Accident ties up I-4

LAKE MARY - A car and truck accident tied up westbound early rush-hour traffic on I-4 for several hours this morning. For a brief time, traffic was backed up for as far as six miles to the north, beyond the Lake Monroe Bridge.

The accident occurred under the Lake Mary Boulevard overpass, where highway construction is underway. An automobile reportedly struck a section of the concrete retaining wall used to separate traffic from the construction area. The impact reportedly moved the concrete structure out into the traffic lane where it was then struck by an oncoming truck.

Lake Mary Police, who investigated the accident, were able to keep one westbound lane open during most of the time, with the exception of a short period when bucket loaders were called in to move the concrete retainer. All traffic lanes were reopened at approximately 7

Man charged with DUI death

SANFORD - Clarence Anthony Flowers of Sanford was charged Monday with causing an accident in April that led to the death of five-year-old Sara Sims.

Sanford police say Flowers was drunk when he struck the car driven by Sims' mother Debra Sims of Sanford on April 17 at the intersection of Old Lake Mary Road and 25th Street. Sanford Police Capt. Charles Fagan said blood tests revealed Flowers had an alcohol content of . 16.

Sims died May 5 of complications from the accident at Arnold Palmer Hospital for Children and Women in Orlando. Debra Sims and two daughters were also injured and treated at area hospitals.

Flowers was taken into custody at his home Monday morning and charged with manslaughter while driving under the influence of alcohol. He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $10,000 bond.

Free food for poor to return

By J. MARK BARFIELD Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - A multi-agency effort could allow free food distribution for low-income families to resume this winter after a hiatus of more than a

It was September 1990 when the Salvation Army stopped their food distribution program because the program became too expensive to operate. But now county officials hope the program can resume providing food for residents by Nov. 1.

The food is offered by the federal government, which provides a maximum of 20 percent of the food value for operations expenses. Other agencies considered offering the service, but found expenses or start-up costs too high.

Under a tentative agreement between Seminole: County and the Retired Seniora Volunteer Program (RSVP), the county would provide $15,000 for expenses for the first two months and RSVP would operate the program. A storefront in the Zayres Plaza, now owned by the Seminole County Expressway Authority, will be available for $350 per month, said SCEA director Gerald Brinton.

Irene Quintana, county social services officer, said RSVP officials have asked the county school board to donate two refrigerators for preservation of butter and cheese. Quintana said the U.S. Department of Agriculture Food Commodity Program currently offers butter, corn meal, flour. peanut butter, beans and honey. The available items vary, she said.

Quintana said she is drafting a proposal for commissioners' consideration next month that would provide RSVP $15,000 in county revenues Bee Food, Page 5A

annexation-pact review due Sanford

By J. MARK BARFIELD Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - Seminole County and Sanford commissioners will meet Tuesday to review a landmark agreement that formally ends the annexations battles of the 1970s

The agreement, if approved by both panels in September would coordinate development at the fringes of the city, end opposition to city annexations and set up a method for problem resolution. The agreement would be in effect for five years unless extended. The joint review is sejeduled for 6 p.m. in the county commission chambers.

The foundation for the agreement was laid in 1989 when the two commissions met and agreed to pursue resolutions to bickering and coordinate land planning and utility [] See Pact. Page 5A

Water restrictions may be needed, report says

By J. MARK BARFIELD Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - A resumption of three-day-per-week lawn watering and other measures may be needed to preserve drinking water supplies. a county study suggess.

When county commissioner Larry Furlong demanded a preliminary copy of the study last month. county officials released it, saying the study was preliminary and the results could be "potentially misleading."

But the final report prepared by Camp Dresser and McKee Inc. and released by the county Tuesday. states the county is using 15 to 27 million gallons per day (mgd) more than is being restored to ground drinking water supplies from rain-

Commissioners will review the report Monday at 1:30 p.m. in the county commission chambers.

The county's drinking water supplies can maintain between 28 mgd and 40 mgd. Currently, 55 mgd is being withdrawn from the ground by the county, cities and private utility companies. By 1995, 67.5 mgd will be consumed at current trends and by 2005, 85.4 mgd will be used, researchers found.

As fresh water is used up, salty undrinkable water replaces it, the consultants found, reducing its ability to hold freshwater. If the water-use trends are allowed to continued, the study predicted Sanford's Number 2 wellfield north of County Road 46-A and Seminole County's Country Club Heights west of County Road 427 could be threatened with saltwater by 2005.

"Salt water intrusion poses a serious threat to the long-term use of groundwater resources in Seminole County," researchers concluded "A portion of the Floridan acquifer underlying Seminole County contains unusable salt water."

The study also found that public wells in Oviedo, Winter Springs and Longwood, along with Sanlando Springs and Wekiva Springs appear to be spreading saltwater throughout the county. Researchers found the line of underground saltwater had stretched nearly five miles during the last 15 years at one

To stave off the onslaught of the saltwater threat and conserve up to 20 mgd, the consultants recommend reinstating a two- or three-day per week lawn watering restrictions.

The St. Johns River Water Management District removed three-day watering restrictions last month after normal rainfall returned to central Florida. Seminole County and the entire water district are allowed to water fawns seven days a

Elderly man accused of molesting boys

PENSACOLA - An elderly man children called "Grandpa Gus" or "Captain Gus" has been charged with molesting a half-dozen young boys.

"The children thought he was a wonderful man, not a bogey man," said Escambia County sheriff's investigator Michele

Augustus Rawls, 68, has been in the Escambia County Jail since Aug. 8, when he was charged with engaging in a sex act with a child. Ten more counts of the same charge and one of making a lewd and lascivious assault on a child were filed

The new charges involve five more boys between 8 and 15 years old.

Mail carrier suspended

HOLLYWOOD — A mail carrier from Hollywood has been suspended without pay by the U.S. Postal Service until officials complete an investigation into how hundreds of pieces of mail ended up in his car trunk.

Hollywood police found about 500 pieces of undelivered mail in Samuel Berkman's car on July 19, said Bob Grudek, a federal postal inspector. The car was parked in a lot at Berkman's trailer park.

Berkman says he is innocent, and that anyone could have put the mail into the trunk, which is broken and does not lock. Grudek said the letters - an assortment of first-, second- and third-class mail - were postmarked between December 1990 and June 1991.

Football player charged in slashing

PENSACOLA - A Pensacola High School football player has been charged with slashing two teammates in a school locker room, police say.

Mark Antonio Sapp. 18, was arrested Monday and charged with two counts of aggravated battery.

Sapp, a senior safety, cut the two other players while the team was preparing for practice, coach Charlie Armstrong said Tuesday. He added that he has kicked Sapp off the team.

Chris Stallworth, one of the two 16-year-old victims, said Sapp started pushing him around, according to a police report. He told police he thought Sapp was kidding until he pulled out the knife and cut him on the arm.

Sapp then fought with another teammate, Tony Mallory, who received a cut on the lower back that required 12 stitches to close, the report stated.

Alleged rapist arrested

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. - A man who fled West Virginia before he could be sentenced for raping a mentally retarded woman was arrested by FBI agents.

A warrant had been issued in West Virginia for the arrest of Jamaladeen Azeez, 38, on a charge of unlawful flight to avoid confinement for third-degree sexual assault. Azeez appeared Wednesday before U.S. Magistrate Lurana

Snow in Fort Lauderdale and was ordered held without bond. Azeez was convicted in 1987 on a charge of raping a mentally retarded 29-year-old woman who was a patient at a local hospital in Beckley, W.Va. At the time, Azeez was working as a lab technician at the hospital.

Whales returned to sea

KEY LARGO - Two short-finned pilot whales, part of a pod of 18 that became stranded July 21 off Key West, were returned to the sea after a month of rehabilitation.

Eight other whales swam away after volunteers pushed them into open water, and eight more whales didn't survive the

The surviving whales, nicknamed Trish and Alex, were nurtured back to health by staff and volunteers at Dolphins Plus, a Key Largo-based marine mammal research center. The 12-foot-long Trish, who weighed 1,200 pounds, was treated with antibiotics and a deworming medication to aid her fight against acute bronchial pneumonia and parasites in her lungs and liver. On Wednesday, the staff and volunteers loaded Trish and

Alex, who is 10 foot long and weighs 700 pounds, onto inflatable rafts and towed them 16 miles into the Atlantic

Free stress test haunts woman

FORT LAUDERDALE - Bernadette Stevens said the "free" 15-minute heart stress test she took at her local health club came back to haunt her a month later - in the form of a $795

"Things like this are what make my premiums go higher." said the Davie stockbroker whose insurance company paid part of the bill.

Stevens is one of hundreds of Scandinavian Health Club members who took the tests at clubs in Palm Beach, Broward and Dade counties. She said she was misled about the test and thought it was given by the club's employees.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Southern Bell sued over refunds

Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE - Two customers have sued Southern Bell over alleged dental of refunds for telephone outages, also a subject of state investigations. .

A West Palm Beach resident, Roger Quisenberry, and a mental rehabilitation center, Sunrise Communities. filed the class action on behalf of any Southern Bell residential or commercial customer denied the refunds.

State regulations require the rebates when service is out for more than 24 hours. They typically amount to about 36 cents a day.

The suit estimates that hundreds of customers haven't received them, Barry

Richard, the attorney for Sunrise and Quisenberry, said Wednesday. The suit was filed earlier this month in Leon County Circuit Court.

Southern Bell spokesman Spero Canton said the legal action wasn't necessary because the state was already investigating the refunds. He said the company wouldn't comment further.

The state Public Service Commission voted in May to probe whether Southern Bell had withheld the refunds.

The company had assured the com-mission that earlier problems with the rebates were taken care of, but commission staff evaluations later showed some customers still hadn't received them.

Public Counsel Jack Shreve, who represents rate payers before the PSC, said Wednesday he's taken depositions from former and present phone company employees in connection with the probe.

Attorney General Bob Butterworth's office also is investigating the refunds.

And The Miami Herald reported earlier this month that Southern Bell employees were questioned by a statewide grand jury on whether customer service records were falsified and millions of dollars in refunds

While state authorities look at whether legal or regulatory action should be taken. the lawsuit addresses customers' concerns.

Former day-care owner on probation in child porn case

FORT LAUDERDALE - A former day-care owner accused of possessing hundreds of photographs of nude children was placed on five years of probation for possessing child porno-

John Shaver, 57, pleaded no contest Wednesday to the charge. He had faced up to one year in jail on the third-degree felony count.

Highly publicized child sexual abuse cases in recent years caused an atmosphere of hysteria after Shaver's arrest in January 1990, said defense attorney David Bogenschutz.

This case is like the month of March - it went in like a lion and went out like a lamb," said Bogenschutz, who added that his client was relieved it was

In sentencing Shaver, Broward Circuit Judge Robert W. Tyson noted that he was a first-time offender and withheld adjudication, which means Shaver will have no criminal record.

But his arrest will be listed in national crime computers so if he tried to work in day-care ain, a background would show it. said Assistant State Attorney Brian Trehy.

Shaver had faced 29 felony child pornography-related touched children there, but no charges after police say they charges were filed.

But Tyson last year dropped all but one charge after Bogenschutz cited a recent state appellate court ruling that said defendants can only be charged with one count of pornography despite the number of photo-

None of the children in the photos found by police was from Shaver's day-care center. Police also said they found no evidence to support a child-abuse case against him.

Three children from the Fort Lauderdale day-care center initially tested positive for gonorrhea of the throat but later tests were negative. Shaver tested negative for the sexually transmitted disease.

Some parents remain convinced that Shaver sexually abused their children.

"What he was finally convicted of had no bearing on what he did to my kid, or other kids," one of the parents attending Wednesday's court hearing told the Sun-Sentinel in Fort Lauderdale.

Shaver's day-care license was revoked after his arrest. He previously was forced to close a day-care center in Hawaii after allegations that he improperly

Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE - Members of Florida's congressional delegation are looking ahead to the redrawing of boundary lines next year, and two have hired lobbyists to look out for their districts.

When the Legislature convenes in January in a reapportionment session required every 10 years after a census, it will divide the state into 23 congressional districts as opposed to the current 19. It will also redraft all state House and Senate districts.

U.S. Rep. Larry Smith of Fort Lauderdale hopes to put a plan before state lawmakers that all 19 of Florida's current U.S. representatives endorse. In 1982, he was a state legislator

Contamination in Volusia County wells, Seminole OK

By MCK PPEIFAUF Herald Staff Writer

Although the HRS is cautioning well users in Volusia County about possible contamination in private wells. Seminole County does not appear to have any problems. The Volusia County Public Health unit recently found an indication of high nitrate levels in a number of private wells. Seminole County authorities however, say they have not detected any problems. Semi-nole County HRS Director John Cochran said, "I've contacted some of the HRS people in Volusia County and they say that out of 1.500 wells, they found only 1.4 percent of them were at a higher than acceptable level." Cochran said he did not expect similar problems in Sem-Inole County.

Volusia County authorities suspected their problems were caused by the heavy rainfall which carries surface area pollutants deeper into the groundwater. Health warnings were specifically aimed at pregnant women and infants-

Drug business earns family stiff sentence

By VICKI Description Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - U.S. District Judge G. Kendali Sharp put a Sanford family out of business

Three members of the Jackson family, of 1121 7th St. in Sanford, were sentenced to life in prison for their parts in running a crack cocaine production and distribution operation in west Sanford.

Other members of the family were sentenced to between 191/2 and 40 years in prison.

According to Sanford Police Chief Steve Harriett, the family was accused of distributing more than 50 pounds of crack cocaine, mostly in their west Sanford neighborhood between January of 1990 until their arrests in March of this year.

The Sanford Police Department worked with the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administation and the Seminole County Sheriff's Department on an 18 month investigation that led to the arrests of Robert Jackson, Sr., 43; Ethel Mac Jackson, 41, and Robert Jackson, Jr., 19, In March. According to Harriett both Robert Jackson, Sr. and his son had several drug convictions in Ethel Mae Jackson's brother Alphonso Junior Jackson, 34, of Sanford was sentenced to 40 years behind bars; her daughter April Gordon, 24, of Sanford was given a 1914 year sentence and Eddie Williams, 41, was sentenced to 20 years in prison.

Jurisdiction over students after class discussed

SANFORD - The School Board of Seminole County will meet in a work session tonight to discuss what jurisdiction the schools have over students during non-school hours.

There is currently no district policy outlining what school administrators may or may not do in the area of disciplining students for infractions of the district code of conduct when they are not in school.

Interest in the subject peaked several months ago when Lake Mary High School parents pro-tested the school's anti-drug policy which extended to parties that happened off campus and not on school time.

The "Just Say No" policy was the only one of its kind in the district and parents felt that the district should either ban Lake Mary's policy or make it a district-wide one.

The board will meet tonight at 7 p.m. for the work session the the district board room, 1211 Mellonville Ave. in Sanford.

Health care

More than 10 million working Americans and their dependents lack health insurance. For the most part, they are not poor enough to qualify for Medicaid, the government health program for the poor. Yet neither they, nor their employers, can afford to pay for private health insurance.

To patch this huge crack in the nation's health care system, a presidential advisory council has recommended broadening the federal-state Medicaid program to provide hospital care and doctors' services to the uninsured working poor.

The cost of accommodating the additional recipients could amount to as much as $9.2 billion a year. At present, Washington already contributes $41 billion annually to the program. The states contribute another $30 billion.

Whether the White House ultimately embraces this proposal will hinge in part on whether President Bush views America's health care crisis as a top domestic priority.
The administration so far has not shown an inclination to invest the added sums of money for health care that the advisory council proposes. For that matter, the administration has offered few fresh ideas on the problem of health care, ceding the initiative to Congress instead.

If Congress spends $9 billion to expand Medicaid, it almost certainly would have to siphon the funds from other domestic pro-grams or raise taxes. The federal deficit, estimated at $348 billion for next year, already is far too large to accommodate a huge new spending program without the added resources to pay for it.

Deborah L. Steelman, who chaired the 13-member advisory group and was director of domestic policy for Mr Bush's 1988 presidential campaign, has made a good case that something must be done for the millions of Americans below the poverty level who have no access to health care: "It's not socially acceptable; it's not morally acceptable," she observes.

That sentiment is shared by many in Congress, who increasingly view the health care dilemma as a national crisis. Republicans and Democrats alike are pushing for legislation to help the working poor acquire health insurance.

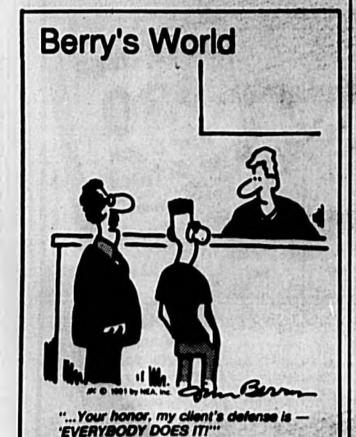

The proposal that Medicaid be expanded to encompass more poor Americans raises a critical question that needs to be decided before Washington sets aside additional billions of dollars for health care. Namely, should the federal government begin an immediate piecemeal approach to the crisis or hold off for a comprehensive solution?

For instance, broadening Medicaid to include the 35 percent of poor families who currently lack coverage would help 10 million Americans immediately. But there still would remain another 20 to 25 million nonpoor Americans without health insurance.

These questions need to be thrashed out by the Bush administration and Congress. But the debate over America's inadequate health care system must be made a top priority right now - not only by Congress but also by President Bush.

he Thomasizing of the country

The absolute last thing President Bush had in mind when he nominated Clarence Thomas to the Supreme Court was that it would bring the country closer together racially. Ideological subservience, not racial harmony, has been the president's goal.

Equally unexpected was a blitzing, in-yo'-face campaign by The Wall Street Journal on behalf of a man whose race is minimally represented in that conservative newspaper's ranks. No newspaper — black or white — has come close to matching The Journal's depth of passion for stehing The Journal's depth of passion for

The following year, when Nixon submitted an even more egregiously racist nominee, G. Harrold Carswell, a Journal editorial contended the Floridian could "serve with distinction, if confirmed." The Senate also rejected Carswell. Again, the NAACP led the opposition.

The next time, however, President Nixon nominated an eminent legal scholar and political moderate, Harry A. Blackmun, who breezed to confirmation. Blackmun, unlike Clarence Thomas, was no parochial ideologue.

Why this historical revisitation? For only one reason: Both President Bush and The Wall Street Journal would ask America's 25 million African-Americans to do a curious thing — to turn their backs on the civil-rights organization that has been most effective in breaking down racial barriers.

Yet there is one irreversible value to the Clarence Thomas nomination. It facilitates a new political realignment that is based more on ideology than racial divisions.

Will U.S. foot college bills?

WASHINGTON - It's the time of year when millions of parents sit down to write out college tuition checks, while wrestling with myriad loan and financial aid forms for their children. It's also the time of year when these same parents moan, "There must be a better way!" Now a group of congressmen, led by Reps. Thomas Petri, R-Wis., and Sam Gejdenson, D-Conn., believe they have a better system.

First some facts: College, graduate, professional and proprietary school students in the 1991-92 academic year will borrow about $10 billion. The 1.8 million four-year college students will borrow an average of $2,480; the 360,000 graduate and professional students will borrow an average of $5.800; and the 950,000 proprietary school attendees and community college students will borrow an average of $2,255.

A small part of this borrowing is directly from the federal government through the Student Loan Services program. The majority is from commercial lenders, federally guaranteed under the government's Stafford program.

Currently, there is about $50 billion in student loans guaranteed by the U.S. taxpayer. It is estimated that a quarter to a third of these loans will end up in default, with repayment falling to the taxpayers.

So any new lending program must make money more readily available to students. better guarantee repayment and cut costs to

Under the Petri-Gejdenson plan — called Under the Petri-Gejdenson plan — called Assistance - a student would borrow directly from an agency of the federal government. It, in turn, would get the money to lend by selling bonds. Repayments would be collected by the Internal Revenue Service in annual amounts tied to a student's forecasted future earnings.

Over the years, a student could borrow up to a maximum of $70,000 - $29,000 for four years of undergraduate school, plus another $41,000 for four years of graduate or pro-fessional school. Interest would begin accruing immediately at a rate of either 10 percent or 2 percent more than the average rate of 91-day Treasury bills - whichever is less.

Repayment would not begin until after a student has graduated. Then the amount repaid each year would be put on the borrower's tax return just as if it were income tax owed, with the annual repayment dependent on the balance owed and the former student's income level.

No loan repayment would be due in any year in which a student has earned less than the threshold amount for paying income taxes ($6,050 for an individual, $10,900 for a joint return). Repayments would be capped at a maximum of 19 percent of income in any year.

If a former student had not repaid his entire debt within 25 years of graduation. the balance would be forgiven.

The numbers involved are complex. But the plan's designers estimate that the average student would repay his loan balance in about 12 years. And the total amount repaid to the government would not be much different than it is now under the Stafford program.

The average student borrows $14,000 over a four-year undergraduate career. Under the current Stafford program, he would be required to repay $189.74 each month at an interest rate of 8 percent, for a total repayment of $15,638.

Under IDEA the total repayment would be $370.82 more, but he would have a longer period of repayment: and he would have the protection of no repayment or very low repayment in any year that his income fell off significantly. Also, the actual borrowing would be much easier because the student borrower would not have to find a commercial lending institution willing to lend him the money. Another benefit, and one that can be appreciated by both student and parent, is that paperwork would be much reduced.

The actual

One drawback to this program is that former students with high earnings will effectively subsidize borrowers whose low incomes require no or very low repayments. This feature troubles many in higher education, including Art Hauptman, a financial aid expert with the American Council on Education.

"I like many of the features of this plan." says Hauptman. "It makes borrowing easy and takes the banks out of the equation. It makes more money available to students. It will cut way down on defaults, and it will save the taxpayers money. "The one thing I don't like is that it will unfairly punish students who, immediately after school, develop relatively high incomes. I would like to see a modification of the plan to allow a student to choose between straight monthly repayment and income-contingent repayment.

is it work or play at IRS seminars?

WASHINGTON - It's tough to open our mail these days without finding at least one anonymous tip about yet another extravagant trip by Internal Revenue Service employees traveling on the taxpayers' dime. Collecting all that tax money apparently has warped the agency's sense of thrift. Easy come, easy go.

The latest getaway involved a flock of IRS lawyers who spent four days at a tropical resort in Fort Lauderdale. They simply had to remove themselves from the distractions of the office for an educational seminar that cost the taxpayers about $100,000.

Before we expose the sordid details, we must note that the IRS is reviewing its wanderlust. Our recent columns exposing a few of those trips encouraged them to think twice about scheduling fancy retreats for employees. In fact, a two-day meeting for managers, originally scheduled last month at a fancy hotel in Maryland, was relocated to spartan Andrews Air Force Base. So, instead of being put up at the hotel for $70 a night. the 62 participants in the meeting commuted to the base from their homes for two days.

But it was only two weeks later that 150 IRS attorneys threw public opinion to the wind and headed for the Pier Sixty Six Resort and Marina in Fort Lauderdale, our associate Scott Sleek has discovered. They were there for further education, including discussions of new developments in tax court rules and procedures.

It sounds like serious work, but it's hard to swallow the all-work-no-play line from the IRS when the hotel, in its own brochures, is described as "lush." with private balconies overlooking the water, telephones in the bathrooms, daily cruises to the Caribbean islands, waterfront tennis courts, a worldclass marina, parasailing, snorkeling, yachting, massages and free shuttle service to the

The IRS claims it holds these events at getaway hotels when work needs to be done without the constant interruptions of the office. Apparently the IRS has never considered a conference room with a lock on the door, a box of donuts and an order to, "Hold all calls."

The IRS also claims that the participants are kept so busy that they have little or no time to enjoy the lavish offerings the hotels. We have to assume then that the IRS is squandering money on amenities that it pays for and never uses.

Although the IRS is reviewing its standards for scheduling such retreats, they will still be held if deemed necessary, an IRS spokeswoman told us.

We have already reported on other trips the IRS has deemed "necessary" in recent months. There was the ethics seminar. costing at least $124,000, put on last winter in a cozy West Virginia mountain resort. In June, 100 internal auditors from the IRS headquarters in Washington attended a computer-training meeting at a beachfront resort in Ocean City. Md., at a total cost of $34,600.

Just a few days later, top IRS managers from Philadelphia put their noses to the grindstone at a seminar at an elegant - but who had time to notice? - golf resort in the Pocono mountains. If the IRS employees hadn't been so busy, they could have used one of two championship golf courses, tennis courts, swimming pools, a sauna, a trapshooting range and a Nautilus fitness center. That getaway cost taxpayers about $88,000. not including travel expenses.

Bush likely to support republics

By RUTH SINAL

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - The aborted coup in the Soviet Union is likely to spur the Bush administration to realign its policies toward the Soviet Union, current and former officials say.

The main thrust of the change is expected to mirror the altered balance of power in the Soviet Union - shifting U.S. support from its almost exclusive focus on President Mikhail Gorbachev to take into account the growing power of the country's constituent republics.

This is a course the administration shunned until very recently, despite clear signs and intelligence reports that the center of power was moving away from Gorbachev to Independence-minded republic leaders like Russian President Boris Yeltsin.

Now, the administration will have little choice.

'What has happened is it's a clear indication that the center has lost control," sald Rep. Dave McCurdy, D-Okla., chairman of the House Intelligence Commit-

The coup also might loosen purse strings in Washington. Since last winter, the administration has approved $2.5 billion in guarantees for Soviet purchases of U.S. farm goods but only small amounts of direct aid. President Bush said Wednesday in Kennebunkport, Maine, that he would "look at" the possibility of direct economic aid to the Soviet Union in the coup's aftermath. "We will certainly, if things work out in a satisfactory fashion, get back into the business of furthering the economic recovery" in the Soviet Union, he said.

"I think if the reform measures come - and I think they will come now - that both technical assistance and financial assistance will be forthcoming because it will be in the longterm interest of our government to do so," McCurdy said.

But Jack Matlock, who last weekend returned from a fiveyear stint as U.S. ambassador in Moscow, cautioned that "money isn't going to help them until they reform their economic system."

Bush might face a tussle with Congress over just how much support to give the republics. "It's clear today that the Gorbachev era is over and we usher in now the Yeltsin era and the era of the Soviet people." McCurdy said.

The president is unlikely to abandon Gorbachev, a man for whom he feels personal admiration and warmth.

A senior administration official said that while Gorbachev is likely weakened by the coup, he still will retain control over the Soviet military and foreign policy and will lead the central government - albeit one with diminished significance.

"He will still be the official address for our dealings with that country," said the official, who, like the others quoted. spoke only on condition of ano-

A clear sign of a more evenhanded U.S. policy came during the two-day coup, when Bush spoke twice by telephone with Yeltsin. Shortly after the coup ended, he spoke for the first time with Gorbachev.

Back in the saddle again

Klein takes over Seminole hoop program

By TONY DeSORMIER Herald Sports Editor

SANFORD - Bill Klein is the new varsity boys basketball coach at Seminole High School . . . again.

Four years after handing over the reigns of the Tribe hoop program to Greg Robinson, Klein is taking them back. Robinson stepped down this summer to become the dean of students at Jackson Heights Middle School.

"At the time (four years ago), I felt that I wanted to get out of coaching and stay in teaching," said Klein. "But then I learned that I missed it (coaching). I was lucky enough this opportunity came up.

How Klein got the job was one of those happy sequences of coincidences. Upon returning from a trip to visit his mother in Pennsylvania. Klein asked a friend if anyone had been found to replace Robinson and was told that no one had been hired. The next day, that same individual spoke to then-principal Wayne

Epps.
"Wayne asked them 'Is Bill interested in the job? If he is, have him come by and see me.' " recounted Klein. He was, so he did.

"It was a combination the fact that there was a freeze on hiring. Nobody new could be hired. Wayne wanted to get someone into the position and I happened to be avallable."

In Klein, Seminole has one of the most experienced coaches in the Everett High School in into business." Pennsylvania. From 1967 to 1973, he was the head football coach,

During the 1985-86 and 1986-87 seasons, Bill Klein coached the Tribe to a 42-15 record.

"From there, I went to Oviedo, where I was an assistant football coach for two years and the head football coach for two more years," sald Klein. "Then I got the idea that county. He started his career as a I wanted to be a businessman, so I football and basketball coach at got out of teaching and tried to go

But that didn't last long and Klein soon found himself as the football basketball coach and athletic coach and athletic director at the director at the old Sanford Naval Crooms Ninth Grade Center, Four years later, he moved over to basketball coach Chris Marlette. In 1985, Klein became Seminole High School's head basketball coach for the first time.

Over the next two seasons, Klein's teams won 42 games. During the 1985-86 season, the Seminoles were 17-9 while winning the Seminole Athletic Conference championship with a 9-1 SAC mark. During the 1986-87 campaign, Seminole went 25-6, sweeping to the SAC title with Both seasons, Seminole was defeated in the district semifinals. While Klein did resign from coaching the Seminole varsity team after the 1986-87 season, he kept his hand in coaching. Most recently, he coached the Seminole freshmen basketball team during the 1989-90 school year. "Of the (varsity) team coming back, I coached the ones who will be LiSec Klein, Page 2B

Signed Lee to battle Turner for nose job

Associated Press

MIAMI - Shawn Lee practiced with the Dolphina for the first time Wednesday after signing a contract reportedly worth $315,000, but he'll have to beat out his good friend for the starting nose tackle job.

While Lee was holding out, converted defensive end T.J. Turner stepped in and excelled. After sitting out the first preseason game following a two-week contract dispute, the six-year veteran had two sacks, nine tackles, and a fumble recovery in the last three games.

"When Turner walks in the door he even looks like a nose tackle," Dolphins coach Don Shula said in praising Turner's overall play.

Lee, at 6.2 and 297 pounds, started at nose tackle in 10 games last year, accounting for 34 tackles and 1 1/2 sacks. The four-year veteran, acquired by Miami in a trade with the Atlanta Falcons in Sept. 1990, said he's tired of having to prove himself.

"Coming into the league I was a blue-collar worker, small school, sixth-round draft pick so I was never given anything anyway. It's just another challenge for me like my whole NFL career has been."

Schaefer (center), who oversees the city's men's and Mike West of State Market Restaurant, Florida softball leagues, handed out the trophies to the Manor's Jerry DiBartolo, Schaefer, Mark Blythe of spring?summer league champions Wednesday night. By ROBBIE STOCK Herald Correspondent

ORLANDO - Although Rick Clonninger is the defending champion, all eyes will be on Cliff Kresge when play begins Friday in the Orlando City Amateur Championship at Dubsdread

Picking up the hardware

Sanford Recreation Department supervisor Jim

It's not that Clonninger, who won last year's event with a 4-under-par 212 total at DeBary Plantation, won't be able to conquer the layout at Dubsdread: it's just that this is the last tournament of Kresge's spectacular amateur career which is being played at a course that used to be his front yard.

"I'm going to go out and have a good time," said Kresge, 24, who now plays out of Longwood's Sabal Point Country Chib. "Whatever happens, happens."

Two years ago, Kresge blistered Dubsdread and the field with rounds of 66 and 69 to win the rain-shortened 1989 Orlando City Amateur, The tournament was moved to DeBary last year when the Dubsdread clubhouse was torn down and

another title will be easy, though very possible. "I haven't played well this summer," said

Kresge, who grew up across the street from Dubsdread, "I'm just starting to play well again. "I learned to play the game at Dubsdread. I know the course like the back of my hand. The only thing that will stop me is my head."

For Kresge, a victory would make up for a rough summer in which he struggled constantly. At the Men's State Amateur championship at Lecanto's Black Diamond Country Club in June. Kresge shot 75-79-72-72 to finish well back in the

He also failed to qualify for the United States Amateur and Western Amateur events. In the latter. Kresge was one of 22 players involved in a playoff for the last two spots in the field. He advanced to the lifth hole before being climinated. He did qualify for the United States Public Links Championship but lost his first-round match to defending champion Michael Combs on the 17th hole.

"One shot here or there and I'd be doing better," said Kresge. "But that's the way golf is." In order to capture another Orlando City Amateur title. Kresge said he must putt well on Dubsdread's small greens. Despite the course's lack of distance. Dubsdread challenges golfers with narrow lairways and tight approach shots. Two holes down the stretch - the 180-yard par-3 15th bole and the 400 yard par-4 16th could determine the champion. "The tee shot is the big key there (at 16)," explained Kresge, who played the Dubsdread course repeatedly as a member of the Edgewater High School golf team. "You can easily double (bogey) the hole."

In 1989, Kresge and Lake Brantley graduate Paul Tynan each came to 16 at 5-under par, but Tynan's second shot went out of bounds and he suffered a triple bogey.

Regardless of his performance this weekend, Kresge will turn professional and begin playing on the Central Florida Mint Tour this fall. He's considering trying to earn his PGA Tour Card later in the year

And Kresge, who won the UCF Budget Classic and the Vanderbilt Music City Invitational during his collegiate career, isn't looking for instant fame: he's ready to pay his dues.

"I'm going to take it step by step," said Kresge, "I just want to be successful."

There were some kids from Lake Mary who came over and some of our graduates were out," said Klein. "In the process. I had a chance to see all of our kids play. I had been to some games last year, but I was watching as a fan, not to see who'd be coming back."

Klein takes over a team that went 15-12 last year after an 0-6 start and only graduated three players. Of those, only Kerry Wiggins was a full-time starter. He also inherits a 20-game schedule that includes appearances in the Rotary Tip-Off Classic at Winter Park High School and the Central Florida Classic, which is played at Seminole Community College and Oviedo High School. "There will be no changes in schedule," said Klein. "We still have two dates available on our schedule. We hope to fill those

Sarasota the next stop on the long road back for White Sox' Jackson

By MATT KELLEY

Associated Press Writer CHICAGO - Bo Jackson swung his but in the butting cage at Comiskey Park as if he had something to prove. At every pitch, Jackson took a mammoth swing. Some balls cracked off his bat and flew to the outfield wall. He missed others, overdoing the followthrough and sometimes softly muttering a curse into the dirt.

With Jackson poised to start his comeback in the minor leagues this weekend, he obviously had hitting on his mind before the Chicago White Sox-Detroit Tigers game Wednesday night. Bo is scheduled to be the designated hitter for the White Sox' Sarasota farm club in Florida State League games Saturday and Sunday.

Surrounded by reporters and photographers after batting practice, Jackson said: "I think the media is making more hype out of this than I am. I'm just going out there to play ball. Once get there, it won't be Bo Jackson playing a baseball game. It'll just be a baseball game." Jackson, 28, said he's about 50 percent recovered from a devastating hip injury he suffered Jan. 13 when he was playing football for the Los Angeles Raiders. No longer the self-confident two-sport star. Jackson is somewhat like a rookie trying to prove his talents to management.

"He's got to go down there and prove he can do these things." White Sox general manager Ron Schueler said. "I'm not going to activate him just because he's Bo Jackson. If he can't help the ballelub, he's not going to be on the roster."

If all goes well this weekend. Jackson will move up on Monday to the Class AA Birmingham Barons, a club that just might feel like home.

"He's from this area and people around here are pretty excited about having Bo back," said Joe Scrivner, the Barons' general manager. "I'm not greedy. I'm just thankful to have him here for however long he'll

Getting there, and perhaps moving up to help the Sox in the team's pennant race against the American League West-leading Minnesota Twins, is what Jackson is focusing on these

"If I could be going full speed.
I'd be playing here." Jackson said as he stood in Comiskey Park. "But you've got to walk before you run, and I'm just at the walking stage right now."

Schueler was tight-lipped about any plans to bring Jackson up to the majors. He is currently on the Whit Sox' 60-day disabled list.

Schueler said it's too early to know whether the White Sox made a good deal in acquiring Jackson after the Royals released him. "In a week or two. that question will answer itself." he said.

The Royals' management isn't having any second thoughts. We did what was in the best interests of the ballclub." Kansas City general manager Herk Robinson said. "We never said he wouldn't play this year or he couldn't play this year. It was the recommendation of our people that he shouldn't play this year." In Sarasota, meanwhile, team officials are expecting 6,000 people to attend Saturday's game at the 7,500-seat Ed Smith Stadium. Weekend crowds there normally average 1,300. 'We're excited," said Sarasota general manager John Browne. We're hoping he can do some things, not only for us but for the White Sox. We're in the middle of a battle to win our division. and it would be great to see him do well."

VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Judy and I have been married for one month, and I have already filed for divorce. This is the second marriage for both of us.

The problem is Judy's 16-year-old daughter, Lynne. Lynne told her mother that if she stayed married to me, she'd go live with her father. Judy doesn't want Lynne to live with her father because he drinks. Also, Lynne threatened to get pregnant just for spite.

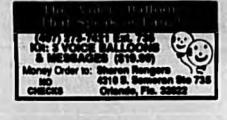

Judy insists that she loves me. She says she doesn't want a divorce and the solution would be for me to move out and get a separate apartment near here for two years until Lynne is 18. Abby, I love Judy more than any woman I've ever known, but

DEAR ABBY: In regard to your recent letter from the bride who found that their honeymoon suite contained no bed, I heard of another bride who had the same experience. When asked what her rection was, she replied, "I was floored!"

Fresh air could ease icult breathing ty breathing and my bronhial tubes are full of mucus. Ince I am 76 and also suffer rom arthritis, I spend a great al of time in bed. I have an air cleaner on my furnace and keep cacillating fans going all the time, yet I still need additional help. What would you suggest? DEAE READER: You seem to have at least two problems with respiration: nasal congestion and excess bronchial mucus. The two may be related.

As you have surmised (in attempting to reduce air pollu-tion by using an air cleaner on the furnace), part of your dif-ficulty may be caused by material in the air you breathe. This could be as simple as an allergy. Such inhalational allergies are quite common — even in the elderly — and may represent an over-sensitivity to pollen, allergens from a feather pillow or a horse-hair mattress, or substances excreted by dust mites. tiny parasites that live in house dust. This sensitivity causes allergic rhinitis — stuffy nose, watery eyes, cough and increased bronchial secretions.

On the other hand, some people react badly to other substances in the environment. Cigarette smoke, wood smoke. smog and soot are common culprits. Reactions to these sub-stances are probably not true allergies but, rather, the conse-quences of air pollution.

Obviously, avoidance of these triggering substances would help your breathing. An allergist, by using skin and blood tests, could identify them and advise you how to avoid or overcome them. If you choose not to see a specialist, you still might be helped by using an air purifier/humidifier in the house. discouraging smoking (and wood fires) in the home, purchasing a hypo-allergenic pillov and mattress, using non-wool bedding and trying one of the many over-the-counter an tihistamine/decongestant drugs, such as Actifed, Dimetapp or Naldecon. These agents would also exert a drying effect on your bronchial passages.

We seem to have spent the whole week struggling to overcome vicious distribution. but when key suits divide 3-2 or 3-3, hands are quickly forgotten. Only when the breaks are bad is a deal likely to find its way into print.

Today's hand is no exception. If you haven't sneaked a peck at the East-West cards, decide how you would play in six spades, West leading the club two.

North showed some 18-20 points with his two-no-trump rebid. Once South found out about the 5-3 spade fit, he named the contract he thought he could make. It may be unscientific, but rubber-bridge bidding tends to be like that.

South's immediate impulse was to ruff two hearts in hand. establishing the heart eight as his 12th trick. But luckily, second thoughts prevailed. That line of play would require hearts to be 4-3 and trumps 3-2.

After a fourth-best club lead, there was a safer path available. Having won the first trick with dummy's club queen, South cashed the club king and heart

Why cash the heart ace? Declarer was planning to end with a crossruff, and when one adopts that approach, it is good technique to cash the side-suit winners first.

Next declarer played a diamond back to his ace and cashed the club ace, discarding a diamond from the dummy. Finally South cast off with a diamond.

East won with the diamond king and returned a trump, but declarer won in hand and crossruffed in diamonds and
