Airing, solving problems of light rail in county

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — As transportation officials continue to seek input into the best local route for light rail, one city commissioner spoke against a portion of the concept.

Efforts are still under way to reach an agreement on what route the proposed Central Florida Light Rail Transit System will eventually take. The projection most often recommended by various governmental bodies, has been along the CSX rail lines. The other plan is for the system to run in the median or adjacent to Interstate-4.

ridor," he explained. "Basically, the first project would take it from Altamonte Springs to Sea World. But north of that it would go to Sanford."
Commissioner George Duryea asked Jackson if there were any indication the Walt Disney company would be willing to become involved in this, as they would certainly benefit from the service.
Jackson responded that he has, to date, not worked with Disney. He continued that the way the plans were being put together, the project may be a combination of the CSX tracks as well as the I-4 adjacency.
During discussion, Commissioner Gary Brender strongly declared, "I'm against anything adjacent to I-4." He explained that he is familiar with a similar route in Washington, D.C., where authorities thought they would help alleviate traffic through a light rail system. "It doesn't work in D.C., and it won't work here," Brender commented.
"People just naturally have a love for their cars. I don't see how light rail will help them going through Lake Mary," he added.
Brender said the Interstate-4 route has been projected as being able to prevent having to build the highway to 10 lanes in width (including high occupancy vehicles).
"What I suggest," he told Jackson, "is that you take it back to the board and ask them to show us who will actually be paying for a light rail system you claim will replace 10 lanes of traffic."
He continued, "And ask them how many people by the year 2010, who will live in Lake Mary at that Seminole County employees who work from remote location now have better communications equipment thanks to the FCC's reallocation of frequencies used in microwave communications. The county did not have to pay for the new six-gigahertz satellite that was placed above the county courthouse Wednesday because of the FCC ruling.

The Woman and the Willow Tree

Ellen Schirmer welcomes guests at the Willow Tree Cafe.

SANFORD — Ellen Schirmer, who owns and operates the Willow Tree Cafe at 205 E. First Street, is a woman with a good sense of who she is and where she is.
Her journey - far from completion - has not always been easy.
She was subject to the horrors of World War II in Germany. Her village was under constant siege by Allied Forces, and her father was killed on a U-Boat in the Baltic Sea.
"I was 5 years old when my dad died," Schirmer said. "I have pictures of him in his sailor's uniform. He loved being a sailor. He did not choose to be at war but everyone was thrown into by 1944."
"The last time I saw him, he brought me a backpack full of toys. My favorite was a little kitty cat with incandescent green eyes."
"My dad went to sea in December 1944 and on Jan. 11, 1945 we learned that his submarine was missing - sunk by the Russians."
At 58, Ellen Schirmer is appreciative of good friends and a good life.
Visitors to the Willow Tree Cafe are treated not only to a fine cuisine but to all the warmth and welcome to be found other than their own home.
"Eating," Ellen says, "is meant to be a pleasure, an entertainment, a fulfillment."
She fondly recalls her Grandmother Gertrude

Locals celebrate at Zora festival

By MARVA HAWKINS
Herald Correspondent

Zora! The eighth annual Zora Neale Hurston Festival of the Arts and Humanities will take place from Jan. 30 to Feb. 2 in Eatonville.

Zora Neale Hurston was probably the most significant collector and interpreter of southern rural African American Culture. She secured her place among 20th century American cultural giants. A gifted writer and woman of great intensity, Hurston single-mindedly pursued collecting materials "on the Negro farthest down."

Local talent will be a part of the Zora Neale Hurston Festival beginning on Friday, Jan. 31. A special session is scheduled from 1:15 -3 p.m., "Reflections on the Recently Discovered Writings of Zora Neale Hurston." Seminole Community College Director of Arts and Sciences Services, Anye Refoe will be one of the presenters.

At 10:30 on Friday, junior high schoolers are invited to witness the performance of the play of poems and songs, entitled "With a Song and Word," by African Americans of the 20th century. Saturday's festivities will include the local renowned playwright and director Joseph Finckney, who will present a docu-drama at two

He sells stolen sea shells

MIAMI — It was no ordinary sea shell. Martin Gill stumbled on a valuable snail shell while appraising a collection for the American Museum of Natural History in New York. A well-known shell trader, the Miami man apparently was overcome by desire to possess the specimen — and swiped it, federal prosecutors said. Gill returned the shell collection — minus the Chamaeria incomparabilis snail shell — to the museum in August. He advertised the missing shell on the Internet and sold it for $12,000 to a Belgian dealer, who then sold it for $20,000 to an Indonesian collector, Assistant U.S. Attorney Thomas Watta-FitsOerald said Wednesday. Why that much money for an oval shell 2 1/4 inches tall, about an inch wide and colored dark brown, gray and white? Only six are known to exist in the world. And scientists didn't even know of the snail's existence until a few years ago. "It's sort of a missing link in the evolution of a particular group of shells," said M.G. Harsawych, curator of mollusks for the Smithsonian's National Museum of Natural History, which has one of three shells in the United States. "It's important for the study of evolution of snails." The American Museum hired a private detective to track down the stolen shell, found in the Red Sea in 1982. That led authorities to Gill, who was arrested and charged with one count of transferring stolen property in foreign commerce.

Second baby born in back seat

JACKSONVILLE — Brenda Gaakin did not plan to deliver any of her babies in the back seat of the family car, but twice the infants arrived before her husband could get her to the hospital. Cleborne Kenneth Gaakin III was born at 9:15 a.m. Tuesday, in the car parked outside the front doors of St. Vincent's Medical Center. Two years ago, Kenney Gaakin was born in the same back seat. That time, mom and dad knew they couldn't make it in time and wound up parking the 1991 blue Mercury Topaz at a gasoline station for the delivery. Mrs. Gaakin, 26, said Wednesday that after that experience, she and her husband were determined to make it to the hospital before she delivered this time. "We picked a hospital that was closer and we left a little earlier, but we still didn't make it in time," she said. The 9 pound, 5 ounce baby just wouldn't wait. "We were very glad we were at the hospital this time, instead of a gas station." The first time was Feb. 5, 1985. The Gaakins were headed for the hospital when Brenda asked her husband, Cleborne Gaakin Jr., to pull over. Minutes later, Kenney was born. On Tuesday, when Mrs. Gaakin's contractions were five minutes apart, she and her husband headed for a hospital only 15 minutes away. "We thought we had made it on time," said Mrs. Gaakin, a clerk in a title company. But as they pulled into a circular drive in front of St. Vincent's, she knew she wasn't going to make it inside. "I told my husband, 'It's coming right now!'" she said. He replied, "Not again!" He ran inside for help, and the commotion got the attention of Ken Devlin, an off-duty emergency room worker. He coached the mother through the remaining minutes of labor.

Bomb plot for man who made threat

FERRISACOLA — An emotional Amtrak worker, accused of making a false bomb threat during an airline flight, struggled to hold back tears as he testified about personal problems that had weighed on his mind. During a detention hearing Wednesday in U.S. District Court, Frank Lopez Jr. said he was depressed over recent deaths and other traumatic events in his life when he gave a flight attendant a note saying a bomb was on the Southwest Airlines plane Friday. "I didn't think about anything. I was not in the right state of mind," Lopez said. "I almost didn't do it. It was almost like I was compelled to." Magistrate Miles Davis agreed to release Lopez, 29, of New Orleans, on a cash and property bond of $50,000 with conditions that include obtaining mental health treatment at his own expense. Davis rejected prosecution motions to deny bail. He said the government failed to show Lopez would be a danger to the community, a risk to flee or that he was incompetent to stand trial. His lawyer said he probably would seek a plea agreement before the case goes to trial. Lopez also testified that Southwest's refusal to hire him as a flight attendant had nothing to do with the bomb threat. Lopez, who has a similar job with Amtrak, said he was flying on Southwest to take advantage of the airline's low fares on flights leaving New Orleans prior to the Super Bowl.

Army Corps Of Engineers sued over wetlands

By RAJN CHENBAM
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI — The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers is hastening the decline of the Everglades and sensitive wetlands in the Florida Keys by failing to implement a federal law designed to protect the nation's wetlands, a lawsuit charges. The Corps turns a blind eye toward indiscriminate draining of the South Florida ecosystem and flouts the Clean Water Act, the law of the land for more than two decades, according to the federal lawsuit filed Thursday by two environmental groups.

"The Army Corps is really not complying with the Clean Water Act they're charged with implementing, and they're not doing their job. So the result is that a gross number of wetlands are getting filled that should not be," said Gregg Goldfarb, a Miami lawyer who sued on behalf of Public Employees for Environmental Responsibility and the Florida Keys Citizens Coalition.

"What we're talking about is the incessant, increasing destruction of the wetlands throughout South Florida and the Keys," said Jeff Debonis, PEER's executive director. The groups seek a court order forcing the Corps to comply with the water act. They say they have evidence of flagrant violations and corruption at the agency. Goldfarb acknowledged he has a tough job ahead because it's difficult to get courts to issue such orders against a government body.

Shipping, fishing restricted in Fla. Keys protection plan

By BILL BERSTROM
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — A new state-federal management plan guarantees a state panel will get to review 10 no-fishing areas proposed for the Florida Keys before fishing boats are excluded July 1.

The joint agreement to protect reefs that attract more than 1.5 million people a year will ban fishing in some areas where fragile coral grows near the water's surface and keep freighters and tankers from the area.

After six years of wrangling, the state and federal government agreed on a plan to jointly run the Florida Keys National Marine Sanctuary created in 1990.

Fishing, diving and tourism in the Keys center around the world's third-largest barrier reef after those off Australia and Belize. It is the only one near the shores of the 48 contiguous states.

"We need the benefits of comprehensive management," Karen Lee, co-owner of an Islamorada mortgage company, told Gov. Lawton Chiles and the Cabinet before they approved the management plan on Tuesday.

Their vote was needed because two-thirds of the sanctuary, which stretches 120 miles from the upper Keys to west of the Dry Tortugas, lies in state-controlled waters.

About 100 Keys residents traveled to the meeting, including some who were wary of federal interference and others, like Ms. Lee, who said the need to protect the reefs outweighed those fears.

Daytona museum says portrait is Evita Peron

By The Associated Press

DAYTONA BEACH — Is the painting of a young woman on display at The Museum of Arts and Sciences here a picture of Eva Peron?

That's what the museum and others are trying to determine. Because of the popularity of the Madonna movie "Evita," about Mrs. Peron, the museum put the painting on display Jan. 7, although it has owned the portrait by Candido Portinari since 1991.

Recent information received by the museum from various international sources has raised questions about the identity of the person in the painting.

"We still believe it is a painting of Eva Peron," Cathy Lea, a museum spokeswoman, said Wednesday. "There is nothing to tell us it is not and notes on the back of the portrait itself identify it as Eva Duarte (Peron's maiden name)."

The museum also says it has confirmed that the portrait was painted by Portinari, one of South America's most important artists.

But Joao Portinari, the son of the late artist, said his father only completed 16 known portraits of women in 1940 and he doesn't believe the picture is that of Mrs. Peron.

"One of them looks like yours but is a portrait of Eva Rubenstein, the daughter of the late Arthur Rubenstein," he said in a recent letter to the museum.

Vivian Pfeffer, director of Christie's in Miami, thinks the portrait may be of Cecilia Barbosa, daughter-in-law of a former Brazilian president and wife of the late Brazilian diplomat, Ruy Barbosa.

She believes the painting was the same as the one offered for sale in New York in 1987 as "Cecilia Barbosa."

A Brazilian television station and several Brazilian newspapers and periodicals have launched a search to verify the identity of the woman. It was featured in a Jan. 23 article in Paris Match, one of Europe's most influential journals.

LONGWOOD — Carlino Reyes Cerbautes, 21, of Park Avenue, Sanford, was killed Wednesday afternoon at a construction site in Longwood. Police said he was trapped when a brick wall fell on him while he was in a trench.

Longwood Police Lt. Russell Cohen said Cerbautes, an employee of Seminole Landscaping of Sanford, was in a trench, attempting to locate some PVC pipe at the time of the incident. "I'm not sure if it was because of the soft sand or the proximity of the trench to a brick wall," Cohen said, "but as he was in the trench, the wall fell on him."

The wall was at the median entrance to the Longwood Club subdivision, a new area under construction on Rangeline Road, near SR-434.

Cohen said it took the Longwood police, fire department, and other agencies approximately 45 minutes to extricate Cerbautes from the trench. "But he was already dead by the time we were able to take him out," Cohen said.

St. Johns water district goes online

By VICKI BOGGS
Herald Senior Staff Writer

It's sure to make a big splash. The St. Johns River Water Management District will bring its Web site on line the first Monday in February and officials are excited about the possibilities.

For those who want to know about what's going on with the water district, the difficult process of tracking down everything from meeting agendas to technical materials has just become easier.

Materials such as these have always been available for the asking, but the path one had to follow to get them was often circuitous and convoluted.

Now anything you could want to know is available with the click of a button and the drag of a mouse.

The water management district's Internet site will provide computer access to and expand the governing board's meeting agendas, brochures on various water topics, news releases about upcoming events and happenings within the district, technical materials, staff contacts for any questions you might have and other district information.

Even the organization's quarterly newsletter, StreamLines, will be available to online readers.

There are plans to add information about permitting rules to the site some time later this year.

The Web site will be sprinkled with assorted bits of information regarding the water management district's facts and history as well.

Officials are expecting a flood of interest in the site when it becomes available after 5 p.m. on Monday, Feb. 3.

Web browsers can access the site at <http://sjwr.state.fl.us> and make that connection with the District.

"Keeping the public informed about the District's work is a critical component of our mission," Linda Burdette, director of the District's office of Public Information, said. "We're continually looking for new opportunities to simplify access to the district's publications, meeting agendas and technical studies. The Internet provides a tremendous opportunity for us to get the word out about our work to protect and restore the water resources in the 19 counties that we serve."

The District's Internet site is being launched on a trial basis to gauge interest and will be updated on a regular basis. Organizers hope to do all they can to make as much information available to the public.

Teacher suspended pending investigation

Seminole Community College officials suspended adjunct instructor William Clayton Tuesday following students' claims that he acted inappropriately during a Jan. 23 classroom lab.

According to SCC public information coordinator Craig Orsano, school officials removed Clayton from any further teaching duties pending the outcome of the school's investigation. Five of those students also have provided written statements relating to the Certified Nursing Assistant class lab demonstration to campus administration, according to an SCC press release.

Director of Health and Technologies Angela Kersenbrock and Dean of Student Services Dr. Marguerite Culp met with six nursing students Monday on the main campus behind closed doors. After over two hours of student testimony, Executive Vice President James Sawyer announced the college would be conducting an investigation into the allegations.

Two of those students said they told officials Clayton assaulted a female student by unnecessarily - and - repeatedly shoving her in a Certified Nursing Assistant class lab demonstration. They allege he also made unsuitable comments to two other students during the same class session.

The student, who would not comment to the press, looked upset and shocked by Clayton's behavior, according to student Tara Hattendorf, 20.

Hattendorf also said Clayton made inappropriate comments to her while he was testing her in a class exercise involving the use of a vest to restrain patients in a hospital bed.

Another student, Susan Iwanow, 40, said Clayton made inappropriate comments to her as well while she was being tested in a class exercise involving the use of a vest to restrain patients in a hospital bed.

Hattendorf expressed relief when she learned Clayton would not be instructing this week's Wednesday lab. She said the other students involved with last week's occurrence had planned not to attend if he had been present.

"I feel good that the school cared about what was happening to their students," she said.

Clayton declined to give a statement to the press.

Deputy Sheriff Victor McHardy arrived at Seminole Community College in December to prevent crimes and enforce the law on campus.

His primary focus will be the Adult High School, but he will patrol the main campus also.

McHardy said students who play by the rules will not tolerate other classmates' nonsense, and he will be looking to them for assistance and information.

He plans to treat SCC like his own neighborhood, but he said he will be "a thorn in a bad guy's side."

McHardy's main concerns are gangs and drugs, but as of Jan. 27 he had not witnessed any student offenders. He has observed some suspicious people in the Adult High School parking lot, however.

A former school teacher at the place of his new assignment, he received his criminal justice degree in April through the SCC Police Academy.

He described the faculty as helpful and supportive in efforts to keep SCC safe and drug-free. "I want to be an asset and a positive influence," he said.

Communications towers

Our city and county governments have been working diligently on establishing rules and restrictions regarding the placement of communications towers. At least listening to the various government groups in session would lead one to believe they are working diligently.

Lake Mary considered an ordinance just a week ago. Sanford's city commission also did. Monday night, Oviedo will tackle a request for a 250 foot tall tower, as well as consider a moratorium on tower construction.

The problem however, is that everyone seems to be bringing items up, but postponing action, apparently waiting to see what everyone else comes up with. Some say 200 feet is high enough. Others say it could be 220 feet if a tower is used for more than one communication link-up.

Some don't want it near residential areas. Others say they don't want them closer than the height of the tower (in case it blows down in a hurricane). Some want specific distances between towers. Others say there is no problem locating them near the Interstate-4 corridor while others say it would bring a blight to the community.

Then there are some who appear to not care about separation distances, location, height, or multi-uses.

CALNO, the council of local government municipalities has been working on the matter, hopefully to make suggestions to the individual government bodies. But this has been going on for months, with no immediate solution expected within the next week or two.

Where is the representation from each municipality and the county on the CALNO board. But this is being dragged on and on because every time a suggestion is made, regardless of how good it may be, it has to be taken back to the various individual commissions, and their remarks subsequently taken back to CALNO for even more consideration.

Meanwhile, company after company continue to submit requests for approvals to build their towers.

We believe the only way this could be resolved in the near future, is if the county commission, and all city commissions in the county, gather together in one formal called session, and iron this out.

CALNO, while working diligently, has no authority to direct anyone to accept its recommendation. Therefore, a combination of all elected bodies within the county must be brought together in order to achieve a uniform communications tower edict.

Because some government bodies believe they, and they alone, are the only people to resolve this problem, getting such a massive meeting together would be as difficult as having all the animals at the Central Florida Zoo get together in one room. It would be a fight royal.

What we are going to end up having, are different rules for towers in each municipality and jurisdiction. There will be confusion, and what may appear to be acceptable to some, will end up being called a blight by others.

C'mon folks, we've resolved disagreements between each other before. Let's try handling this one in an orderly, but prompt manner.

I would like to advise Jeff Berlinicke to work on his cause and effect method of writing prose for your paper. His Writer's Block column, "Thoughts on parade honoring Dr. King," is an example of his faulty reasoning. Let me explain.

The fact that only a handful of Sanford area white citizens attended the parade for Dr. King does not necessarily mean that the rest of the white citizens are a bunch of segregationists or racists. There are other plausible explanations.

Like myself, some people hate crowds in general and parades in particular. How many people usually show up for any parade in Sanford? Your paper has lamented poor attendance in the past, has it not?

If we ever had a St. Patrick's day parade, would Mr. Berlinicke call the black people who failed to attend it a bunch of racists? Does he know that there are only two national holidays honoring individual American heroes? Would he attend a parade for Washington and Lincoln on President's Day or go fishing?

I strongly resent the implication made by Mr. Berlinicke in this article. I also suggest that he confer with himself again and research a different consensus on why so few whites attended Dr. King's parade.

Just why God made grandmothers

Grandmothers may be doing more than anyone else to hold families together as surrogate moms.

Grandmothers may be our most taken-for-granted human resource. They don't get much attention when the subject of family values comes up. Yet with so many mothers of schoolchildren working in every country of the world, grandmothers may be doing more than anyone else to hold families together as surrogate moms.

As such, they have become a necessity in our society. Unlike most necessities of life, however, they are also beloved.

Can you think of a more touching tribute than this one delivered by an 8-year-old girl at her school's Grandmothers Day observance?

"A grandmother is a lady who has no children of her own so she likes other people's children. A grandfather is a man grandmother. He goes for walks with the boys and talks about fishing and tractors and things like that.

"Grandmothers don't have to do anything but be there. They are old and they shouldn't play hard or run. It is enough if they drive us to the store where the pretend horse is and have lots of quarters ready. Or if they take us for walks and slow down past things like pretty leaves and caterpillars.

"They should never hurry up. Usually they are fat but not too fat to the kids' shoes. They wear glasses and funny underwear. They can take their teeth and gums off. They don't have to be smart, only answer questions like why dogs hate cats and how God isn't married.

"When they read to us they don't mind if it's the same story again. Everybody should have one, especially if you don't have a TV, because grandmas are the only grown-ups who have got time."

Beloved though they may be, some grandmothers feel put-upon by their married children, especially when it comes to baby-sitting. Some say this is the one aspect of being a grandmother they don't like.

Here are some comments from grandmothers attending a church symposium on baby-sitting.

"It isn't a matter of not being able to afford a baby sitter in the case of my daughter's family," said one grandmother. "Her husband is doing well and they have a maid, but the maid gets her evenings off and guess who gets called on to do the free baby-sitting?"

Other grandmothers don't like the idea of being "on call" at all times. "No matter when the young parents phone, they feel insulted if you turn them down," she grumbled.

One grandmother has solved this problem by issuing baby-sitting scrip in the form of play money. When the month's allotment runs out, the parents have to find someone else to do their baby-sitting.

"I don't mind it because they can baby-sit for us that we cherish grandmothers. In the words of the little girl in our story, 'they don't have to do anything but be there. Everyone should have one because grandmas are the only grown-ups who have got time.'"

Grandmothers deserve our appreciation and our prayers. Here is a good prayer to say for grandmothers (and grandfathers) every night when we go to bed:

"We commit to thy care, O Lord, those who are old and full of years and who can no longer bear the burden and heat of the day. Grant them to have so trusted and learned of Thee in years that are gone, that in the loss of their daily work and the world they have long known, they shall not have lost Thee. Vouchsafe to them light at evening time and the assurance that by serene example they also serve who only stand and wait. Amen."

JOSEPH SPEAR

Thomas, Teddy or Grover: You decide

Is our own B.C. a T.J. or a T.R. or maybe a W.M.?

I personally think he is more akin to G.C. Let's see:

What this is about, of course, is Bill Clinton's place in history. Pundits have already begun ruminating about it, and several times in the past year, Clinton himself has speculated about his rung on the ladder of presidential distinction.

As the person who will be occupying the White House at the turn of a new century, Clinton naturally compares himself with those who served at similar moments in time. He doesn't flatly say he is Thomas Jefferson reincarnate, or Teddy Roosevelt reborn, but he does subtly suggest that he could be, if he manages to make the most of his opportunities.

Less biased observers have pointed out that T.J. and T.R. actually achieved their greatness AFTER the calendrical odometer turned. Clinton would be more accurate, these skeptics say, to compare himself with presidents who were elected just before a new century. That would be John Adams and William McKinley.

William McKinley? The nondescript Ohio Republican who kept his finger to the political winds and liked nothing better than meeting people and shaking hands and imparting upbeat messages?

He does sound familiar, doesn't he? Personally, I have always thought of Bill Clinton as the Grover Cleveland of the 20th century. Both were Democrats in a Republican age. Indeed, Cleveland was the first Democrat elected after the Civil War, and the only one to serve in a Republican reign that ran from 1860 to 1912. Both served as governors (Cleveland in New York). Both were elected president at a relatively young age (Cleveland was 47; Clinton was 46).

Both men were essentially conservative politicians who believed in "sound money" and fought to hold down inflation (Cleveland by supporting the gold standard; Clinton by appointing strong-money advocates to the Federal Reserve Board). Both served during a time of relentless immigration. Both were anti-tariff; Cleveland constantly fought the business interests that wanted protection; Clinton eliminated trade barriers on most of the North American continent.

If those likenesses are insufficient to convince you that Bill Clinton is Grover Cleveland redux, try these:

Both men were elected despite a sensational sex scandal. We all know about Gennifer Flowers. Cleveland, in his younger years, fathered an illegitimate child and admitted it after the Buffalo newspapers broke the story during the 1884 campaign.

Both men evaded the draft and avoided military service. Cleveland, in fact, paid another man to pull Civil War duty for him (it was legal in those days). He had a good excuse: He had to take care of a mother and several siblings.

Clinton barely tolerates the press. Cleveland hated it. "I don't think there ever was a time when newspaper lying was so general and so mean as at present," wrote Grover to a friend.

Bill calls himself the Comeback Kid. Grover is the only president to serve two nonconsecutive terms. When the Clintons left the White House on March 4, 1889, wife Frances told the staff: "Take good care of all the furniture and ornaments ... for I want to find everything just as it is now when we come back again. We are coming back just four years from today."

Clinton naturally compares himself with those who served at similar moments in time.

BEN WATTENBERG

Bill Clinton and Bill Fulbright

During his inaugural address President Clinton asked for an end to the hostile climate in Washington. He said: "The American people returned to office a president of one party and a Congress of another. Surely they did not do this to advance the politics of petty bickering and extreme partisanship they plainly deplore." The line received great applause, and deservedly so.

Clinton also spoke about America's racial situation: "The challenge of our past remains the challenge of our future: Will we be one nation, one people, with one common destiny - or not? Will we all come together, or come apart? The divide of race has been America's constant curse. ... (Prejudice and contempt) plague us still."

Very nice sentiments, Mr. President: Stop the partisan bickering, bring us together on race.

The next day President Clinton spoke to the Democratic National Committee. Speaking of the Republicans, he said this: "Beginning nearly 30 years ago, they began to subtly use and then sometimes not so subtly use rhetoric to divide our people one from another - first on race and then later there were divisions based on religion and politics, which made it more difficult for us to come together."

Ignore for a moment the ugly partisan substance of the charge. Concentrate on the words, "Beginning nearly 30 years ago..." Ask this: What was Bill Clinton doing "nearly 30 years ago"?

In the mid-1960s he worked in Washington for two years for the late Sen. Bill Fulbright, D-Ark. In 1968 he worked in Arkansas for Fulbright's re-election campaign.

In May of 1993, the recently inaugurated President Clinton awarded his first Medal of Freedom, America's highest civilian decoration, to Fulbright.

Fulbright was a segregationist. In 1955, Distinguished Professor of History at the University of Arkansas Randall Bennett Woods published his book "Fulbright: A Biography." Here is an excerpt of his review in The Economist: "Fulbright's admirers had explained his record of opposition to equal rights for blacks as the price he was required to pay for re-election. The truth is more repugnant. Mr. Woods bluntly asserts that Fulbright was a racist. While the truth is more complex, Fulbright certainly found it ... abhorrent for the North to force its racial views on the South."

The Economist's headline called Fulbright "an heroic dove and a racial bigot." The 1995 Los Angeles Times obituary of Fulbright carried a headline that described him as "a noted segregationist." ("Heroic" is not the word I associate with Fulbright. I remember him voting against the Fair Housing Bill in 1968, just as he was conducting his famous - and infamously misleading - televised hearings about Vietnam.)

Clinton's biographer David Maranias wrote that Clinton considered Fulbright as "his first political role model." He quotes Clinton as saying "... Fulbright, I admired no end."

Now, the 1950s and 1960s were complex times for southern Democrats. Most of their white constituents opposed civil rights reform. Most politicians from the South voted Fulbright's way. But many who voted against civil rights publicly, cringed in private about what they did. That was not the posture taken by Fulbright. Over the years, some few broke ranks whenever they could, including Sen. Lyndon Johnson, Sen. Albert Gore (Sr.), Sen. Estes Kefauver, and Sen. Ralph Yarborough.

It is said, and I believe it, that Bill Clinton has deep and passionate feelings about the racial situation. To his credit, he was a racial liberal, even when he worked for, and idolized, a segregationist. Maranias tells us that Clinton felt that on civil rights Fulbright was "a relic from another era," which he surely was.

It was a complex time. What Clinton doesn't get is that it is still a complex time regarding race relations in America.

Clinton played the race card at the DNC meeting. He maintains that his political rivals purposefully divide the nation on civil rights. In doing that he impugns their motives and undermines his own intent to heal the wounds of race and partisanship.

It was, after all, Democratic liberals who pushed affirmative action with goals, timetables and sanctions - which led to race norming, racial preference and diversity quotas. It was Democratic liberals who pushed for crisscross school busing to achieve a racial balance - which wrought havoc on public schools and set whites against blacks.

Very nice sentiments, Mr. President: Stop the partisan bickering, bring us together on race.

Award was presented to Gary Rudolph. The award, in honor of the late Dr. Luis Perez, is awarded to persons who excel in their service to humanity, through involvement which is considered above and beyond the normal call of duty.

Gary Rudolph is the chapter president of the Central Florida Chapter of Paralyzed Veterans of America. He became a paraplegic as a result of a motorcycle accident.

He has made a number of presentations at area schools and participates in Handicapped Awareness Day events, and is credited with helping promote the annual bass tournament held on Lake Monroe each year.

The Sports Hall of Fame Awards were presented to Dr. John Morgan and Dr. Karren Newman. The Executive Committee Award went to Brent Adamson. Adamson served as president of the chamber in 1995.

Also during the event, outgoing President Bobby Von Her-bulis and incoming President Sandra Glenn introduced the new board of directors. They include Bob Kuhn, Gail Hinton, Bette Gramkow, Jeff Triplett, Don Beverly, Steve Coover, James Barks, Patty Barnes, Jerry Mills, Brady Lesard and Dean Shoemaker.

The old year was ushered out and the new year welcomed last Friday at the chamber's annual banquet and auction. The event was held at the main terminal building at the Orlando-Sanford Airport.

(on her dad's side) who was the "most marvelous" cook in Germany - the toast of Saarbruecken. "Grandmother lived in a three-story villa and had all the help one could imagine, but she insisted that she do the cooking.

"She could take left overs and prepare them to fit the taste of a king...and when I was six, I met a French chef named Roger. Roger Tailley. Between the two of them - my grandmother and Roger Tailley I gained an education."

As much as the Willow Tree means to Schirmer, she spends even happier moments with a man she affectionately calls, "My Leo."

Schirmer, who has two grown children, met Leo Trepanier six years ago and in no time at all they were fast friends.

"We are engaged not to be married," Schirmer said of her relationship with Trepanier, a widower who is 25 years her senior. She lives with Trepanier at his spacious L&L Acres Ranch in Lake Mary.

"Leo," she said, "is a real man...not the least bit caught up in material things. He does not give me or should he give me jewelry and cars as other women might want from a man who has his means. If I say I need a light bulb, Leo gets the bulb. Yes, I'm well taken care of. I have what I need."

"What I love most is Leo, himself. He is affectionate. A good man. Each day is better than the previous one. I'm very proud of him."

Trepanier comes by the Willow Tree each day to see if there is anything that Schirmer needs. Bread. Cheese. Milk. "I'm never too busy for you," he tells her.

It is Friday afternoon, and a woman asks Schirmer what's on the evening's dinner menu. (Friday is the only night the Willow Tree is open).

The two dishes this particular Friday are Scampi Risotto ala Milanese and Pork Tenderloin with mashed potatoes and white asparagus in Hollandaise Sauce. "I love Friday nights," Schirmer says. "Our first was the result of a party that Kay Bartholomew requested to accompany a Celery City Review. Now it's become a regular thing. I just love Friday nights."

The big crowds at the Willow Tree offer proof that the people of Sanford love them, too.

To be sure, Edlen Schirmer is comfortable in her adopted home.

time, will commute to Orlando on the system. We are talking about a $2.1 billion program, and this is serious. It needs more extensive study."

Brender suggested that even people who might ride the rail route would need ways to get to and from the various depots. "We may have to work something further out with LYNX or something," he added.

There had been some question regarding the use of the property adjacent to the CSX tracks running through Lake Mary and Longwood, with some citizens questioning whether the additional number of trains would cause noise or congestion problems at crossings. They also questioned if the widening of the CSX area to allow for the adjacent tracks would eliminate some of the historic areas still remaining in their downtown areas.

These questions however, have not been answered publicly, as the LYNX and FDOT personnel continue to hold hearings around the area to obtain input.

Clothes you'd just Di for

Russ White
STAFF WRITER

The word from abroad is that the Di formerly known as Princess is giving her wedding gown to a museum and turning over 65 gowns to be auctioned for charity.

These gowns surely seem to be clothes many women would just Di for.

Wouldn't it be a hoot if some of the gowns wound up in consignment shops in Central Florida - places with wonderful names like The Closet Door, Blooming Deals, Second Hand Rose, Twice in Nice, Sweet Repeats, Sassy's, Clothes to the Edge or Ritzy Rags.

"We've got a strict confidentiality rule," Closet Door owner Judith Alexander said, amused at the idea that one of Di's gowns might resurface at her "Decidedly Upscale" resale boutique in Casselberry. "We don't tell anyone who once wore fine beaded gown might sell for less than $100.

"I don't imagine just anyone could wear one of Princess Di's gowns," Alexander said. "She's quite tall but very slender."

Pity Princess Di if she were down and out and needed to a come to a place like Second Hand Rose in Altamonte Springs to leave a few gowns for consignment.

"I'd love to accommodate the princess," owner Nancy Mabry said, "but we've got ladies waiting to bring us things. It might take a month...she'd need an appointment."

There would be no waiting at all at her place says Cida Bennett, who owns Cida's upscale consignment salon in Winter Park. Bennett told us Wednesday she would like to get her hands on every one of Princess Di's gowns.

"I'd blow my horn and alert everyone I know that we have even one of her gowns," Cida said. "Wow! What I would do. She has such great taste. Even her casual clothes are designer's clothes. She is a great, great dresser."

"I know women who want to be her," Cida said. "I am one of them. She's liked - loved - by everyone."

Cida's boutique features European Couture gowns designed by Chanel, Versace, and Valentino. She currently has a Chanel gown priced at $10,000.

"Princess Di, I imagine, wears an eight," Cida said. "I read somewhere that she was a size eight. Like I say, I'd love to have just one and tell everyone I know. 'Guess What?'"

And try this on for size and a royal surprise should one of Di's gowns land at Ritzy Rags, a funky Orlando boutique that is frequented by many of the drag queens of the magic kingdom. Look at those Dis in disguise.

Deception should play no part in couple's choice of church

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem and need your advice. My husband wants me to be his parents, and I would feel uncomfortable in this lie. He says this "white" lie is necessary if we are to maintain a harmonious relationship with them. We don't see them often, so perpetuating the lie would not be too difficult, but I feel guilty about it just the same, and I wonder if the web of deceit we are weaving will entangle us one day.

We have been attending a church that is not the same faith as my in-laws. If they knew it, they would be very hurt - especially since they want their grandchildren to grow up in their faith.

Both churches are Christian churches, and there are more similarities than differences. Because of these similarities, I think my in-laws would get over our attending this church if they knew; my husband disagrees.

"I like this church, especially the programs for our children. My husband, however, feels a loyalty to the religion in which he was raised. Because of this ambiguity, he does not want to tell his parents because they might believe he has abandoned his faith, which would not be entirely true.

Abby, do you think it would be OK to tell a lie if it prevents hurt feelings and friction within the family? My husband thinks so.

ANYTOWN, U.S.A.

DEAR ANYTOWN: You and your husband are adults and should not feel it is necessary to lie to his parents for any reason. "Oh, what a tangled web we weave when first we practice to deceive!" (Sir Walter Scott)

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend and I recently bought a house together. We share all the cooking and cleaning. Prior to "us," he was living with a girl for 10 years, and I was married for 15 years.
His former girlfriend was completely domestic, and I'm totally the opposite. I'm a successful small-business owner with a very busy schedule.

Recently he asked me to hem a pair of his work pants. I said that I'd have my seamstress do it, but it would cost $5. He refused to pay for it, saying his former girlfriend would be more than happy to do it for nothing.

"I'm furious! I'd rather pay $100 than allow her to think she's taking care of my man's needs. He refuses to fight over this and is ordering a new pair of pants. What should I do?"

SUZIE IN CANADA

DEAR SUZIE: When the new pants arrive, if they solve the problem - give him a hug. However, if they don't solve the problem, don't needle him. Since sewing is not one of your many talents, when the new pants arrive, quietly take them to your seamstress. Five dollars is a small price to pay to let sleeping dogs lie.

DEAR ABBY: My New Year's wish for the many wives who, like me, have added pounds as well as years, is that their husbands be as tactful and loving as mine.

When I lamented the fact that at age 45, I weighed 110 pounds and now, at 65, I am 30 pounds heavier, he just hugged me and said, "Honey, you'll always be the apple of my eye." He's a keeper, and I am ...

Soccer finals set

Rams, Tribe, Patriots, Lions all advance teams

By DEAN SMITH Herald Sports Editor

LAKE MARY - Lake Brantley stole Oviedo's Monday night thunder, while the Lions, Lake Mary and Seminole each had a team advance to Friday night's district soccer championships with wins in the semifinals on Wednesday night.

The Lake Brantley boys' and girls' teams both advanced to the Class 6A-District 4 title games with victories at Tom Storey Field. The Patriot boys, seeded No. 2, edged No. 3 seeded Lyman in penalty kicks 2-1, while the girls, also the No. 2 seed, blanked No. 3 Lake Howell, 2-0.

The Lake Brantley boys will meet No. 5 seed Oviedo, which upset top-seeded Lake Howell 2-1 at Richard Evans Field.

The top-seeded girls' team from Lake Mary proved it was worthy of its lofty position as the Rams pounded No. 4 Oviedo 5-0 at Don T. Reynolds Stadium.

Both 6A-District 4 title matches will be at Lake Brantley's Tom Storey Field, with the boys squaring off at 6 p.m. and the girls taking the field at 8 p.m.

The Seminole High School girls' team also advanced to the championship contest with an impressive 5-1 victory over Merritt Island at Satellite High School in Satellite Beach. The Tribe will meet the host Scorpions, which pounded Titusville 10-0 Wednesday night, at Satellite High School's Percy Hedgecock Sports Complex on Friday at 7 p.m.

No matter what the outcome of the games on Friday night, all of the teams will advance to

Lions whip Rams, widen lead in SAC

By KELLIE WERNER Herald Staff Writer

OVIDEO - Turnovers and frustration. One causes the other and this is definitely not a good combination, especially on the basketball court.

Last night at Oviedo High School, the visiting Lake Mary Rams experienced this deadly combo. Each took its toll, causing the Rams to lose to the Lions, 75-59.

"Turnovers killed us," head coach Mike Gaudreau said after the game. "We needed to be dead on and make no mistakes in order to beat this team. You make a bad pass and they'll grab it and score on it."

Lake Mary found themselves in a quick 10-2 deficit to open the game. Oviedo hit every shot, including two from downtown.

The Rams would never recover. Despite a run of seven unanswered points to close the first quarter, Lake Mary was still trailing 21-13 at the buzzer.

The second quarter would find the Rams truer to form. Randy Abrams opened with back-to-back three-pointers to bring the Rams to the closest score of the evening.

Although the Lions scored 14 points in the second quarter and the Rams stayed right with them with 13, the turnovers were keeping them from attaining the needed baskets to overtake the very disciplined Oviedo team.

Even Lake Mary's number one threat, Matt Townsley, despite a strong effort, was only able to rack up eight points in the first half.

With Oviedo on top at the half, 35-26, the Rams headed for the locker room and a much needed break.

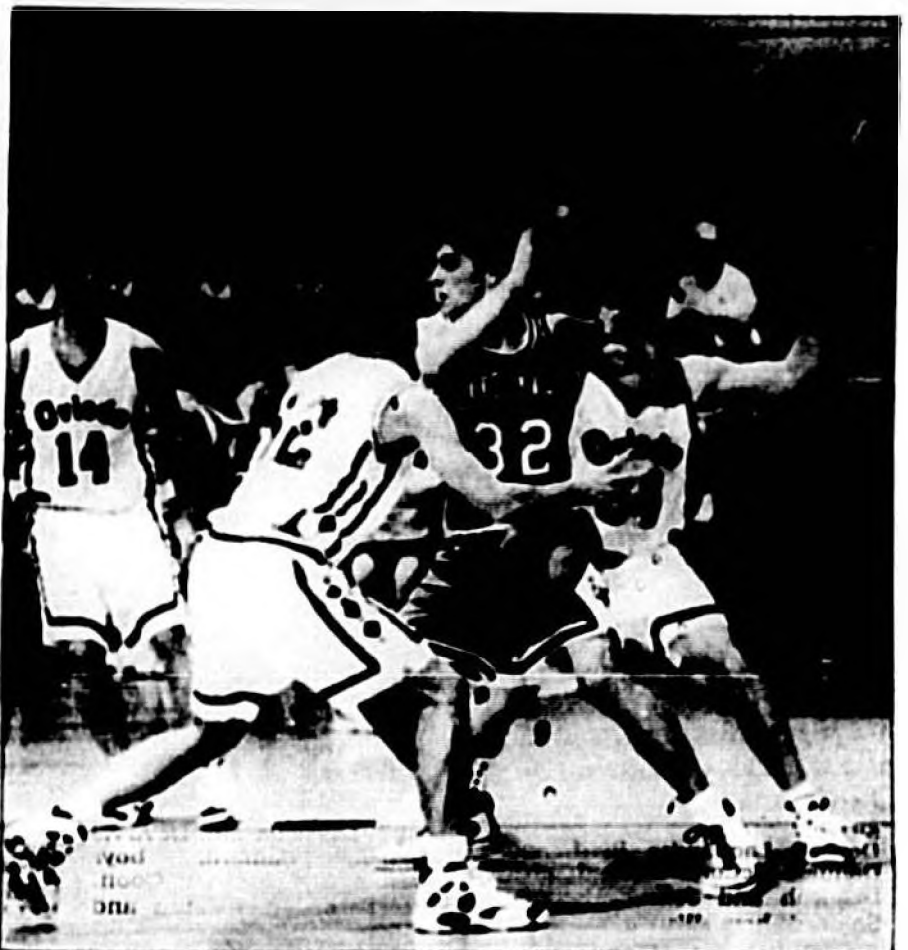

Lake Mary came out with a vengeance in the third quarter. More sure handed and aggressive, they began an all out attack on the Lions and were able to come within six points of Oviedo very early on.

Then something happened.

Turnovers. Passes were picked off by Oviedo almost before the ball left the Rams' hands. If Lake Mary missed a shot, Oviedo was already down the court with it before the overpowered Rams took their eyes off of the basket.

Then came the frustration.

Lake Mary's Ben Kersenbrock (No. 32) finds himself trapped by Oviedo's Darren Rogers (No. 12) and Scott Berkay during the Lions' 75-59 Seminole Athletic Conference victory over the Rams Wednesday night.

Nice-N-Easy, Ron's top Lake Mary

From Staff Reports

LAKE MARY - Nice-N-Easy nearly gave one away, but rallied to win, while Ron's Tire and Muffler Center won its opening game of the season to remain undefeated in the City of Lake Mary Department of Parks and Recreation seven-team Men's Wednesday Night Polar Bear Slow Pitch Softball League at the Lake Mary Sports Complex.

Nice-N-Easy, which beat Celeste Industries 8-4 on January 22, had rallied twice early in the game to take a 15-11 lead into the sixth inning. But Columbia Health Care, which clobbered U.S. Postal Service 15-3 in its opening game, scored three runs in each of the sixth and seventh innings to take a 17-15 lead. But Nice-N-Easy came back with three runs in the bottom of the seventh inning to pull out the 18-17 triumph.

Ron's Tire and Muffler Center won its opening after having a bye last week by plating seven runs in the second inning and going on to whip Home Depot, which won its opening game of the season 14-13 over Seminole Ford last week, 14-1, limiting Home Depot to just five hits.

In the first game of the night, U.S. Postal Service used a seven-run third inning and a four-run fifth inning to offset a nine-run fourth inning by Celeste Industries in a 15-12 triumph.

Next week, Ron's Tire and Muffler Center (1-0) takes on Seminole Ford (0-1) at 6:30 p.m.; U.S. Postal Service challenges Nice-N-Easy (2-0) at 7:30 p.m.; Columbia Health Care (1-1) faces Celeste Industries (0-2) at 8:30 p.m.; and Home Depot (1-1) has the week off.

Providing the offense in last night's games were: United States Postal Service: two hits - Gil Mendenia (home run, triple, two runs, six RBI), Duwayne Hoglen (double, two runs, RBI), Mike Ruanne (run, two RBI); one hit - Bill Doyle (double, two runs), Boomer Beecher (three runs, two RBI), Jim Lockamy (two RBI), Eddie Rodriguez (two runs), Joe Montero, Mark Clore.

Magic stops Suns

By JEFF BERLINCKE Herald Staff Writer

ORLANDO - Orlando Magic coach Brian Hill stepped up to the microphone for his post-game press conference and the phone rang.

"Is that the President?" Hill laughed after the Magic's 112-105 win over the Phoenix Suns.

It might as well have been.

Why not take in a girls basketball game?

SANFORD - A packed house. Screaming fans. Anticipation of the big game.

These are the perfect ingredients for the start of a high school basketball game.

A boys' basketball game that is. There is no lack of support for the boys teams in our county. Proud parents, friends, and classmates fill the local gyms to cheer on their neighborhood teams.

Only the boys teams though. Why? People manage to find their way to the basketball games when boys are playing. How come they suddenly forget the directions when the girls are on the court?

The girls' basketball teams in our county are more entertaining, just as athletic, and more successful than their masculine counterparts.

Lake Mary's varsity team is undefeated and Seminole's Lady Noles have only two losses. Don't these teams deserve every bit as much support?

Many of the girls on these teams are being heavily recruited by colleges, have great point averages, and practice and play basketball just as hard as the boys. Can you imagine how they feel when they play their hearts out in an almost empty gymnasium.

Extra Points... Kellie Werner Herald Staff Writer

Soccer games are no different. The girls' teams at the same two schools are lucky if there are even a handful of parents sitting in the stands, much less any students. I realize that to some, soccer may not be as popular as basketball. But there are still more supporters at the boys' soccer games than at the girls'.

Just so everyone knows, I totally support any high school sport. I don't, however, support favoritism that is shown to boys' sports over girls' sports.

Some of you will disagree with this, but I can understand how this happens in college. Like it or not, the boys' sports bring in the money. They have historically received a higher attendance and it will take awhile before that begins to change. In high school, however, you are dealing with young adults. Kids who are playing their hearts out, practicing every day, and trying to balance school work and playing a sport.

If our community and students can find the time to make it to a boys' game, can't they find the time to attend a girls' game every now and then?

I know that the stands will probably never be packed for a girls' regular season game. I commend the support that it is given for the playoff games and such.

But these girls deserve every bit as much support and attention during their regular season as the boys do and I think it is very sad that they don't receive it.

Try it, you might like it. Go to a girls' game one night next week and you'll be surprised to find that you will have a great time. These games are played hard, the athletes are talented, and the competition is fierce.

My pick of the week would be the rematch of Seminole at Lake Mary tonight at 7:30 p.m. This is sure to be a grudge match that will entertain even the most avid basketball fan.

Show these girls that we support their efforts. I'll see you at the game.

Before they knew it, Lake Mary was down 52-37 and Gaudreau called a time out. The frustration of the coach and his team was evident. Towels were hurled instead of tossed and water bottles were slammed onto the bleachers.

The impressive combination of Townsley and Paul Beik was still a driving force for the team. They combined for 32 points, numerous rebounds, and superb defense. Everyone on the team played hard, but they were simply outplayed by a very physical Oviedo team.

A Seminole team playing for pride will host Lake Mary tomorrow as the Rams look to rebound in their final Seminole Athletic Conference game of the season. After Seminole, three straight home games await before district play.

Magic

Last night's win was that big. Penny Hardaway was the latest Magic before they won for the first time in the last 10 games. He had a season-high 32 points, including three-of-five from the three-point arc.

After a Shaw miss from the free throw line, Ceballos hit the front end of a one-and-one and the score was knotted at 98. That was the last time Phoenix threatened. Ceballos missed the back end and Hardaway hit another jumper to put Orlando up.
