Graham Plea: Help Me Do What Is Right

TALLAHASSEE, (UPI) — Gov. Bob Graham asked every man, woman and child in Florida today to make a personal commitment to help him "do what is right, regardless of the consequences in public favor or personal misfortune."

Although the formal oath-taking was not until noon, Graham actually became governor at one minute after midnight in a quiet moment at the mansion with his family and close staff which one observer described as "kind of dramatic."

There were five cases of syphilis reported to the Seminole County Health Department compared to 351 during the same period in 1978 there were 493 cases of gonorrhea.

A 53-year-old Sanford man apparently died of a heart attack early this morning during a burglary in Longwood.

Police said Elmer Thomas Bray of Shenandoah Village, 4220 Highway 17-92, was found dead just outside Hilton Cabinets at 108 Marvin Ave.

Mrs. Robinson said she read in the Evening Herald of the difficult decision Mrs. Grace Perry, director of the Meals on Wheels (MOW) program when service was stopped to those homebound, elderly by the Seminole County Federation of Senior Citizens' Project OASIS when funding was transferred there from another MOW program formerly managed by SCA.

Askew Sees Florida As Hub Of World

TALLAHASSEE, (UPI) — Gov. Reubin Askew stepped down today calling the last 24 hours among the best in his life and predicting "an international tomorrow" for Florida.

Askew, the state's longest-serving governor and one of its most popular, said he leaves "with a great sense of satisfaction as a difficult and demanding stewardship comes to an end."

He is confident Florida's future will be bright and believes the Graham administration is beginning "on a note of high hope and in a moment of great promise."

"I will be opening my telephone for a heartline to meet any emergency for them as often and in any way we can," she said. "We read the article in the newspaper about the danger of these people being dropped. Since we are an organization out to help our community, we believe help is needed here as badly as with anything we could find," Mrs. Robinson said.

WORLD IN BRIEF

China: Greatest Peril To Peace From Soviets

PEKING (UPI) One day after normalizing relations with the United States to end 30 years of hot and cold war, China warned today the greatest threat to peace comes from the Soviet Union.

The People's Daily, China's official Communist party newspaper, carried a three-column photograph of U.S. Liaison Office Chief Leonard Woodcock exchanging a champagne toast with Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping at a New Year's reception.

But the Sino-American normalization did not get top play in the People's Daily. The paper instead banneted Vice Premier Teng's latest reunification call to Nationalist leaders on Taiwan and a stern warning that the only threat to world peace and stability comes from the "north" — a reference to Russia.

Castro On China: 'Treason'

HAVANA, Cuba (UPI) — Cuban President Fidel Castro says China's decision to open diplomatic relations with the United States is "grand treason" because it puts the Yankee dollar above revolutionary ideals.

Castro, marking 20 years in power Monday, also said Washington was guilty of "infinite hypocrisy" in its human rights drive and vowed that Cubans "will never bow our heads in Africa."

"Cuba cannot be bought or bribed," the 52-year-old president told about 2,000 widely cheering members of the National Assembly in a 70-minute speech. "Cuba is not China or Egypt."

Warplanes Check Out UFOs

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI) — Film footage of purported close encounters with UFOs over New Zealand filled television screens in Britain and Australia, and the Royal New Zealand Air Force prepared to send up warplanes today to check it all out. "We do not consider there is a defense threat," a New Zealand Air Force spokesman said. "But it's all very interesting."

A rash of sighting and radar tracking of unidentified flying objects have been reported along the coast of New Zealand in the last 10 days, culminating in the filming of the flattened spheres on New Year's Eve by an Australian television crew.

Rhodesia Rebels Hit Home

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — Black nationalist guerrillas fired rockets and automatic rifle fire into a home in Salisbury today in the second attack within the capital in a month. The attack caused extensive damage but no deaths to the seven people in the house in the white Salisbury suburb of Borrowdale. One woman was wounded.

Basques Kill Army Officer

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Suspected Basque separatists carrying submachine guns shot and killed an army major today at the door of his home in the northern city of San Sebastian, police said. In another Basque city, Pamplona, a bomb exploded in a major street killing one person.

34 Die On Greek Tanker

LA CORUNA, Spain (UPI) — An abandoned Greek supertanker, raked by heavy seas and fire, slowly sailed on automatic pilot today away from the Spanish coast, leaving an estimated 15.3 million gallons of spilled crude oil in its wake. All but three of the ship's 37 crew and passengers were lost when their lifeboat capsized in heavy waves and were believed drowned. The missing included the captain, his wife and son.

Dollar Takes New Year Dip

LONDON (UPI) — The dollar took a severe drubbing today, falling sharply on markets in the first trading of the new year. The price of gold inched up. The precious metal rose in London from $226.375 an ounce to $226.75.

Iran: From Peace, Stability To Violence

All Transport Down, Thousands Can't Get Out

By SAJJID RIZVI
TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Demonstrators and soldiers fought running battles in the streets of Tehran, violence raged in Iran's provinces and land and air transport services shut down today, leaving thousands of Americans and other stranded.

The state radio announced that all trains were halted by a nationwide strike. Intercity bus services were stopped earlier by a gasoline shortage, caused by the continuing oil industry strike.

The shutdowns raised fears that some foreigners trying to reach Tehran might still be stranded in the provinces. But the capital's hotels, deserted lately due to civil strife, were occupied by hundreds of foreign families awaiting departure.

Premier-designate Shahpour Bakhtiari in an emotional broadcast vowed:

"I shall not let this country be destroyed even if I have to die."

He promised to free all political prisoners, allow political opposition and end martial law "gradually."

But demonstrators who earlier shouted "Death to the shah" took up a new slogan, "Death to Shahpour Bakhtiari, henchman of American imperialists."

Plainclothes men who demonstrators said were Savak secret policemen attacked opponents of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi and even passersby in Mashad, the industrial city of Ghaovin west of Tehran and the west Iranian city of Kermanshah.

In Mashad, northeast Iran, the Hyatt International hotel was turned into a hospital after three straight days of shooting. The opposition claimed an estimated 700 died. Other sources estimated the death toll might be even higher.

Iran, for decades a haven of peace in the war-torn Middle East, became a battleground of civil strife as seething resentment toward the iron rule of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi exploded in nationwide protest 13 months ago.

The outcome of the unrest could have consequences far beyond the borders of the country, poised strategically between the Soviet Union and the oil-rich states of the Persian Gulf.

Ironically one of the reasons for the shah's possible temporary exile — foreign contacts he thought necessary to proceed with his "White Revolution" — was the very reason his father won the Peacock Throne and started the Pahlavi dynasty.

Modern Iranian history began with a nationalist uprising in 1906, the granting of

A limited constitution in 1906 and the discovery of oil in 1908. A second revolutionary movement, directed largely by the shah's father, Reza Shah Pahlavi, against foreign influence in Iranian affairs, led to his enthronement on Dec. 12, 1925.

Reza Shah made a start toward modernization of the country, but his flirtation with the Nazis led to the occupation of Iran by British and Soviet forces in 1941 and his abdication that year in favor of his son.

Iranian nationalism grew after World War II and peaked with the nationalization of the British oil industry in 1951 under the premiership of Muhammad Mossadegh.

In August 1953 Mossadegh briefly overthrew the shah who fled to Europe before he was restored to power in what has been accepted as a CIA-engineered counter-coup.

After this, the shah took a more active political role and gradually tightened his grip on the country.

He instituted systematic efforts at political, economic and social development which came to be known as the "White Revolution" — an attempt to drag a tradition-minded nation into the 20th century.

The shah responded with a series of concessions including freedom of political activity, freedom of expression and freedom to hold political meetings.

lacked the Savak secret police headquarters and freed people imprisoned in an underground jail.

Several Savak officers laid their weapons down, reports reaching Tehran said.

In Kermanshah, residents dressed in black reappeared on the streets after a 10-day period of violence in which an estimated 100 people were killed and more than 400 wounded Sunday and another 18 killed and 84 wounded Monday.

Nearly all deaths took place in army shootings, witnesses said.

In Tehran, demonstrators and soldiers fought running battles in the streets on the 11th day of unrest. At least three people were shot and one died on the way to a hospital, witnesses said.

A West German Lufthansa airliner landed at Mehrabad airport today but had not left by the afternoon. Another Israeli El Al flight was scheduled to make a visual landing.

Several Western airlines were expected to cancel flights. Air India, PIA and the Iraqi Airways canceled operations in Iran Monday, denying the frantic passengers any connections to nearby Middle East airports.

An estimated 700 American and British expatriates and their dependents were evacuated to Bahrain, in the Persian Gulf, in airplanes provided by oil firms Monday.

to secure this aim, the shah brooked no opposition. The SAVAK secret police took on an increasingly powerful role and in March 1975 the shah announced dissolution of the two-party system and decreed the establishment of a new National Resurgence Party to serve as the country's sole political vehicle.

The frequently amended constitution already gave the shah wide personal powers — control of the armed forces, a veto on legislation, appointment of a prime minister and cabinet and authority to suspend civil liberties in times of emergency.

The unrest which led to today's nationwide violence began in November 1977 when students rebelled against new regulations they considered high-handed and autocratic. There were street demonstrations and clashes with police.

Swiftly, the violence grew as Iranians finally burst from the strait-jacket of 38 years of the shah's iron rule. Angered by widespread high-level corruption and oppression by the secret police, they demanded freedom of political activity, freedom of expression and freedom to hold political meetings.

The majority Moslem Shiite sect, weighed in against the shah's modernization programs they said offended the tenets of Islam.

Holman Vote Suit Awaits Lab Data

The lawsuit filed by Ron Holman, unsuccessful GOP candidate for the Seminole County Commission, after the September primary is being held in abeyance awaiting a laboratory report from a northern laboratory on locks from voting machines used in the election, Holman said today.

Holman is challenging the election, which he lost, based on the high incidence of voting machine failures, specifically problems with the locking mechanisms in that election. He said the laboratory report on the locks is expected to be received later this week.

A locksmith hired by the county commission after the September primary and representatives of the voting machine manufacturer said a rubber bumper in the locks melted in the heat of the county warehouse where they were stored jamming the locks.

Holman lost the GOP nomination to Sandra Glenn of Altamonte Springs, who subsequently won the election and assumed her seat on the county board in November.

Fatal Jet Crash Cause: Plane Ran Out Of Gas

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — The United Airlines DC8 crash that killed 10 people last week occurred because the jet ran out of fuel circling the airport with a landing gear problem, a federal investigator said.

Sixty-nine of the 185 people aboard the plane were injured in the Thursday night crash. No one on the ground was injured. "It looks as if there is no doubt that the aircraft ran out of fuel and the engines experienced fuel starvation so the engines couldn't complete its flight," said Doug Driefus, chief investigator for the National Transportation Safety Board team working on the wreckage.

Couple In Car Robbed At Knifepoint

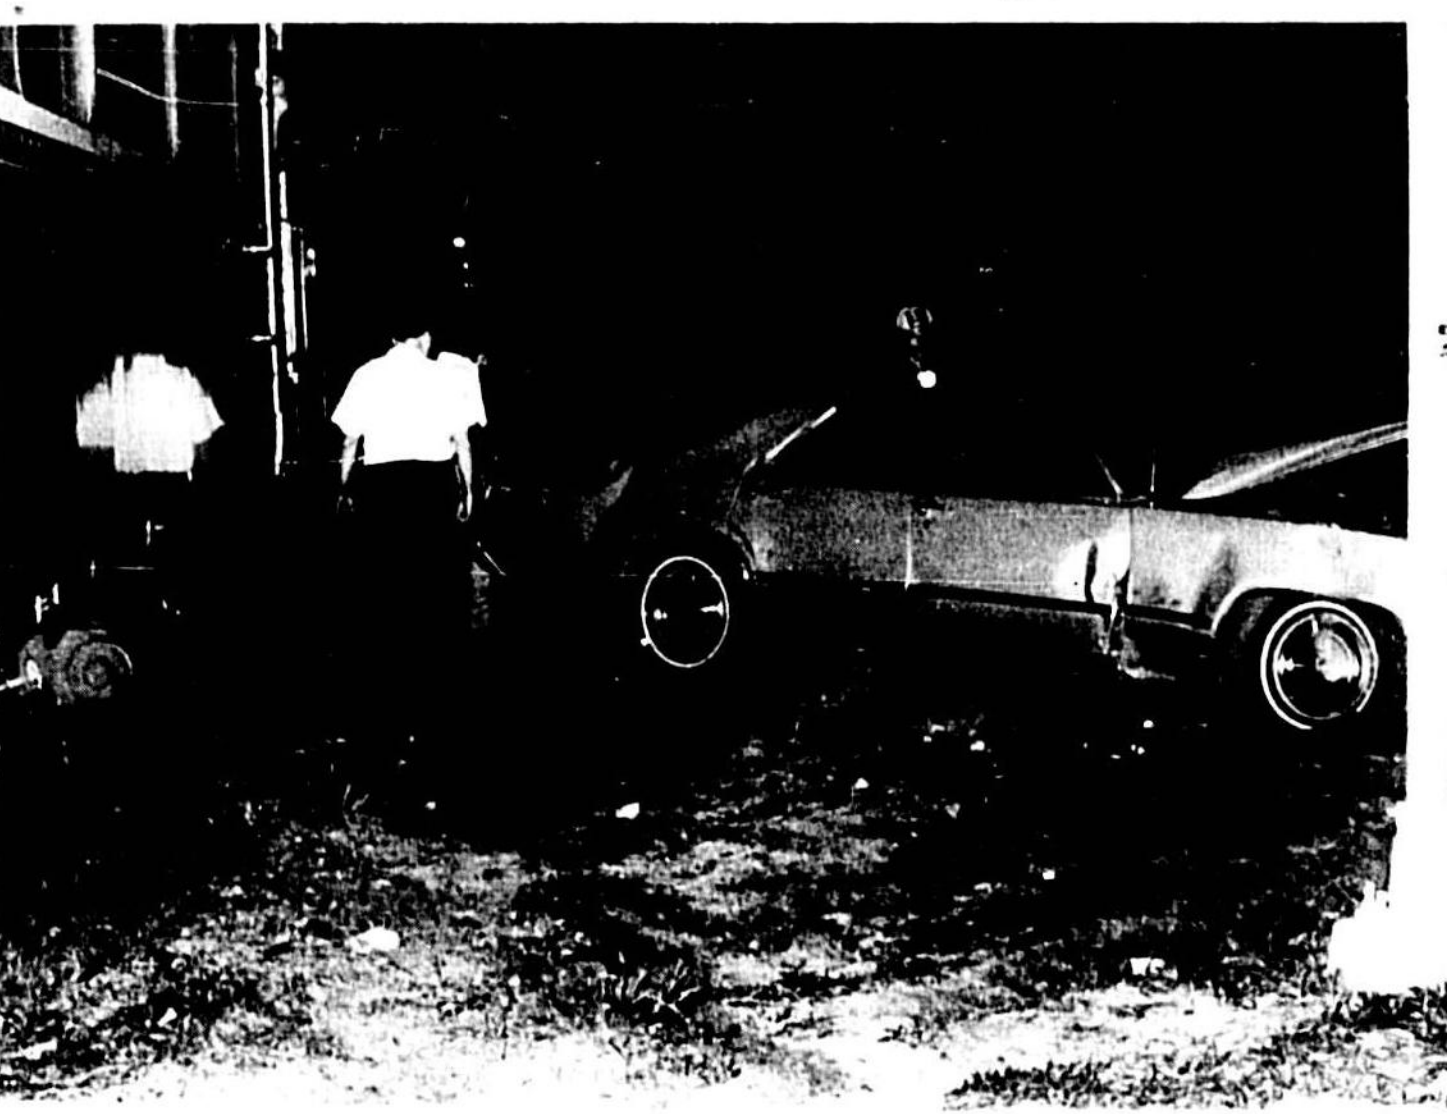

By DENNIS FEOLA
Herald Staff Writer

Two men wielding knives robbed a young couple parked in a car on North Street near Fern Park.

The 18-year-old Orlando man and his 16-year-old Altamonte Springs date told sheriff's deputies the incident occurred at 2:18 a.m. Monday.

The pair said the two men approached the car from both the passenger and driver's side and both men had knives. The robbers demanded money and when the man told them he didn't have any, they ordered him to take off his pants so they could shake out the coins in his pockets, according to records.

Records indicate the pair got $2 in coins and three rings with a combined value of $420 from the girl.

NERVOUS MOMENT
The 21-year-old Sanford driver of this car was treated for nerves but was not physically injured when she escaped from her car moments before it was hit by a Seaboard Coastline train. The accident occurred at Southwest Road and 18th Street at 10:15 p.m. Mae Redding 1812 I. Lincoln Ave., said her car was stalled on the tracks for several minutes before the train came and she got out of the car only moments before impact.

MAN ROBBED
An 18-year-old Sanford man told sheriff's deputies he was robbed by a man he had given a ride in his car. Ricky Geter of Seminole Gardens said the man grabbed him around the throat and threatened to shoot him if he didn't turn over his wallet, records indicate.

Records indicate the man did not pull a gun and there was no estimate of how much was stolen.

BURGLARY REPORTED
A total of $420 in cash and merchandise was reported stolen during a burglary at the Club Cordell on Highway 17-92 near Longwood.

Sandra Cordell, 25, of Altamonte Springs told sheriff's deputies burglars apparently gained entry to the business through a hole in a wall. Among the merchandise reported stolen were: seven cases of

TRUCK TAKEN
A 1978 Ford pickup truck was reported stolen Monday between 2 a.m. and 4:55 a.m. Robert A. Thomas, 57, of Springwood Village near Longwood, told sheriff's deputies the truck was stolen from in front of his apartment. The truck was valued at $5,689, according to records.

CB RADIO MISSING
A citizens band radio and clock with a combined value of $140 was reported stolen from a car parked at the Moose Lodge on Palmetto Avenue in Sanford. Roy Capps, 67, of 106 Country Club Circle in Sanford reported the burglary occurred between 9 p.m. and midnight.

CASH TAKEN
Joseph Watkins, 36, 480 Dixie St., reported someone entered Joe's Variety, 1301 West 13th St., Sanford, late Friday or Saturday and took $18 from the cash register, according to police. Thieves are believed to have entered the store through a window.

and early Monday, netting only $7 for their trouble. Thieves left pry marks on newspaper machines at a service station on West First Street and 315 Poplar Ave., Sanford, according to police. A third try at 805 W. Third, Sanford netted $7 in change.

Retardates Workshop Opening Due February

Mentally retarded adults in Seminole County will soon have a facility where they can do meaningful work and at the same time get training in job skills.

The facility called a Sheltered Workshop will be located at the site of the old Lake Monroe School west of Sanford, and is expected to be open by February.

The second group of adults would also receive additional training in various job skills such as good work habits and how to act in a job interview, according to Mrs. Wiltinger.

The amount of time the second group stays at the workshop would depend on how well they learn the various job skills, according to Midge Mycoff, instructor and program coordinator for programs for the handicapped at Seminole County College (SCC).

In the first year of the program between 12-20 adults should be enrolled, according to Mrs. Mycoff, who is also chairman of the board of directors of Kathleen-Anderson.

The adults who will be in the program will have been tested at the SCC vocational assessment center to determine the extent of the training they would need, according to Mrs. Mycoff.

Once the grant is received, the money would be used to hire a director and an assistant.

One of the primary responsibilities of the director would be to contact local businesses and have them sign contracts with the workshop for the clients to do work.

The contract would have the particular business pay the workshop a certain amount to have the clients work for the company.

The clients, among other tasks, would stuff envelopes and make wooden stakes used for surveying.

OPEC And Oil Prices

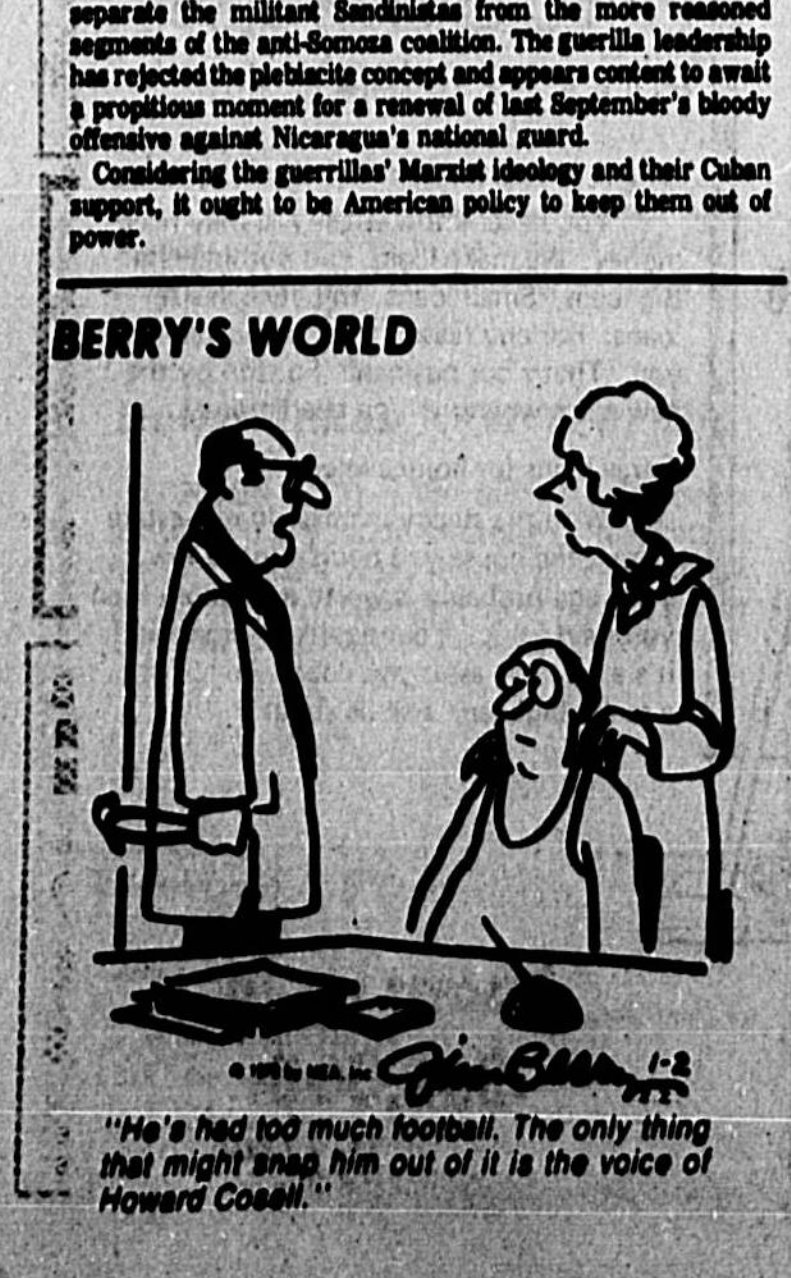

Now that the price of imported oil is going up, the people of the United States must increase their efforts to conserve energy, redress the imbalance in our foreign trade and fight inflation.
First priority should be given to lifting price controls from oil produced in this country.
Much of it is now selling at a price set by the government, far below the world market price.
The latest hike in the price of OPEC oil will only increase the price differential.
We are living in a fools' paradise if we think the Congress can legislate cheap and abundant oil by holding down domestic oil prices.
That will merely distort the market and drive it deeper into the quagmire.
We can talk about conservation but most people won't do anything about saving energy until they are compelled to by higher prices.

Meanwhile, the deficit in our foreign balance of payments keeps sending $45 or $50 billion overseas every year.
No wonder foreigners are losing confidence in the dollar! We're shipping them abroad faster than we can possibly buy them back.
It is not only the oil we're buying abroad but also our own failure to produce goods for export and failure to market them aggressively overseas.
Our governmental spending, our spending for consumer goods and our demands for environmental protection have outstripped the growth in our industrial productivity.
As individuals and as a country, we are going into debt in order to continue spending. Inflation at a rate approaching 10 percent a year is the result.
We cannot blame the OPEC oil ministers for raising their prices if we cannot bring ourselves to tighten our belts and take the steps at home we know we need to take.
After all, the depreciation of the dollar has cut the price of oil in Japanese yen, for instance, by 40 percent in the last 18 months.
The OPEC countries could not be expected to absorb all of that loss indefinitely.
The dollar is sick. That's not OPEC's fault. It is our own.

Nicaraguan Hope

For the first time in months, there seems to be some hope for Nicaragua: a chance that the political crisis there can be resolved peacefully and without the country falling under the control of the Marxist Sandinista guerrillas.
President Anastasio Somoza and the appropriately named Broad Opposition Front have agreed, in principle, to a plebiscite that would determine Nicaragua's government until the scheduled general elections in 1981.
Granted, the terms of the plebiscite have yet to be agreed upon. Somoza prefers an electoral test of party strength that would leave him in the presidential palace even if voters repudiated his Liberal Democratic party. The opposition coalition wants a plebiscite on whether Somoza should remain in office.
Nevertheless, common agreement on any sort of plebiscite would not have been possible without substantial concessions from both sides. Somoza insisted he would never agree to any solution that might result in his ouster before his current term of office expires in 1981.
The opposition front was equally adamant that Somoza resign as a precondition for any negotiations on the formation of a new government.
A mediation team composed of diplomats from the United States, Guatemala and the Dominican Republic has coaxed concessions from both Somoza and the more moderate elements of his opposition.
Having thus narrowed the differences, the mediators now face a reasonable chance of closing the gap altogether.
Significantly, the current negotiations have served to separate the militant Sandinistas from the more reasoned segments of the anti-Somoza coalition. The guerrilla leadership has rejected the plebiscite concept and appears content to await a propitious moment for a renewal of last September's bloody offensive against Nicaragua's national guard.
Considering the guerrillas' Marxist ideology and their Cuban support, it ought to be American policy to keep them out of power.

The first is my seemingly annual vow to lose weight. I did last year, but it slipped back. My vow is two fold — lose it and keep it off. The second part is the toughest, as any dieter will attest.
I hesitate to share my second resolution, because I run a risk of being labeled a boy grown tall. Well, it won't be the first time.

And Such A Bargain

WASHINGTON (NSA) — There's no better illustration of the hard times currently faced by the country's nuclear power industry than its 11th hour escape from the disgrace of not making a single domestic sale throughout 1978.
On December 29, only 11 days before the end of the year, the Commonwealth Edison Co. of Chicago announced it had agreed to purchase from the Westinghouse Electric Corp. a pair of 1,150 megawatt nuclear generating units.
Although nuclear power is not without major liabilities — notably long-term safety risks and numerous unresolved problems at the "back end" of the fuel cycle — it is far superior to other fuels in one crucial aspect: its strikingly low cost.
No two companies have more effectively demonstrated these economics than Westinghouse, a Pittsburgh-based firm that is the nation's largest producer of nuclear generating units, and Commonwealth Edison, which used nuclear power more than any other utility in the country.
Commonwealth Edison now relies on nuclear power to provide almost 42 percent of its generating capacity. The two new units, to be constructed about 150 miles west of Chicago near the Mississippi River town of Swanville, Ill., will increase that figure to about 65 percent.
The utility company's nuclear-powered plants supply electricity at 1.33 cents per kilowatt-hour (kwh), compared with 2.41 cents per kwh for coal-fired generating stations.
A report recently issued by the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, based on data provided to state regulatory commissions by power companies throughout the nation, indicates that similar economies are being achieved in other states.
In North Carolina, the Duke Power Co. is generating electricity from its nuclear plants at a cost of less than 31 cents per million British thermal units (Btu), compared with more than $1.37 per million Btu for coal-fired plants and almost $2.78 per million Btu for oil-fired generating stations.
In South Carolina, the Carolina Power & Light Co. reports costs of less than 30 cents per million Btu for nuclear power, $1.31 per million Btu when coal is used and more than $2.63 per million Btu when oil is the fuel.
The major corporations that manufacture nuclear generating equipment have too long subordinated economy as a selling point, preferring to rely instead on "you need us more than we need you" approach.
That haughty sales pitch usually comes in the form of a threat that "you're gonna freeze in the dark" by 1980, 2000 or some other year in the not too distant future if the public refuses to embrace nuclear power as its salvation.
Westinghouse has produced its share of such dire predictions, but it is also attempting to take a more reasoned approach in promoting the cost benefits of nuclear power.

VIEWPOINT

On The Algerian Succession
By DON GRAFF
Now it is Algeria's turn.
With the death of President Houari Boumediene, the North African country faces a challenge that has defeated many another revolutionary state: an orderly transfer of power.
Boumediene, the austere soldier-son of a poor farmer, held unquestioned power through 20 of the 18 years since Algeria wrenched its independence from France. What Algeria is today is largely his shaping. And that is:
A firmly Moslem society committed to the building of an indigenous variety of socialism.
A hardliner in the Arab cause against Israel whose effective military efforts are directed westward, against neighboring and Arab Morocco.
The possessor of an army equipped by the Soviet Union in which commands are given in the language of the former colonial power, France.
A frequent supporter of the Soviet line in world affairs and standards-bearer for Third World independence from all forms of colonialism, political and economic which is energetically expanding its own economic ties with the West.
In short, a paradox of a country in many respects, but one in which pragmatism tends to be the chief policy determinant and which has been for the last decade in its domestic politics an exceptionally stable element of the developing world, where such stability is not the rule.
This is to replace Boumediene is only the first of several questions in the challenges now facing Algeria. There is a national constitution. And there is an official political party, the National Liberation Front, which the constitution empowers to name a president.
But the actual choice almost certainly will be made where real power lies, in the Council of Revolution, comprised of the surviving members of the group of 25 officers who engineered the 1965 coup in which Boumediene came to power. There are only eight members now and, other than Foreign Minister Abdelaziz Boufelfel, they are not well known to the outside world or the Algerian public.
A larger question is whether Boumediene's successor can fill the Boumediene role. The late occupant created a presidency tailored to his personality and strengths. That power in the hands of a different personality could have very different consequences. In the Soviet Union, for one revolutionary example, a leadership role passed to Lenin had partially gruesome consequences as assumed by a Stalin.
Setting power and consolidating it in a revolutionary state are one thing. Establishing a system for transferring that power effectively to succeeding generations of leaders without disrupting the state is altogether another.
The history of much of the rest of the world in that respect makes the achievements of the United States two centuries ago look all the more impressive.

BUSINESS WORLD

How To Delay That Bill
NEW YORK (UPI) — "The check is in the mail," it still the excuse of the unimaginative debtor, but cash flow problems created by inflation have raised the practice of stalling creditors to a fine art, says John Gordana.
Gordana runs Equitable Adjustment Service, a collection agency for such blue chip clients as American Cyanamid, Johnson & Johnson and Schering Corp.
Gordana says he is intrigued by the high degree of sophistication displayed by debtor companies to keep creditors from bringing the law down on them.
"Of course, the ancient device of sending a partial payment on the delinquent account still is widely practiced," he said. "So is the time honored and unimaginative lie, 'the check's in the mail.'"
But there are much more adroit ways to stall for a few days or even a few weeks, he said.
One of the most ingenious is to send a check in payment for the bill but to use a little gadget that demagnetizes the magnetic ink in the Federal Reserve transit number and the account number; these three little figures in computer alphanumeric, at the bottom of the check. This will cause the bank's computer to throw out the check and by law the bank then is required to sort it by hand.
Since banks now have small staffs for this kind of work the check may take up to three weeks to clear. Meanwhile, the debtor supplier who sent it has use of the money.
A perfectly legal, and on the whole not unethical, method of delaying payment is to have checking accounts in banks scattered around the country. One pays bills with checks drawn on the bank farthest from the creditor's office. For a big company, even a few days delay in clearing a check can improve cash flow and save a significant amount of interest.
But it's not so ethical to draw checks to pay bills on bank "A" and the next day transfer the funds to bank "B." When the creditor hove about the bouncing checks, the debtor company says innocently, "Oh, we had some trouble at the bank and decided to make a change, a few checks got caught in transit."
Equally reprehensible is the practice of photographing a cancelled check for a previous order of the same amount, after altering the date on the face of the check, as proof of payment, then hand-delivering the altered check to the creditor. Another one of those stalling devices is to put different amounts in figures and the spelled out money amount. "We did that! Just send the check back and we'll send you another."
Many businesses, especially small ones, have felt the impact of the severe credit squeeze that has pushed interest rates near record highs, Gordana said.
These cradles which destroy lots of small businesses, used to occur every three or four years.
Recently, he says, there has been a dropoff in the total number of bills his clients are sending him to collect. That, he says, is not good news. It could mean a recession is just around the corner.
"It's an axiom in the business that when times are good company credit managers don't have time to go about collecting bad accounts," he said. "It's when business is slow that they have time to hound some of the delinquents themselves instead of sending the claims to us."

Disasters And Fraud Abound At HUD
WASHINGTON — When a flood or other disaster strikes a community, the National Guard is often mobilized to prevent looting in the stricken areas. Unfortunately, there is no such hardened effort to prevent the looting of public funds by contractors and government employees who prey on other people's misery by overcharging for repair work or submitting essentially worthless claims.
Federal auditors and other official watchdogs have a tough enough job fighting waste in normal situations; after a disaster, the controls are loosened to the point of absurdity as federal agencies try to expedite relief measures for the victims.
A glaring example of disaster-related extravagance is in the Housing and Urban Development Department's emergency rebuilding program, which provides temporary housing for displaced victims and makes repairs for their damaged residences.
Over the years the staff has added thousands of families hit by disaster. But it has also let contractors and construction take advantage of its generous provisions, all at a staggering cost to the taxpayers. Here are some of the abuses on associate Peter Grant uncovered:
•Overruns piled up. During the 1971-72 disaster the HUD staffers at the time got 22,300 hours of overtime in the first month. Disaster relief isn't a 9-to-5 proposition, of course, and sometimes employees must work around the clock to speed aid to victims. They would be criticized if they didn't.

Mexican Trip Holds Memories For Students

With the arrival of 1979, the end of 78 will probably hold fond memories for years to come for Cindy Buchanan, Natalie Bergman and John Booth, who along with 13 other students have returned from a trip to Mexico.

The trip was under the auspices of the Oviedo High School International Club, under the direction of Spanish teacher Marilyn Kampmeier. The Winter Springs trio, along with their fellow students, Mrs. Kampmeier and five other adult chaperones left on Dec. 18, flew to Tampa, and then to Mexico City.

While in Mexico City, the group toured the city, seeing such sights as the governor's palace, the many churches and cathedrals, Chapultepec Park, the Museum of Anthropology and several night clubs.

Those good folks of the Winter Springs VFW Post and Auxiliary have opened themselves this holiday season. This small group managed to fill and deliver 13 baskets of food, toys and clothing for needy families in the area.
