

Health Chief Battla Fears Encephalitis

Anti-Mosquito Plan For Seminole?

By DONNA EYER
Herald Staff Writer

Fearing an outbreak of St. Louis encephalitis in Seminole County this year, Dr. Harold Battla, county public health director, has urged the county commission to fund and initiate a mosquito control and eradication program.

In a memo to the county commission, Dr. Battla noted that three Seminole residents in 1977 died from the illness transmitted from water fowl and birds by mosquitoes to humans.

Troy Todd, director of human services in the county, today estimated the cost of such a countywide program at $100,000 annually.

And County Commission Vice Chairman Robert French said that at this point he can see no reason for the county to fund a mosquito control program on a county basis.

"I don't consider three cases out of 100,000 people in the county to be an epidemic. I would have to look at the program and problem long and hard before spending $100,000 of the taxpayers' money."

"I can be shown that there is going to be a problem, however, I probably would consider spending the money for it," French said.

"I have already stated my position of supporting a countywide mosquito control program for consideration for Seminole County," said Commissioner John Alexander, today, adding that

'I'd have to look at the program long and hard'

by countywide, he means the municipal areas, too. The county commission received a letter from the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services in late February saying that St. Louis encephalitis "can be a serious threat to the public health and economy of an area where outbreaks do occur."

The letter mentioned that the only method known for controlling this disease is by effective control of the mosquitoes, adding that Seminole County has not requested state matching funds for a mosquito control program.

Todd said the matching funds constitute only eight percent of the cost. He said his $100,000 estimate for an effective program countywide is only a preliminary figure and was based on the Orange County program now in effect that is costing about $250,000 annually.

"The $100,000 is a ball-park figure based on relative facts," he said.

Mosquito control programs are in effect in Volusia, Orange and Osceola Counties in Central Florida. In Seminole County, Sanford began its annual mosquito fogging program Thursday according to Mack Lashley, city engineer and utility director.

Fogging is scheduled to begin in Altamonte Springs Monday and Altamonte City Engineer Paul Babin, Lakeland and City Council Vice Chairman John Lerman said the annual fogging program for the eradication of mosquitoes is scheduled to begin in her city on April 1.

Charmis in Canaberry have petitioned the city council there to appropriate money from the city's emergency contingency fund to initiate a fogging program.

Ministers End Dispute Over Sunday Sales

By MARK WEINBERG
Herald Staff Writer

The Greater Sanford Ministerial Association, which led an unsuccessful drive to defeat a proposed city ordinance allowing Sunday package sales of beer and wine in Sanford, will not seek a voter referendum on the question.

"There will be no petition drive for a referendum," said the Rev. Dan Cox, pastor of the First Assembly of God Church, 27th and Elm streets. "The association made the decision of its monthly meeting this week. We feel the city commission should reconsider and place the question on the ballot."

The Rev. Cox and others who opposed the ordinance at the March 13 city commission meeting, where the ordinance passed 5-2, said they will not seek a referendum. They said they will support a petition drive to reverse the city commission's decision.

Voting in favor of the ordinance at the meeting were Commissioners John Morris, A.A. McCaskey and Roger Lee P.

'We feel the city commission should reconsider and place the question on the ballot'

Moore. Voting against the ordinance were Commissioners Julian Starnstrom and Eddie O. Keith.

"We feel we presented a good, legitimate case, and the city fathers took a different stand. We regret that they have done this. We feel the ordinance is a step in the wrong direction. We also regret the fact that the city commission would not allow the citizenry to vote on it," the minister said.

The Rev. Cox was referring to the city commission's 5-2 defeat March 13 of a motion by Commissioner Starnstrom which would have delayed the effective date of the ordinance until Jan. 1, 1979 (to allow the ministers time to mount a petition drive, Starnstrom said) and the 5-2 commission defeat the same night of another motion by Starnstrom to place the question on the ballot at the city's Dec. 8 election.

Both of Starnstrom's defeated motions received support from Keith, but Morris, Moore and McCaskey voted to defeat both motions.

"We feel we vocalized our stand against this ordinance, the city fathers have spoken, and that's where we're going to let it lay," said the Rev. Cox.

Voting Begins, Coal Contract Approval Still A Tossup

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With only a few scattered returns reported, coal miners in parts of Ohio and Kentucky today voted strongly against a new contract proposal that would end the record 30-day work stoppage.

However, a sampling of voting returns in Alabama indicated they would approve the deal and return to work.

But only a trickle of results were in and many miners, still trying to establish union halls, were reportedly ready to vote to accept the contract. Final results from a majority of the 770 ballots and 100,000 miners were not expected until later today.

Union officials in areas where contracts were strong against the contract acknowledged pushing an early vote to sway other miners through negative publicity.

The voting came amid reports of an early work stoppage and increased economic hardship in miners' families.

Some miners in both Ohio and Kentucky began casting votes at 10:00 a.m. EDT.

Robert Caswell, president of Local 1600, the largest local in eastern Kentucky's District 10, said his members were overwhelmingly rejecting the contract.

Caswell estimated 130 of the first 140 miners that voted were against the settlement. He acknowledged his local wanted to vote early to influence other districts to reject the contract.

First unofficial results were reported from a small local in Probation, Ohio, where the contract was rejected, 210-104.

A UMW spokesman pointed out, however, that the Probation local had voted more strongly against ratification on the first contract proposal, rejecting that deal 61-45.

Today was the second time the miners were called to decide on a contract offer. On March 5, over 70 percent rejected a proposed pact.

An earlier proposed settlement was rejected by the union bargaining council and cover was submitted to the rank and file.

After the March 5 vote, President Carter invoked the Tall-Hartley law and a federal judge ordered miners to return to work. Miners defied the order and eight days later the same judge refused to enforce it. That made the nation's longest continuous mine-wide work stoppage.

United Mine Workers leaders, anxious for ratification, guarded against momentum from early results affecting the outcome by ordering all voting to occur today, Coal Prices.

Voting began amid scattered incidents in the east. Two cars were fired upon in Illinois District 15. That made the nation's longest continuous mine-wide work stoppage. Police reported no injuries.

Carter Target: End To All Gibberish

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Plain English spelled bitter. President Carter Thursday signed an executive order directing that federal regulations be made "as simple and clear as possible" and accomplish their purpose "with a minimum of paperwork and red tape."

Urban Plan Near Complete

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter's Cabinet-level task force has recommended a national urban policy calling for "a close partnership" between federal, state and local governments plus widespread funding of neighborhood citizen groups. It was learned today.

Carter, who Monday makes public his long-awaited urban policy, is expected to stress changes in federal aid for transportation, water and sewer programs to discourage runaway suburban "sprawl," according to a third draft of his proposed policy made available to UPI.

'Sunny Story Of High Living'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — South Korean businessman Teague Park says officials of his government got over $1 million from him — even more than U.S. companies — and his payments plus "expenses" consumed nearly all of $6.3 million he earned in rice deals.

The Senate Ethics Committee's senior members and its special counsel said Park outlined the payments Thursday at a fifth and final round of closed-door sessions. Chairman Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., called it "a sunny story of high living, wheeling and dealing, of influence peddling."

Medical Infection Control Commission, said the tropical disease could be spread to 100 million people in a matter of days. The commission said it is a deadly disease that can be spread to humans by mosquitoes.

The disease is named after the 1890 outbreak of viral encephalitis in St. Louis. The cold virus that carries the disease is transmitted to humans by mosquitoes.

"There is no specific vaccine for St. Louis encephalitis," said Dr. Bryson, adding that the most effective preventive is to "get rid of the mosquitoes."

Treatment, said the doctor, is for the symptoms. Most importantly, she said, fever from the disease must be kept under control. "If the 100-104 temperature stays up, it is a poor sign," she said.

Dr. Ballew, in her memo to the county commission, pointed out that during St. Louis encephalitis epidemics in 1933, 1934 and 1935 in St. Louis, 100 cases were reported with 20 deaths. French said that Dr. Ballew's memo indicated a possibility of an outbreak of encephalitis in St. Louis. "I have lived in St. Louis County all my life and I don't recall anything of that nature. Why was it not a problem here in previous years?"

"The possibility of an outbreak is so great that that a state will do anything in its power to prevent it," French said.

Lebanon Carcase Fire Holding

Angry, Imperiled Begin Returns Home

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin returned home today and angrily denounced reports that some U.S. officials would like to see him replaced with a national unity government committed to making peace with the Arabs.

Begin faced possible threats to his leadership because of the widening rift with the United States over two days of his controversial talks with President Carter in Washington.

"The talks in Washington were difficult talks," Begin said at Tel Aviv's Ben-Gurion Airport. "We faced several demands which we could not accept." He refused to define those demands.

In southern Lebanon, a French contingent of U.N. peace-keeping troops today moved into the embattled port of Tyre as part of an international effort to separate Israeli troops and Palestinian guerrillas. They drove through lines of fully armed and grating Palestinian guerrillas.

A three-day cease-fire declared by Israel appeared to be holding despite scattered reports of shelling. Nearly 800 troops of the 148th U.N. force have arrived in Lebanon and many have taken up positions in the north.

In his arrival statement, Begin responded angrily to reports that some U.S. officials would like to see him replaced with a national unity government. "I've always been for such a (national unity) government, and I'm still for it."

He said the "main point" of Israel's peace efforts should be directed toward "how to revive support of public opinion in the United States and elsewhere."

representative of the United States," Begin said. Cabinet members and other government officials at the airport applauded his remarks.

The discovery that in Tel Aviv said the United States had lashed out against Begin's removal could end the deadlock in Middle East peace negotiations, although White House officials denied that. Other Israeli commentators said U.S. officials were at their lowest point in years.

Defense Minister Ezer Weizman has publicly urged the opposition Labor Party to join Begin's coalition to form a national unity government that could make "very important decisions" affecting a Middle East settlement.

Some observers speculated that Weizman was leading a move to oust the 64-year-old Begin.

"Our government is a peace government," Begin said, responding to questions about Weizman's statement. "I've always been for such a (national unity) government, and I'm still for it."

He said the "main point" of Israel's peace efforts should be directed toward "how to revive support of public opinion in the United States and elsewhere."

The prime minister made no mention of Carter's role in ending Lebanon or whether it figured prominently in his talks with Carter.

Israel Got It? Still Missing: Uranium

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The old Atomic Energy Commission here it had a problem on its hands in 1968 when it learned a Pennsylvania machine processing plant was short more than 20 pounds of enriched uranium — the makings of atomic weapons.

It is still not known whether the material was lost, stolen or just unaccounted for due to sloppy bookkeeping.

The commission and top staff of the AEC — since succeeded by the Nuclear Regulatory Agency — met in secret Feb. 14, 1968, to discuss the problem and for the next 11 years, the matter never has been cleared up.

The CIA suspected the fuel was diverted to Israel, which was able to build its own atom bomb "partly through clandestine means."

The AEC apparently won't say whether the material was diverted — although it said its own regulations were lax enough so the possibility couldn't be ruled out completely.

The commission later theorized in another document that Israel received uranium smuggled from the plant in the clothes of workers.

Perhaps the most important consequence of that 1968 meeting was a decision to cover up the story — by concealing a "summary statement" for the press in one sentence asked to tell the joint Atomic Energy Commission of Congress that there was "no reason to believe that any of the material had been diverted to unauthorized use."

Separate Court Judge William Brennan, sitting on appeal by the New Hampshire Civil Liberties Union, ordered a stay to a federal injunction that would prevent the government from releasing the information to the public.

Brennan said he would prevent the matter in the full court of the regular weekly conference later today. "There was no information" that the government could use.

FLORIDA IN BRIEF

Victim Compensation Plan Ruled Unconstitutional

STUART (UPI) — Martin County Circuit Judge David Harper has ruled a Florida law providing compensation for crime victims is unconstitutional.

His ruling, handed down Thursday, came in response to a challenge of the law by Public Defender Elton Schwartz.

Schwartz, chairman of general legislation committee of the Florida Public Defenders' Association, argued that a recent Florida Supreme Court decision, throwing out a surcharge on traffic tickets, undercut the legal basis for the whole idea of crime compensation.

Literacy Tests Tested

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — The courts will be asked to decide Florida's controversial functional literacy test "culturally biased" and prohibit the state from withholding diplomas from high school seniors who fail it.

NACP attorney Morris Milton said Thursday he is preparing the suit which will be filed next month in either a state or federal court. The immediate objective, the St. Petersburg lawyer said, is to prevent the state from giving hundreds of students who fail the test Certificates of Attendance rather than diplomas when they graduate.

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — After two postponements, engineers hope to get a pair of military communications satellites space-borne Saturday.

The launch was originally set for Tuesday, but was delayed until Thursday because of another problem with the Titan 3-C.

What Next For Mideast?

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin has some home to fret.

Quite the contrary. All indications are that they were futile. Thus the hopes for peace in the Middle East have suffered another setback.

And all because of that recent attack by the Palestinian Liberation Organization on Israeli citizens and the response in-kind from the Israelis.

The one less-than-negative factor in the recent equation is that the United Nations peacekeeping force seems to be taking its place in southern Lebanon.

That, for now at least, lessens the immediate danger of an accidental clash between Syrian troops in Lebanon and the attacking Israelis — a clash that could easily escalate into a full-fledged war between Israel and Syria.

It also diminishes the prospects of military intervention by the Soviets. Union in behalf of the Syrian and Palestinian clients, which would have precipitated a dangerous crisis for the United States.

Israel's surgical strike against the PLO camps in Lebanon, which again demonstrated the precision and prowess of its armed forces, was almost a foregone conclusion after the murderous PLO attack against defenseless Israeli citizens on March 11.

The Israeli policy has always been to go beyond an eye for an eye in retaliating against PLO raids — to go for an arm and a leg as well and make the game too unprofitable for repetition.

The PLO knew this full well when it sent commandos into Israel, the tenth such attack in six years. But it was willing to risk unpleasant consequences to damage the Egyptian-Israeli peace dialogue, which seemed about to be resumed.

The fallacy and folly of this move was that it underestimated the unprecedented, all-out response of the Israelis, who apparently decided that the time had come to cut off "the arm of evil," as Prime Minister Begin expressed it.

Israel's retaliation must hurt PLO, which has been the Jordanian hand in Syria.

Israel's decision to curtail and demilitarize a six-mile strip along the Lebanese border deprives the Palestinians of the principal refuge permitted them after their defeat by Syrian forces and Lebanese Christians in the bloody civil war of 1975.

It is idle to speculate about how the precarious peace negotiations between Israel and the Arab world might have been enhanced had Israel renounced retaliation against the PLO.

But even as the Arabs and their friends in the Third World protest Israel's vigorous response, they cannot but realize that this latest crisis was not of Israel's making.

And there is a worldwide appreciation that any given nation would be compelled to deal in some way with repeated armed attacks against it.

For example, dispatches from Egypt quoted a Cairo grocer as saying: "The Palestinians are murderers. The Palestinians are murderers. Let Israel finish them."

While the lack of a meaningful accord between Mr. Carter and Mr. Begin (his week must foster continued pessimism about future peace prospects, the need to be fighting in a positive factor.

But what next? Both sides appear intransigent on the matter of the refugee-crisis of the dilemma.

But, if the guns stay silent, maybe — just maybe — cooler heads will prevail and some kind of middle ground will be achieved in the search for peace in the volatile Middle East once and for all. We cannot give up trying.

Final Four: Irish, Duke, Arkansas, Kentucky Hope

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — There aren't any bouncers at the door watching for spies or guarding secret plays concocted by the four teams hoping to capture the NCAA basketball title.

The coaches of Kentucky, Notre Dame, Duke and Arkansas — the survivors of games that have been the closest in the 40-year history of the tournament — know what to expect from their opponents. They also know that what they've seen is what they'll get Saturday.

"At this point in the season," Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton said Wednesday, "I don't think anyone is going to put in any tricky plays. We're not going to get it what you do to St. Louis."

Sutton's Razorbacks, who will battle top-ranked Kentucky in the second game of Saturday's semifinal doubleheader, will be counting on the high-scoring "three basketballers" — Ron Brewer, Marvin Davis and Sidney Moncrief — to lead the team to a victory.

Afraid Of Foster Father

DEAR ABBY: I am a 16-year-old girl living in a foster home. I don't mind being in a home, but I do mind being in a home where the mother is a sweet person and I love her. But the father is not the type of father I would like. I am very big for my age, and sometimes I have problems about it. The father has offered me money to go to the city, but I don't want to go away from home.

Debated By Theologians

The Resurrection—A Matter Of Faith

By DAVID R. ANDERSON, UPI Religion Writer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Easter, for Christians, is the triumph of their faith: the celebration of the miracle of Christ's resurrection from the dead that testifies to the belief that Jesus was both God and man.

The pastor and the death of Jesus were dramatized by the Nativity Catholic Church youth in the five Stations of the Cross service Sunday night. The actor was Steve Harper (left). Jesus by Joe Richardson and Veronica by Ann Dalton.

The Apostles' Creed, one of the church's most ancient formulations of faith, states the church's belief that Jesus is the second article: "And in Jesus Christ his only Son our Lord; who was conceived by the Holy Ghost; born of the Virgin Mary; suffered under Pontius Pilate; was crucified, dead and buried; he descended into hell; the third day he rose again from the dead; he ascended into heaven."

This year, however, Easter will be celebrated in the midst of a growing debate about the nature of Jesus — whether, indeed, the church's ancient claim that Jesus was both God and man can still be advanced as truth.

Traditionally, the questions being asked about Jesus come from scholars, questioned but from respected and influential theologians inside Christianity.

And it is a debate that involves both Roman Catholics and Protestants, so-called liberal theologians and teachers from denominations generally thought to be conservative.

At the center of the debate among Roman Catholics stands Dr. Hans Kang, the controversial German theologian who has been called the most pivotal thinker in contemporary Catholicism.

This week Doubleday and Company will publish a new Kang manifesto, "Questions for the Pastors," and it once again addresses those questions that have gotten the Vatican theologian into hot water with church authorities.

Kang, for instance, challenges the traditional understanding of "Resurrection does not mean either a return to life in space and time or a continuation of life in space and time," he argues, "but the assumption that the resurrection is a comprehensive and comprehensive and first reality which we call God."

"Death is not cancelled," Kang writes, meaning there is "no revival of a corpse." But death is "definitely conquered" and Jesus is "living forever" in a different, "eternal" life.

Traditionally, Easter has meant the empty tomb and a bodily resurrected Christ who appears to and walks among the disciples. To understand this miracle, according to the traditional understanding, is to understand the foundation of the church's life and faith.

Challenges to the authenticity of the resurrection are not new. Among Protestant theologians, in particular, the resurrection has been increasingly viewed as a myth or legend since the time of the Enlightenment and the beginning of the so-called "quest for the historical Jesus."

"The resurrection is a study, technically called Christology, of the true nature of Jesus — a study which extends back to the earliest years of the Christianity.

In the pre-Enlightenment days, Christianity was done based on the "from above" theory. Jesus was first conceived as the Son of God, the second person of the Trinity which also included God the creator and the Holy Spirit.

It became inaccurate of the Virgin Mary through a miraculous conception by the Holy Spirit and did a number of miracles during his earthly ministry, such as curing the ill, turning water to wine, feeding the 5,000 and raising the dead.

STATIONS OF THE CROSS

The pastor and the death of Jesus were dramatized by the Nativity Catholic Church youth in the five Stations of the Cross service Sunday night. The actor was Steve Harper (left). Jesus by Joe Richardson and Veronica by Ann Dalton.

For the vast majority of church-goers, however, the scholarly debate means little to their own Easter experiences. Instead, with the writer John Updike, they want to confess, as he said in his "Seven Stations of Easter,"

"Make no mistake, if he rose at all it was on the body; if the cult's dismission did not reverse, the molecules rub, the atoms ache, the mind is left."

Intimations Of Our Immortality

"And they departed quickly from the apostles with great joy." Matt. 28:8.

The first joy of Easter, and the last, is a quiet, rock-bottom "empty" I give us intimations of our own immortality. The post-conviction sense of peace, the return of spring, the seasonal as we demonstrate the indestructibility of matter and the conservation of energy.

The philosopher finds it difficult to believe that all things, from the cloud which catches up to music, architecture, and art, are the result of chance or unguided luck. These point to a Creator.

Sir Oliver Lodge once said: "I do not believe that it is in the nature of man to think thoughts that are more beautiful than those of God would not 'dumb to water' the powers he had 'dared' impart."

There are intimations in plenty. But the joy of Easter must have more. It must have assurance. The men of faith find these in the calm presence of Jesus: "Because I live, you shall live also."

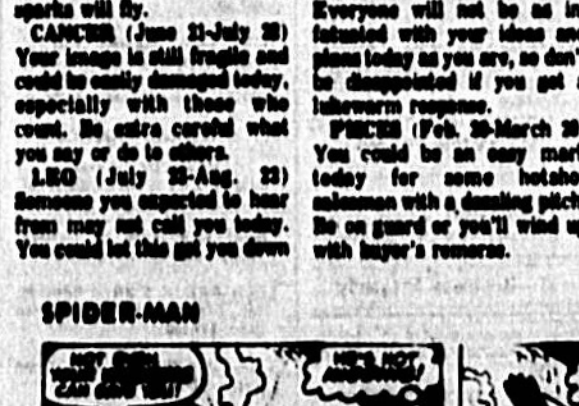

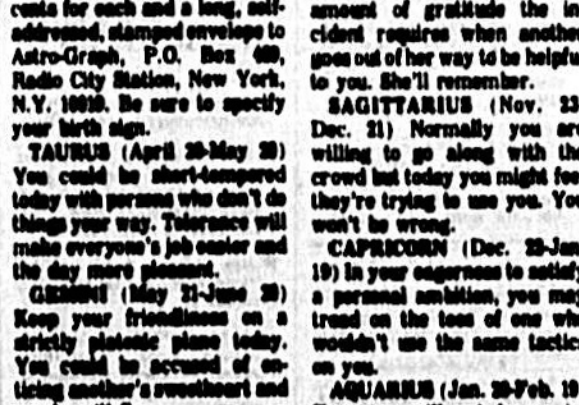

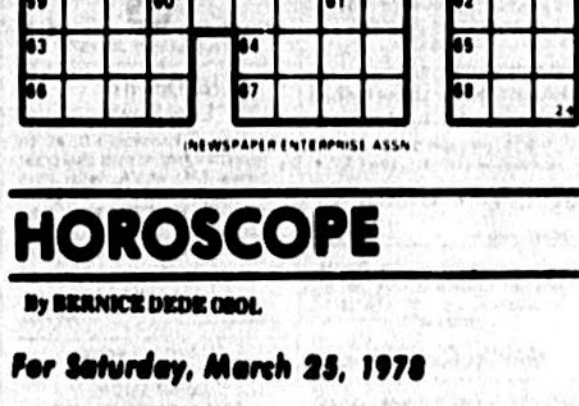

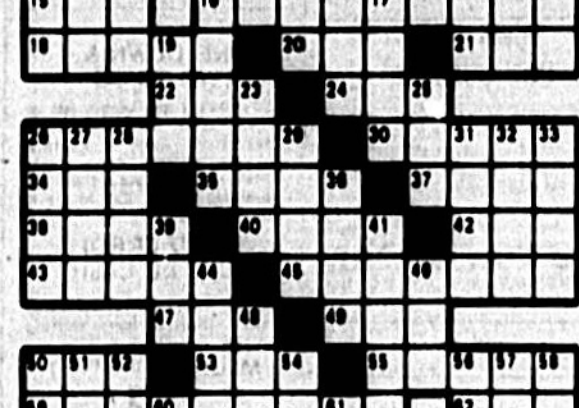

There are some things too great to be proved by logic. They come to us through faith and intuition or not at all. Love is one of them.

Silent Heart Attacks Common

DEAR DR. LAMB - "Would you please write about silent heart attacks? I had one this spring. I had heard of them but had never seen a patient with one. I'm a registered nurse."

I never noticed any of the classical symptoms and never had any heart pain. On a Sunday morning I just felt sick and was nauseous. There was no perspiration on the head or face but I was perspiring on the body. No pain. My pulse rate dropped to 50 but I didn't think of heart attack. On Wednesday the pulse rate dropped to 40. My sister wanted to call a doctor on Sunday but I refused, thinking I'd see my doctor. On Wednesday when I talked to the doctor he thought I had a virus and asked me to come in on Friday but if I felt worse to come in sooner.

When I got to his office and had my tests run, including an electrocardiogram, I was sent immediately by ambulance to the coronary care unit with a diagnosis of acute myocardial infarction. I was hospitalized for seven weeks. I had to have a pacemaker. Several doctors said I had something unusual: a silent heart attack with complete heart block and heart failure.

I think you would do the public a great service if you would comment about silent heart attacks.

DEAR READER - Silent heart attacks are not as rare as you might think. Doctors have known about them for years. Often these would be found as a result of autopsies showing the old damage to the heart muscle in a person who had no history of a heart attack.

The figures vary on how common they are. But when my staff at the School of Aerospace Medicine studied electrocardiograms from the flying population, we found about one-third of the men with infarcts were found because of changes they developed in their electrocardiogram - compared to previous normal records. The other infarcts were in men with symptoms. The surprising thing is that these men were flying airplanes and were never ill enough to know they had anything wrong.

We also know that men doing heavy labor sometimes continue working in the presence of a heart attack and do not have anything had happened. Perhaps it isn't so surprising anyway, since the heart muscle itself does not have pain fibers. The heart pain is a reflex pain pattern to the chest wall, shoulders, arm, jaw and sometimes other places.

There is always some disagreement about whether a heart attack is truly silent. Many doctors would not classify your case in that group because you did have symptoms - illness and nausea. You may not have recognized what caused the symptoms but they were real. Many a case of mild infarction is passed by as not important when in reality it represents a heart attack. It is sometimes impossible to tell what "irritation" means without additional studies.

As you can see - from no symptoms at all, mild infarction, atypical pain patterns and the severe, unmistakable heart pain - heart attacks may be present in varied ways. It is no wonder that the doctor had to observe many patients in the hospital to tell what is really happening.

South would not have been hurt if West had held all three. In actuality South would only lose 1 percent of the time. In addition, South's play of the trump ace had given him a 20 percent chance to pick up a singleton king and score an extra 30 points.

An 80 percent chance is a pretty good one, but a 100 percent chance is a lot better. There wasn't that 100 percent chance but there was a 90.50 percent chance. At trick two South should have led a low trump toward dummy's queen. This play would ensure the contract unless the defense could get a ruff in addition to the king of trumps.
