiment. For these devices, in the last analysis, are made to help him, and he, in the real sense of the word, is the army.

The Chicago couple who decided upon separation after riding upon the sea of matrimony for a period of 50 years are certainly entitled to the credit of having given married life a trial.—Augusta Chronicle.

Holy Cross Woman's Guild Holds Meeting

The regular meeting of the Woman's Guild of Holy Cross Episcopal Church was held Monday afternoon at the Parish House, with the president, Mrs. W. E. Watson, presiding. After routine business had been carried out, many matters of importance were brought before the meeting. It was decided to postpone the supper and meeting of the Men's Club to March 16 on account of the concert to be given Friday evening by Rachmaninoff.

A report was given by Mrs. St. Clair White about the caps to be made for the junior choir by the Women's Guild for Easter. She also reported that the St. Agnes Guild is making caps for the senior choir. A report was also given by the cooked food sale committee, showing that $16.28 had been realized at the last sale. Mrs. Amelia Noble is chairman of the cooked food sale to be held Saturday afternoon by the Guild at the Bowtell Realty Company. The committee reported that six table cloths had been added to the lines, and also reported that 12 aluminum trays had been bought for serving.

The Guild decided to conduct under the social service department a kindergarten class each Monday afternoon at the parish house, with a trained kindergarten in charge, so that mothers with small children may attend the meeting. The kindergarten will be conducted under constructive lines and will be taken care of by both the Woman's and St. Agnes Guilds.

Plans were also completed for the Easter basket to be sent to Advent, Tenn., and Mrs. Noble, box chairman will be in charge. The hour of meeting for the Guild has been changed from 3:30 o'clock to 3 o'clock so that the children of Guild members might join the St. Agnes Guild kindergarten classes.

Secretary Kellogg Will Get Backing Of Business Men In Soviet Bond Fray

NEW YORK, Mar. 6.—Secretary Kellogg of the State Department will have the backing of thousands of investors and conservative business men in the United States in his firm stand against the sale of Russian Government railroad bonds in the United States.

Mr. Kellogg, in all sincerity asks why the Soviet authorities should be encouraged in their efforts to exchange their promise-to-pay for good American money when the Soviets have repudiated the debts contracted with individuals and other governments during the war, and railroad bonds issued by other Russia roads have been repudiated by the Soviet Government.

Of course, what an investor or a business man purchases with his own money is his own affair, and those who wish to take Russian bonds in settlement of debts or in exchange for goods have a perfect right to do so. But both the Federal government and the state governments have felt a sense of responsibility for the admission of securities of various types into their market, clamping down the lid on what they believed to be unsafe or undesirable. The "Blue Sky" laws adopted by various states represent the sincerity of purpose on the part of our lawmakers rather than their practical understanding of the simple elements of financing through the sale of securities.

With such a clear and unmistakable precedent as the refusal of the Russian government to recognize and pay the debts contracted by her official representatives before and after the war, it is not difficult to see that the future offerings of her bonds belong in the undesirable class. In the world of business a man's word is as good as his bond, until such time as neither are found to be acceptable to his fellow man. For obvious reasons, business intercourse with his fellow men must then cease, since no man or corporation can continue furnishing goods or services to those who are unable or unwilling to meet their obligations.

Before the United States entered the war, the Russians borrowed hundreds of millions of dollars from the French Government, this was in turn borrowed from the French people, at a time when they were giving the last drop of their blood, and risking all they had to provide the means to hurl back the German invader. Absolute refusal of the Soviet to recognize this debt or to make an effort to repay it has been a keen disappointment to the French, and may be considered as one of the great obstacles to the payment of France's war debt to our government.

The matter of foreign borrowing raises anew the question of the safety of funds put into the obligations of foreign governments and corporations. In many cases the new bond issues represent an iron-clad first lien against valuable assets or positive incomes which cannot in any way be repudiated, so long as courts are able to function and law and order prevail. But the unsecured pledges of weak governments and poorly-financed industrial corporations are not always worth their face value, the fact of which too many investors appreciated only after the market values of their securities have shrunk almost beyond recognition. It is then too late to call in the finance doctor.

Experience has shown that some of our American banking syndicates are not qualified to put an equitable price on some of the European bond issues they have recently been distributed among investors in the New York market. This is evidenced by the sharp declines in market prices of bonds with the dissolution of the syndicates, and the consequently withdrawal of the artificial support from the bonds in the listed market. The inference is that bonds which cannot stand on their own feet should be left distinctly alone, instead of being scattered among investors who do not know what they are purchasing.

The comparatively high yields on foreign bonds should contain the first warning to investors that these issues are not as desirable from the standpoint of safety as are good American bonds paying half as much interest per year. Safety of principal in the first consideration in bond buying, an elementary principle that many people learn too late.

GERMAN MARINE ACCUSES SOVIET OF IMPRESSMENT

Declares Natives Of Foreign Countries Are Forced Into Ranks Of Red Army To Serve Under Flag Of Communists

BERLIN, Mar. 6.—(INS)—The charge that Soviet Russia is pressing natives of foreign countries into the Red Army has been raised by Bruno Stapel, German marine who was taken prisoner in Russia during the war and has now returned to his native village Gellow near Potsdam after an adventurous ten year tramp through Russia and Siberia.

Stapel, who had been reported "missing and probably dead" during the war, returned with a Polish wife and two babies and gave a vivid description of his adventures to German newspapers, in which he asserted that agents of the Red Army had repeatedly tried to press him into military service and that he was put in jail whenever he rejected their demand.

"I belonged to the German marine landing corps stationed at Revel in 1917," records Stapel. "Spending my leave ashore I made friends in a cafeteria. I got drunk and was treated with narcotics. When I woke up I found myself in a train speeding to Petersburg, with two armed guards right and left of me.

Is Cross Examined

Arriving at Petersburg I was taken to the commander of the Red Army group there, cross-examined and urged to join the Red Army. I refused and was put in jail immediately. Later on I was exiled to Siberia, where I was interned together with other victims of the red agents and put to hard labor. When the internment camps were broken up I tried to work my way home by helping out on farms. Within three years on incessant wandering I finally got to Moscow.

"Once again I became the victim of a German agent of the Red Army and was promised a job in the German communist organ appearing in Moscow on condition that I served six months in the Soviet Army to 'complete my communist training.' Again I refused and again I was put in jail and exposed to hunger and cold. Numerous times the guards, just to frighten me, shoved a tip into my cell saying, 'You will be shot tomorrow morning. Keep ready!'

"Exhausted by starvation I finally agreed to enter the army, was released and, a few days later, fled from Moscow. Covering about 800 kilometers within several months and always in fear of being captured by army agents I reached the small town of Orsha in White Russia, near the Polish border.

"I became an apprentice in the apothecary and married a Polish girl. Although happily married my thoughts began to wander back to my fatherland and I tried to get in touch with my parents, through letters. These were never delivered, but opened by the censor and returned to me as 'undeliverable.'

Threatened By G. P. I.

"Once again I moved and settled in Nowgrad, when I finally succeeded in getting a letter through to Germany. My parents wrote back, but when I announced my intention to return to Germany the GPU threatened me with 'immediate expulsion' unless I

NEARLY MAD WITH RHEUMATIC PAINS!

"Nearly every day, especially in damp weather, I suffered terribly from shooting pains and sharp twinges in my legs and arms. Nothing gave me any relief and at times I thought I would go mad. When I tried 'St. Jacob's Oil' it was with no hope at all. The very first application brought relief and I have had perfect comfort since."

Good old "St. Jacob's Oil" certainly does relieve the pains and aches of Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuritis, Lumbago and Neuralgia. This soothing, penetrating oil seems to reach right in through the pores and draw out all the pain and ache. And there is no burning of the skin. Get a small trial bottle of "St. Jacob's Oil" at your druggist and try it out on any pain, ache, sprain or swelling.

ATLANTA YOUTH ABDUCTED

ATLANTA, Mar. 5.—(INS)—Robert Cook, 11 year old son of Mrs. A. B. Cook, formerly of Minneapolis, was kidnapped today while on his way to school. Two men shoved him into an automobile and sped away.

The boy's screams attracted other school children and they notified police. In a formal statement, Mrs. Cook accused her divorced husband, Dr. W. W. Everhart, a dentist of Minneapolis, as the abductor.

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla., Feb.—Above is an aerial view of Port Bay Mabel now under construction at a cost of $6,000,000. The port, which is situated midway between Fort Lauderdale and Hollywood, will be completed to 35 feet by January 1, 1929. Opening of the channel from Bay Mabel into the Atlantic Ocean will be celebrated on Washington's birthday, February 22, when President Coolidge will press the button setting off a mighty blast of dynamite at the cut.

French Have Ideas For Aiding Safety Of Undersea Boats

PARIS, Mar. 5.—(INS)—With skillful and experts flooding the United States Navy Department with suggestions to prevent a repetition of the S-1 disaster the French Academy of Science has given three ideas, all considered feasible, but only for submarines in shallow depths.

The plan is to drop a steel shaft into the hull, pumping out the water so that a diver could descend and release the imprisoned crew. The second is to equip the submarine with detachable buoys which pull up telephone wire and food tubes to the surface.

The last, and admittedly least practical, is for the submarine to drag itself from the bottom, so to speak, by its own shoes, or rather shoulders, the latter being a series of huge buoys connected to the submersible by heavy chains which, once released from the hull, would bring her to the surface. The only danger is said to be that the slightest inequality in tension in the buoys would cause them to tip

Clarence Saunders Heads Corporation For Solution Of Motor Parking Riddle

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Mar. 6.—(INS)—Solution of the automobile parking problem of America may go to a million dollar Memphis organization, the Auto-Tower Corporation, whose president, Clarence Saunders, millionaire grocer, has announced the sale of 15,000 shares of stock and is ready to launch the adventure.

Erection and sale on a royalty operation basis of steel constructed towers with a series of lifts or spaces in two parallel sections and connected on an endless chain system—operating much the same as the Ferris wheel—is the basis on which the corporation is formed.

Approved By Engineers

J. E. Morton is inventor of the new parking system. He holds patents, and the corporation has purchased manufacturing and sales rights for the entire United States.

The device takes up about the same space as two parked autos in the congested business district. The patents provide for a special device which permits the cars to be sent up one side and down the other.

The cars cross at both the top and bottom and can come down either side of the tower.

Long Experiments

Officials of the company have been experimenting with the new invention for more than six months.

Celery Markets
 Bureau of Agricultural Economics co-operating with the Florida State Bureau of Markets. — R. E. Corbin, Local Representative.
 Sixty cars were shipped from Sanford yesterday, 10 from Manatee, a total of 70 from Florida. California shipped 19 making the U. S. total 89. The Sanford shipments were billed as follows: 20 Waycross, 12 Potomac Yards, 7 Chicago, 3 Florence, 3 Jersey City, 2 each New York, Philadelphia, Toronto, and one each Danville, Decatur, Detroit, Erie, Jacksonville, Huntington, Lexington, Nashville and Petersburg.
 The total U. S. shipments this season to date are: Old crop 24301 New Crop 3229, last season to the date Old Crop 20030, New 3133 cars.
 The demand for celery on the Florida market is a little slower than last week. The best 6's and 3's are still selling for $2.25, and there is a fairly good demand for those sizes.
