TUESDAY, OCTOBER 16. TODAY'S BIBLE VERSE: Gen. 16:13 Thou God seeest me

Surely I am their mother, when I stand upon the topmost step and wave my hand

Yet bits of me, I fashion and demand, Travel with them upon the windward road

And, when the evening comes, I needs must yearn

At woman's work, facing their near return; Yet part of me leaps swiftly up the stair

To reach my own dear mother waiting there! Marguerite Jeanvra Adams

Don't dose a Child's Cold

CONTINUAL dosing upsets children's delicate stomachs. Vicks is applied externally and therefore cannot disturb the digestion. It acts in two ways:
(1) The body heat releases the ingredients in the form of vapors which are inhaled.
(2) At the same time Vicks "draws out" the mucus like a poultice.

SMITH THINKS HE WILL CARRY G. O. P. STATES

Personal confidence has been engendered by his present tour. The crowds that have turned out to see him at every stop have been enormous. The Governor does not believe that they come wholly out of curiosity to see the brown devil. The Republicans say they do, but Governor Smith does not personally believe it. And everywhere throughout the South and border country, through which he has been traveling, the effect of a week of the state leaders have informed him that Democratic chances are looking up.

In Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky and Missouri the reports have largely been the same. The state leaders have reported to him that four weeks ago the situation looked dark in all of these states, but that today it is a different story. Senator McKellar in Tennessee told him he would carry the state by at least 25,000. Senator Buckley told him the same thing in Kentucky and today Bennett Clark, son of the late Champ Clark, said here in Missouri Smith would win by 50,000.

"A month ago I would not have said that," said Clark.

Zeppelin Crew Has Rest Before Being Feted In New York

the loss of a patch of fabric on the port fin astern. She was more than 20 hours behind schedule, but, even so, Dr. Eckener glowed with pride in discussing her achievement.

He told all about it late last evening after immigration officers and customs guards had examined him and the 59 others, including the lone woman passenger, Lady Drummond Hay. From a makeshift platform made of chairs in a room in the hangar, Captain Eckener recounted his experience in a talk with the reporters. He is of medium height, well built and wears a van dyke beard. He is about 60 years old. He smoked a cigar in a holder. In his button-hole was a red carnation.

Dr. Eckener said he had been without sleep for all but eight of the 115 hours the dirigible was in flight. He said he surrendered a thousand miles to the elements in his fight to bring the air liner safely to port. For the last 60 hours of the trip he had battled the big bag through head winds with a stern stabilizer which forced him to run at a little more than half speed.

"The weather was very bad over the Atlantic," he said. "You know I said that I would make the flight as soon as the ship was finished. And when it started, the weather was bad, but I was in the position of either being a hero or making a trans-Atlantic voyage. Because of the bad weather over the ocean we were compelled to go by way of Gibraltar which added 1,200 statute miles to the journey.

Describing the accident that stripped the fabric from the lower side of the port fin, Dr. Eckener said that "nothing like it ever happened in the history of Zeppelins."

"The lines that we affected, repairs in mid-ocean and came up to a happy conclusion if the repairs in the damaged ship demonstrated more than ever the safety of dirigibles for trans-ocean flying," he declared.

It required four men five hours to repair the fin. It was a dangerous task they had to run up the cat walk into the tail of the ship, scramble up the ladders to the frame that meets the fin at that point and then, one by one, carrying knives and shears, they climbed out over the ocean as the spars that make up the frame of the fin. There was nothing between them and the ocean but 1,500 feet of air.

Dr. Eckener said he ordered the engines stopped and the ship rolled gently in the storm, riding on the wings as the men worked. From their precarious perch they managed to cut away the hanging shroud after working from 8 to the morning until 1 o'clock.

"Wasn't your son, Knute, one of the four men who did that risky job?" Eckener almost blurted out. "Knute is 24, he said. 'Were the passengers satisfied?' he was asked. 'Yes, they were very satisfied,' he replied. 'How many miles did you go in the whole trip?' 'About 11,500 statute miles,' he replied.

The Graf Zeppelin's landing was a beautiful sight to the bystanders, who were still in the hangar, when the great airship stopped at the hangar. The airship had been out of the hangar for the first time since it was built. There were many people in the hangar, and the airship was being examined by the officials of the United States Navy.

While the ground crew was loading the airship to the hangar, the airship was being examined by the officials of the United States Navy. The airship was being examined by the officials of the United States Navy.

ropes which had been dropped through trap doors from the bottom of the ship. The 470 sailors caught a firm hold on the 20 handles of each of the twelve spider-rope. Then the dirigible descended.

Off to the far end of the field where the crowd of 10,000 spectators was held in check by stout troops and marines lusty shouts of "Hoos!" and "Hurrah!" went up and automobile horns shrieked.

With the ship on the ground, police lines were of little use. Relatives and friends of passengers and crew defied arrest and broke through the lines to shout greetings.

Once close to the hangar, immigration, customs and health officers boarded the Graf-Zeppelin. It took them nearly as long in putting passengers and crew through the formalities as on incoming steamships. An hour elapsed before they were allowed to alight. The crowd cheered them wildly as they walked over to the hangar, escorted by state troops.

Dr. Eckener and his men stayed at the reception, eager to get some rest. The majority of the passengers left the field as soon as they had been put through the various formalities. Dr. Robert Reiner, of Weehaven, N. J., was met by his wife, and a special reception committee from Weehaven.

He left the field with them, presumably for Weehaven. Lady Grace Drummond Hay, the only woman passenger aboard the Graf Zeppelin, and Karl Von Wirsing, European representative of the Hearst newspaper, were taken in an automobile to New York. Dr. Short-Pemberton, minister of the State of Florida, joined Dr. Eckener in his visit to the office of Secretary E. N. Jackson, commander of the Laboratory Naval Air Station.

FLIGHT PLANNED

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 15 (INS)—Drawing about the train routes between Dixie and the United States and South and Central America, in an effort to speed good will in the event of a bad winter, a non-stop flight has been arranged from North to South America by the organization to be known as the South American Trans-Atlantic Flight.

Medical Progress Is Told By Leader At Atlanta Meet

ATLANTA, Oct. 16 (INS)—Medical progress since the 14th century up to these modern days when a woman is pronounced cured after having been fed for 18 years through a tube inserted in her stomach, was reviewed today at the second clinical session of the international assembly of the Interstate Post-graduate Association.

Approximately 5,000 doctors and surgeons were on hand at various times during the day to listen to special phases of the review at the municipal auditorium.

Dr. Porter F. Vinson, of the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn., was the authority to point out a specific case of curing throat infection that prevented a woman from swallowing almost a score of years.

Tracing the medical profession's history from the 14th century was the task of Dr. Edmund L. Gros, president of the medical board of the American Hospital in Paris. Dr. Gros obtained much of his data from the archives of the old Hotel Dieu of Paris.

Medical Men From All Parts Gather For Atlanta Meet

ATLANTA, Oct. 15 (INS)—Arriving by train, automobile and airplane, 5,000 medical men were here today for the opening session of the international assembly of the Interstate Post-graduate Medical Association of North America.

Celebrated medical men from Europe were in attendance at the municipal auditorium where the day was given over to a diagnostic clinic and to a symposium on gastro-intestinal diseases. More than 200 medical firms had displayed featuring latest apparatus and medicines.
