County moves ahead with 17/92 plans

By Joe DeSantis
Staff Writer

SANFORD — Seminole's Board of County Commissioners Tuesday unanimously approved an amended 2001 Activity Plan for the U.S. 17-92 Redevelopment Program for the next fiscal year.

The $416,333 project includes a number of enhancement projects and continuation of traffic signal upgrades, but eliminates a Coordinator Staff position with an annual salary and benefits package of $50,000 sought by the county's Economic Development office.

Improvements include aesthetic guidelines and new signals in Sanford

"I don't believe a full-time position is warranted at this point," said commissioner Randy Morris who brought forward an amendment to the plan eliminating the proposed staff addition. Commissioner Carlton Herley agreed, saying he preferred to save some of the proposed budget for future improvements along the 17-92 corridor. "I would prefer to stockpile dollars now to purchase some of the smaller parcels along 17-92 for future development," Herley said. Commissioner Grant Maloy agreed. "I would like to see some of this budget dedicated to improving irrigation and taking care of some of the roadside foliage we have," Maloy said. "I think it is premature to take a large chunk of the budget for a new staff position."

Projects that will be undertaken during the next year include installation of signal light mast arms at

Police arrest five at dogfight

Officials aren't sure of dogs fate

By Dan Ping
Editor

SANFORD — Sanford police busted a dog fighting operation Saturday night in a residential section of the city and arrested five people, including the man police say organized the fight.

Police received a call about 8 p.m. Saturday regarding loud music and noise at 2011 Hartwell Ave. As officers approached the house from the back, they saw a large group of people surrounding a wooden pen where pit bulls were fighting.

Many in the crowd fled from the scene as officers moved in, but police were able to detain five people.

Among those arrested was Arthur L. Brooks, 36, who lived at the home and was charged with three felonies: cruelty to animals, causing animals to fight and running a fighting facility. Brooks was also charged with attending a dogfight, which is a first-degree misdemeanor.

Others charged were Herbert A. Dixon, 33, 803 E. 14th St., Sanford, attending a dogfight, misdemeanor marijuana possession and felony probation violation; David L. King, 26, 1319 Pinehills Road, Orlando, attending a dogfight; Allen J. Herman, 34, 2211 Eiffel Drive, Orlando, attending a dogfight, felony drug (cocaine) possession; and Millard F. Livatt, 33, 330 Campus View Drive, Orlando, attending a dogfight, felony probation violation.

Sheriff, FDOT investigate vandalism at 417 site

By Joe DeSantis
Staff Writer

SANFORD — Motorists traveling along Casa Verde Boulevard and County Road 46A near the Chase Groves subdivision may want to exercise additional caution, especially at night.

The Florida Department of Transportation reports a rash of vandalism to construction barrels on the site that could pose safety threats to the driving public.

"It's been going on for about three months now," explained DOT Public Information Officer Stefany Strong. "Initially we thought damage to the warning barrels was just a prank but now we are seeing indications damage to the barrels is being consistently done on purpose."

Strong said the problem was first noticed by construction crews during early morning hours a few months back. At night, someone began knocking the barrels down. Vandals have since begun not only knocking barrels down, but making a purposeful effort to smash the small blinking warning lots that sit atop them.

"We don't want the knocked down barrels to impede traffic and we don't want the lack of visible warning lights on them around the construction site to lead to the cause of an accident," Strong said. "Those safety barrels provide an important function, especially at night."

Indiana native likes the small town feel of old Lake Mary

By Michelle Jeria
Managing Editor

LAKE MARY — Michael Stephenson wants to bring the "small town" feeling back to downtown. It's why the Indiana native decided to lease office space in the two-story brick building that stands as a landmark for the city's old downtown. In the space that was once Cornerstone Assembly of God on the corner of East Crystal Lake Avenue and Country Club Road, Stephenson has opened Lake Mary's newest flooring business.

"I fell in love with this place when I saw it," Stephenson said. "I grew up in a small town in Indiana, and I saw the old brick building and decided to open my business in it."

Stephenson slowly converted Cornerstone into his American dream. The store, filled with carpet and tile samples, no longer looks like a former church. However, he does like to think the new business has at least one perk from its previous incarnation.

"I guess this place is blessed," he said. Stephenson decided to venture into the flooring business after his discharge from the U.S. Navy more

Hunter volunteers her time to promote historic Sanford

By Michelle Jeria
Managing Editor

SANFORD — Many people cringe at the idea of spending 60 hours a week at work. However, Lyn Hunter loves her job so much, she gladly puts in extra hours at the office and doesn't mind that she doesn't get paid.

Hunter volunteers as the office manager for Sanford Main Street Inc. During busy periods, she may work more than 60 hours a week in the downtown office filing, answering phones and organizing paperwork.

"She's made all the difference in the world to this organization," said Main Street Director Walt Padgett. "If we need her, she's here all week making sure things get done."

Hunter gives one main reason for her dedication and devotion to Main Street — her love for Sanford and its historic downtown.

"It's imperative that I walk through downtown each day," Hunter said. "My husband and I love downtown Sanford, and we stop and talk to people. I'm definitely a people person."

Old-timey downtowns hold a lot of charm for many people. SEMINOLE SUMMARY

A GLANCE AROUND OUR COUNTY

Lonely? Join a club

For most people, belonging to someone or something is the most enjoyable part of life. That's why families have family reunions or holiday get-togethers. That is why many people stay married for years and years. No one wants to be alone.

This feeling is also expressed in joining a club or organization. Being part of a group can be a most rewarding experience. Of course, in some cases, it can also be a very expensive experience.

Nick Pfeiffau

Several years ago, I belonged to a club where yearly dues were what I considered high. On top of that, they fined me for practically everything — my birthday, wedding anniversary, being a minute or two late for a meeting, having to leave a meeting early, not wearing a tie, and several other reasons. Needless to say, much money was spent by the members of this group. On the other side of the coin, the club used this money for scholarships, charitable donations, assistance to those in need of financial help, purchasing and giving away such items as wheelchairs, seeing eye dogs, and other needs. This was how money was raised, and except for the fact that, at the time I was a member, I couldn't afford it, was and still is a very worthwhile organization.

There are many clubs these days. Organizations such as Elks, Moose, Lions, Kiwanis, Rotary, Sons of Italy, Knights of Columbus, Masons, Sons or Daughters of the American Revolution, Sons or Daughters of the Confederacy, and many others. Then there are the military service related organizations such as Fleet Reserve, American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, AmVets, Paralyzed Veterans of America, Retired Officers Association, with auxiliaries in almost every one of these, and forgive me if I've overlooked anyone.

The city of Deltona has state clubs, consisting of people who have moved to the area from up north — such as the New York Club, Michigan Club, Ohio Club, etc.

In almost all of these groups, there are formal meetings to discuss projects, club management, and other matters. There is also time to spend with others who may have similar likes or backgrounds as you. In clubs such as Fleet Reserve, it's an opportunity to sit around with fellow veterans and talk about the good old times. At the Moose lodges, people often discuss MooseHeart and MooseHaven, residential areas for the elderly and orphaned they help to finance.

One other suggestion is the many clubs at our local churches. Again, it is an opportunity to be with people of your own faith and beliefs.

Yes, membership in a club can occupy your time and often cost money, but that money generally goes to help others, with whom you may not have come in contact on your own.

Don't join a club if you just want to take advantage of its membership. Join if you believe your presence would add to the club's well-being. Perhaps look into becoming an officer and able to do even more.

If you're lonely, if you feel you're not doing anything for others and would like to get involved, consider looking into membership. The club and you will both benefit.

Outstanding work

Sanford Mayor Larry Dale, right, awards Johnny Miller with the city's Employee of the Year award. Miller has been employed with the city since 1971. He has worked in the refuse department, streets department and currently in facilities maintenance. He received a plaque of recognition, a designated parking space for a year, an additional one day off from work and a $100 U.S. savings bond. Dale said Miller "always has a kind word to say to everyone," and that "it's been a pleasure to serve" with him.

The age of wisdom

I remember when I was 19 the legal drinking age was 21, so my friends and I had to get fake IDs from wherever, just so we could get into the bars. I never had any success with that approach, since my fake ID said I was a 27-year-old Asian woman.

Next week I'll be having my 55th birthday. It's nothing special, and when I look at my life, I'm a pretty average 55-year-old. I look my age. I have about as many of my faculties left as an average guy my age. And I know a lot of 55-year-old guys, so I'm aware of just how depressing those statements are.

So I'm thinking about using a fake ID again. You may look at me and not be impressed that I'm 55, but what if I could prove to you that I'm 73? You'd think that was pretty special — all the energy, the not completely addled brain, the significant hair retention. I'd be the most amazing 73-year-old you'd ever seen, other than Tina Turner. I'd feel good about your compliments, and you'd feel good thinking you have headroom.

JOB SHARING

Yesterday, I saw a middle-aged couple step up to an information booth to ask for directions. The wife asked all the questions. The husband stood quietly staring at the person behind the counter. When they were done, the wife turned around and stared blankly at the husband. He then told her what the information person had said, and they left.

It struck me that they were acting as a team. She focused on the questions and paid no attention to the answers. He did just the opposite. That's because marriage is the ultimate in job sharing. Yes, you could feed, shelter and clothe yourself all on your own, but isn't it better to share those responsibilities with another person, bringing us closer to zero unemployment and giving you someone else to blame?

Marriage as job sharing is a perfectly natural phenomenon. It starts with conception. That's job sharing at its best — pleasant working conditions and extremely short shifts.

AM I GETTING OLD?

If you're the kind of person who tends to live in a fantasy world, you may not be aware that you are old. This can lead to a great deal of embarrassment for you and all the other members of your motorcycle club. So here is a brief list of ways to tell that you are old:

- The oldies radio station is playing songs from your children's era.
- When you're at a nude beach, people think you still have your clothes on.
- You comb your hair with the palm of your hand.
- If anybody wants you to stand for the national anthem, they have to give you 10 minutes' notice.
- Everybody passes you on the

TIP OF THE ICEBERG

I know you're expected to tip every time you go to a restaurant or any time somebody carries your suitcase, but I have a few problems with that.

Now I don't want you to think I'm just cheap. (I am, but I don't want you to think it.) No, this has more to do with unfair business practices than parsimony. I don't like to tip when I have no choice. It reminds me of when I was a kid being forced to kiss my aunt. Tipping at a restaurant when you got poor service is like taking your worst employee and giving him a raise instead of a pink slip. And the bellman who wrestles the suitcase out of your hand doesn't deserve a tip; he should be charged with theft.

And this standard 15 percent thing is hurting everybody. I'd rather not tip at all when I get bad service, and then tip like the Sultan of Brunei when I get looked after properly.

OPINION

The Cabinet President-Elect Bush keeps campaign promise

President-elect Bush has now just about completed his Cabinet selections, and it is time to acknowledge that, collectively, they add up to a stunning performance. This relatively young man, with no personal experience of government outside of Texas, has assembled a team that combines formidable expertise with solid conservatism, and assigned it to implement, under his general direction, the policies that will characterize his administration. Studying his choices, one cannot help suspect that George W. Bush is going to surprise a lot of people by turning his supposedly "mandate-less" administration into a powerful instrument of leadership and change.

William
Rusher

Perhaps the most striking thing about those choices is that, for all their diversity, they are all people spectacularly qualified for their jobs. Colin Powell and Condoleezza Rice are black, but it is also, quite independently of that fact, hard to think of anyone more capable of discharging their particular assignments. Linda Chavez is both Hispanic and a woman, but her real strengths are her quiet ability and high intelligence. What a contrast to the Renos, Espys and Albrights of the Clinton years!

The Democrats, without control of either the White House or Congress, are predictably discovering the virtues of bipartisanship. But their real intention is revealed by their decision to "Bork" Mr. Bush's nominee for attorney general, Senator John Ashcroft. This notably honorable and decent man must be made to pay for his staunch conservatism, so the job of smearing him as a latter-day George Wallace is already under way, and represents a discouraging comeback for the supposedly outmoded "politics of personal destruction."

As for the direction of the new administration, we are still in the early days, but already some trends seem clear. We are forever being told (usually as a warning to the Bush team) that "the world has changed." And so, in some important respects, it has — above all in the increasing impact of global economic trends on national policy. (One of the most eloquent analysts of this important change was New York Times columnist Tom Friedman, until he deteriorated under the pressures of the recent campaign, into just another liberal flack.)

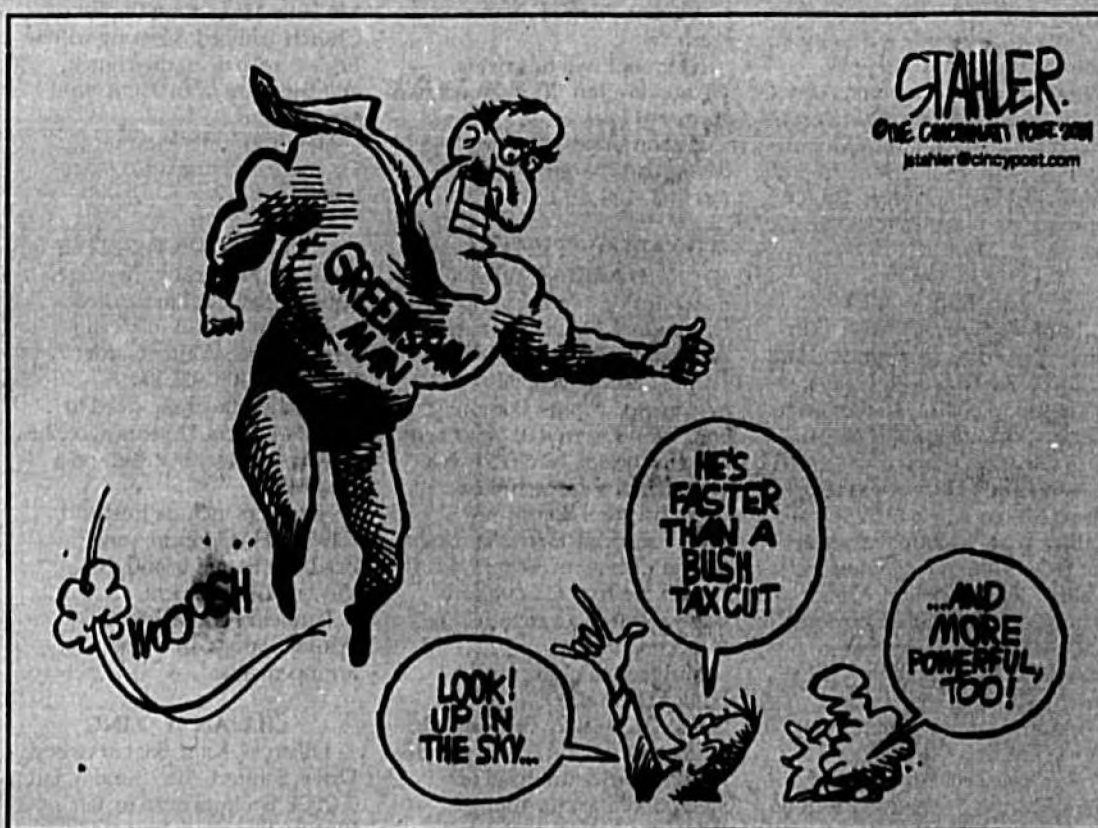

But the chief new international political development has been the growing conviction, on the part of the United Nations, that it possesses a monopoly of world virtue, coupled with the existence of an oversupply of military power in the hands of various Good Guys, including the United States. In the Clinton-Albright view, this entitled the United States, under cover of the U.N. and NATO, to go barging around the world toppling "dictators" and "liberating" captive peoples who sought self-determination. This represented a tremendous change in American policy, which had previously refused to risk the lives of our fighting men and women unless some American "vital interest" was clearly at stake.

In the light of comments already on record from Colin Powell, Condoleezza Rice and others, we can expect with some confidence that the Bush administration will reject the Clinton-Albright policy and restore the test of a "vital interest" as a precondition for the deployment of American armed forces abroad. Similarly, the designation of Donald Rumsfeld as Defense Secretary makes it clear that a sound missile defense, with which his name is closely associated, will be one of the Pentagon's major goals.

Domestically too, certain trends are already apparent. It is preposterous to suggest that John Ashcroft, as attorney general, would not enforce the existing laws protecting people entering abortion clinics, but at least the Justice Department would no longer serve as a pressure group for racial preferences repeatedly rejected by the voters. Wisconsin governor Tommy Thompson, who won national attention for his dramatic reductions in the state's welfare rolls, can be depended on to try to achieve comparable successes nationally. And the AFL-CIO's John Sweeney, who led his unions into their disastrous alliance with Al Gore, can hardly hope to find, in Linda Chavez, a Labor Secretary as tame as the one he was counting on. No wonder he is planning to slaughter her politically if he can.

Above all, one senses in the president-elect himself a quiet determination to deliver exactly the kind of government he called for during the campaign. One of the participants in a recent conference at the Bush ranch marveled afterward that Mr. Bush himself "was the most conservative person in the room." It's a comforting thought.

Simpson relives WWII tale of two scouts

As a story-telling U.S. senator, Alan Simpson was famous for tales as tall as he stands himself: 6 foot, 7.

But when I caught up with the 69-year-old in his native Cody, Wyo., last week, he was ready with a wild one every inch the truth.

It was about a couple of Boy Scouts back in the time of World War II. "One week, the Scoutmaster told us we were going out to the 'Jap camp.' That's what we called it back then."

He was talking about the giant internment camp where 11,000 Japanese-Americans were being detained for the duration of World War II.

Simpson and his fellow Scouts were stunned by the idea. Why would anyone, much less a group of kids, dare enter this forbidding place surrounded by guard posts "with all the guns pointed inward?"

The Scoutmaster stood his ground. "Because these're Boy Scouts in there."

"We're not going," the Scouts complained. "It's dangerous!"

"They're Americans just like us!" the grown-up persisted, as if that was all that needed to be said in these angry, nervous months just after Pearl Harbor.

"He was a man ahead of his time," Simpson recalled from the vantage point of six decades later.

What young Alan and his pals discovered beyond those forbidding guardhouses was a group of kids just like themselves, even reading the same comic books and the same Scout handbook.

"There was one particularly spirited guy I just kind of linked up with," Simpson said. "He showed me around the tarpaper shack he and his family were living in. We tied knots, did other things together."

On a second visit, Simpson and this other 11-year-old joined forces to dig a drainage system that managed to send the rain-water rushing right into their own tent. Their later reunions would result in far more successful partnerships.

In 1971, Simpson read in the newspaper that a fellow with a strangely familiar name had just been elected mayor of San Jose, Calif. He wrote and asked if it was the kid he'd met in Wyoming during World War II. It was, the Honorable Norm Mineta wrote back.

By the end of the '70s, both men were serving together in the U.S. Congress.

"We immediately looked each other up," Simpson remembers fondly. Although they came from different parties, they became personal friends and, on at least one occasion, legislative allies. That was when the senator from Wyoming helped the California Democrat win passage of a bill compensating Japanese-Americans for what had been done to them during World War II.

Last Tuesday, Norm Mineta, Democrat, was nominated by president-elect George W. Bush to become a member of his cabinet. And no one is happier than his fellow Boy Scout who tied knots with him 60 years ago. Simpson says, "Some outfit wanted to do a movie on us. We said, 'Oh, get out of here! We didn't do this for the movies.'"

Affirmative action strengthens U.S. higher education

Forty years ago, Georgia's political leaders mounted a bitter campaign to defy desegregation efforts by keeping two black teen-agers out of the state's flagship school, the University of Georgia (UGA). Then-Gov. Ernest Vandiver issued a defiant vow that not one black student would attend a white school.

Benighted UGA officials told Charlayne Hunter, a transfer student, that she could not enter because they could not convert her academic credits. They told Hamilton Holmes Jr. he could not be admitted because he had once received a traffic ticket.

But Georgia officials were overruled by a federal judge, and Hunter and Holmes arrived on campus on Jan. 7, 1961. Though they were jeered, ostracized and threatened, each went on to graduate. Hunter (now Hunter-Gault) is currently a South Africa-based correspondent for CNN. Holmes was a distinguished Atlanta physician until his death in 1995.

In the decades since Holmes and Hunter battled Jim Crow, UGA has worked to overcome its legacy of discrimination. Indeed, Hunter-Gault is scheduled to deliver the keynote address during this month's celebration of the 40th anniversary of desegregation. And, like many colleges and universities across the country, UGA has instituted a modest program of affirmative action in its admissions, which has boosted African-American enrollment to 6 percent.

Given the disgraceful history of discrimination in this country, such affirmative action programs ought to be widely applauded. But with the nomination of John Ashcroft as attorney general, UGA and other progressive universities can expect to find their admissions policies under attack from the nation's highest law enforcement officer.

Ashcroft, a rigid conservative with a poor record on civil rights causes, has been an outspoken critic of affirmative action for years. At the very least, his views will lend moral support to conservative groups that are on a crusade to revoke affirmative action in college admissions from Georgia to Michigan. At worst, he could use the considerable resources of the attorney general's office to provide legal support to those same groups.

Given the conversion of several of Georgia's political leaders to a more progressive stance, there is considerable irony in the Bush administration's hostility toward affirmative action. While blacks used to look to the federal government for relief from the racist policies of state and local officials, many Georgia leaders now offer an enlightened view on affirmative action.

With the backing of Democratic Gov. Roy Barnes, UGA president Michael Adams has vowed to fight all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court, if necessary, to protect his admissions policy. Even state Sen.

Eric Johnson, leader of the Senate's Republican minority, supports UGA's modest affirmative action program.

If he is confirmed as attorney general, Ashcroft should have a talk with those prominent Georgians before he decides to fight affirmative action in college admissions. They could remind him that the legacy of centuries of discrimination doesn't disappear in a generation or two. They could point out that UGA is not admitting black students who are unqualified to do the work. They could provide a roster of black UGA graduates who have become doctors, lawyers, teachers, scientists, business owners. And they could remind Ashcroft that a diverse student body is in keeping with UGA's efforts to become a prestigious academic institution.

If the Bush administration means to provide educational opportunity for all Americans, it won't fight a college affirmative action program that helps that cause.

LIFE STYLE

A word to the wise for teens fooling around

DEAR ABBY: While cleaning out some drawers, I discovered a column of yours I had clipped years ago. I'm now saving it for my great-grandchildren. Your column has helped lots of people, and perhaps this item can save other teen-agers many heartaches and problems if you print it again. Thanks.

A GREAT-GRANDMA FROM INDIANA

DEAR GREAT-GRANDMA: You're right. It contains information every teen-ager should know — so here it is for young people who don't think things through before they do "everything but" or become sexually active.

DEAR ABBY: I weep every time I read a letter from a pregnant teen-ager pleading for help. So few people know that the sex act need not be completed for a female to become pregnant.

I was a medic in the service. When I got married, my ward doctor loaned me a medical book that he'd used in counseling young people. From that book, I learned that when a man becomes excited, a few drops of neutralizing fluid are released to neutralize any uric acid in the male urinary canal. It is nature's way of clearing a safe path for the delicate sperm cells to pass through at termination of the sex act.

Lab tests have shown that occasionally a few sperm cells are present in the fluid. This occurs most frequently in teen-agers, since that is when the male is at the peak of fertility.

Abby, please warn young people that if they plan to go beyond kissing and holding hands, they should take all necessary measures a couple would or should take in preventing pregnancy. "Fooling around a little" can be as dangerous as going all the way.

I am a father and a grandfather who is concerned about our youth, so if this information can help someone, you have my permission to edit it any way you like.

Federal Consumer Protection has confirmed the accuracy of the fuel saving described in this advertisement.

Device May Increase Gas Mileage Significantly

BOSTON - National Fuelsaver Corp. of Boston has developed a low cost automotive accessory called the Platinum Gas Saver which is guaranteed to increase gas mileage significantly while meeting all emission standards.

With a simple connection to a vacuum line, the Gas Saver adds microscopic quantities of platinum to the air-fuel mixture entering the engine.

Platinum has the unique ability to make non-burning fuel burn. With platinum in the flame zone, you increase the percentage of fuel burning in the engine from 68% of each gallon to 90% of each gallon, a 22% increase. Since unburnt fuel leaving an engine is pollution, this 22% of each gallon would normally burn when it reaches the platinum of the catalytic converter.

Unfortunately, the converter's platinum burns this fuel in the tail-pipe, where the heat and energy produced from burning this fuel cannot be harnessed to drive your vehicle.

But when the Gas Saver adds platinum to engine combustion, 22% more of each gallon burns inside the engine so that 22% fewer gallons are required to drive the same distance.

After studying this process for five years, the government concluded: "Independent testing shows greater fuel savings with the Platinum Gas Saver than the 22% claimed by the developer."

In addition to this government study, the Gas Saver has received patents for cleaning out carbon and raising octane, making premium fuel unnecessary for most vehicles.

Joel Robinson, the developer, commented: "We have sold almost a half million Gas Savers. To our surprise, as many people buy the Gas Saver because it extends engine life (by cleaning out the abrasive carbon deposits) as buy it to increase gas mileage or to raise octane."

For further information call:

The government studied fuel saving test data on vehicles made by several auto makers using the Gas Saver. This is the data they produced from a fleet of 15 identical 5-liter vehicles.

Crape Myrtle's versatility perfect for Central Florida's warm weather

Crape Myrtle (Lagerstroemia sp.) is one of our most versatile landscape plants for sunny locations.

Al Ferrer

The large variety of size and colors available, its long blooming period, and ability to grow in nearly any soil condition makes the crape myrtle an easy to care for addition to any landscape. They provide landscape interest year-round. Flowering begins as early as May in some cultivars and continues into fall. Leaves turn yellow, orange, or red in autumn.

The Crape Myrtle then becomes a living sculpture with attractively gnarled character and smooth bark varying in color from cream to cinnamon and brown. Crape Myrtle is native to Southeast Asia, China, and Japan.

It was introduced to the southern United States almost 200 years ago and has since become a standard in southern gardens ("Lilac of the South"). Crape Myrtle derives its common name from its crepe like crinkled flower petals and the resemblance of its leaves to the true myrtle.

Care and Culture

Full sun is necessary for best flowering and crown development. Locations that allow free air movement help avoid development of powdery mildew.

Crape Myrtle tolerates a wide range of soil types but prefers loamy soils with a slightly acid pH (5.0-6.5). They do poorly in wet soils. Container grown plants are best added to the landscape in early summer when actively growing. Transplants should be moved in the winter when the plant is dormant.

Prepare the planting site by digging a hole as deep but one foot wider than the root ball. If the plant is root bound make several inch cuts in the rootball to promote new outward root growth.

Plants should be mulched to a depth of 3 to 4 inches, but be sure to keep mulch several inches away from the trunk to prevent development of root rot.

Though very drought tolerant once established, Crape Myrtles should be watered regularly for the first few weeks to aid in establishment. Fertility requirements are minimal as these plants usually derive nutrients from fertilizers used on lawns.

For young Crape Myrtles three applications per year of a low analysis nitrogen fertilizer such as 4-6-8 in March, July, and October is recommended to stimulate growth.

High nitrogen fertilizer will encourage leaf growth at the expense of flowering.

Pruning

Crape Myrtles generally require a minimum of pruning. If using your Crape Myrtle as a tree you should remove the "suckers" that develop along the lower stems.

Tip pruning to remove spent flower heads will promote heavier blooming. Small twiggy growth should be removed from the lower portions to improve aesthetics and thinned in the canopy to facilitate air movement.

Pruning may be done anytime after the leaves have fallen but optimally in late winter before new growth appears.

If pruning is done too early in the fall new growth may be promoted and killed by a freeze. Crape Myrtle should never be pruned hard on an annual or regular basis.

Severe pruning induces excess vegetative growth, basal sprouting, spoils branch structure, and results in larger but much fewer flowers. Do not remove branches larger than the diameter of a pencil.

Varieties for Central Florida
Trees over 20 feet: Natchez (white), Tuskegee (dark pink), Muskogee (lavender), Dallas Red (dark red).

Tree 10-20 feet: Osage (pink, blooms well), Apache (lavender, scented), Slout (pink, good for narrow spaces).

Medium shrub 5-10 feet: Acoma (white, small grey-green leaves), Ficus (pink, early bloomer), Tonto (best bright red), Near East (peach, oldest cultivar).

Shrub 3-5 feet: Delta Blush (pink, mounded 2 feet), New Orleans (rich purple, low spreading, good hanging basket), and Victor (best rich red, upright).

Pests

Crape Myrtle is one of the most pest-free ornamental landscape plants available. Primary pests are powdery mildew and the crape myrtle aphid that promotes the growth of sooty mold. Selecting resistant varieties and planting in sunny locations with good airflow will significantly decrease the likelihood of these problems.

Sprays of insecticidal soaps and horticultural oils will control the aphids and will also help to loosen and remove sooty mold.

Rotary Gridiron Classic is Saturday

The Rotary Gridiron Classic presented by TYCO has announced the rosters for the Team Florida all-stars and the Team USA all-stars that will take the field at the Florida Citrus Bowl in Orlando for the third annual college football all-star game that matches the best of the Sunshine State against the best of the US.

The game will be televised nationally by ESPN 2.

The all-star classic, which has served as a showcase and a springboard for future NFL stars such as Daunte Culpepper, Mike Anderson, Darren Howard, Brad Muster, Jajuan Dawson and Ron Dixon.

In all, more than 150 players from the previous two Rotary Gridiron Classics have either been drafted or signed as free agents by NFL clubs.

The Rotary Gridiron Classic was established in 1996 based on the unique concept of Florida's top collegiate football players (Team Florida) taking on the rest of the country's top players (Team USA) in the Florida Citrus Bowl in Orlando.

Current college players from Florida, FSU, Central Florida, Miami, Florida A&M, Bethune-Cookman or South Florida as well as players who prepped at Florida high schools but played college ball outside the state are eligible to play for Team Florida.

The primary benefactor of the Classic's proceeds is the Buoniconti Fund, which is the national fund-raising arm of the Miami Project to Cure Paralysis. Other proceeds from the game benefit the Rotary Foundation charities and Florida Citrus Sports charities.

Since inception, the Buoniconti Fund, Rotary International and Florida Citrus Sports charities have benefited by more than $900,000 as a result of the game's existence.

The third annual Rotary Gridiron Classic will once again be held in the Florida Citrus Bowl on January 13, at 1 pm EST. The game will be televised nationally by ESPN 2.

The all-star game's series currently stands at 1-1. Game MVP, future first-round draft pick, and current Minnesota Viking starting quarterback Daunte Culpepper Team Florida to a 17-9 victory over Team USA in the inaugural Classic. In the rematch, Tulane wide receiver and Cleveland Browns third-round selection Jajuan Dawson used a MVP performance to give Team USA a 21-14 win over Team Florida.

Designated by the NFL Players Association (NFLPA) as their official all-star game, the Rotary Gridiron Classic is played under NFL rules and staffed by former NFL coaches, including Lindy Infante (1999 & 2000), Buddy Ryan (2000) and Chuck Noll (1999).

Overall, more than 130 players who have appeared and participated in the previous two Rotary Gridiron Classics have been either drafted or signed contracts with NFL clubs.

The Rotary Gridiron Classic, a project of Florida Rotary Clubs, was among the deserving organizations in the Greater Central Florida region to receive awards from the Walt Disney World Company for its significant and unique contributions to the community. As part of the award, the Rotary Gridiron Classic received a $3,000 gift from Disney.

For more information on the Rotary Gridiron Classic, contact Steve Hogan at Florida Citrus Sports at 407-423-2476.

The all-star squads will practice at Disney's Wide World of Sports Complex from Jan. 8 through 11. The team rosters are:

Unknown burns

Sanford police were called to Angelo's Pizza after a homeless man, Donnie Cook, came into the restaurant complaining of burns to his right lower leg. Cook told officers he had slept the night before in a wooded area near the Park & Shop Store on Sanford Avenue and woke up with his leg on fire. Officers found bedding in the area matching the description, but found no signs of fire. A fire and rescue unit was called to the scene and they transported Cook to the burn unit at Orlando Regional Medical Center.

Dogfight

Cleo Cohen, public information officer for the Sanford Police Department, said Saturday night's arrests were unusual because of the location of the dogfighting pen.

"This is the first time this has occurred in a highly residential neighborhood," Cohen said. "We get isolated complaints about dogfights but it's usually in a rural area."

However, Clay Hartsoe, who lives just a few houses down from where the arrests were made, claims dog fighting has occurred in the neighborhood for several years.

"Animal control has known about this problem for four or five years," Hartsoe said. "They came out here and cleaned this thing out back then. What happens, though, is the people take the dogs away for a while and then they bring them back. It's been going on for a long time."

Seminole County Animal Control Officer Mike Whittmer said while he remembers complaints several years ago about barking dogs in the neighborhood, he said there were no allegations of fighting dogs.

"A guy who lived across from Mr. Hartsoe had three dogs that barked a lot, but I don't remember any fighting dogs," Whittmer said. "I believe he had a German Shepherd, some kind of basset dog, and I don't recall the third one."

"We used to have a lot of barking dog complaints in that area, that's why I'm surprised no one reported this," Whittmer added.

"Somebody had to know what was going on. Maybe they were just scared."

Whittmer said animal control took possession of 18 dogs, all of which he hopes are eventually turned over to animal control.

"I've got a meeting (Wednesday) with the state attorney's office, and I'd like to make sure this guy doesn't get the dogs back," Whittmer said. "What would happen if we received the dogs, I really don't know at this point. The three puppies we could adopt out, but that's going to be hard because I've had about 30 people call me today wanting to adopt. We'll probably have to hold a lottery."

Whittmer said the adult dogs present an even more difficult problem because of the potential liability to the county. The dogs have been friendly to staff members, and don't appear to be aggressive towards humans; however, Whittmer said the dogs could be provoked by other dogs or small children.

"These dogs are not the safest animals to have around the house with small children," Whittmer said. "It's a real dilemma. I can understand people not wanting to put the dogs to sleep, but if we did adopt these dogs out and any problems occurred, who do you think they're coming after — ultimately, the county."

Whittmer said the dogs are currently receiving medical attention, including four adult dogs and one puppy that were taken to Murphy's Veterinarian Clinic for additional medical attention. Susan Wayne, a veterinarian at the clinic said all five dogs should be OK. She said of the four adult dogs, one was female and probably pregnant.

The dogs were taken to the animal clinic so their wounds could be cleaned up. One male had punctured his tongue with its tooth, another's face was completely swollen.

"The new wounds were on top of the old wounds," she said.

The puppy was not involved in the dog fighting but was suffering from pneumonia.

Wayne said while this was the first time the county brought in dogs involved in dog fighting, she believes it is a common practice within Seminole County.

Whittmer agreed. "(Brooks) will go right back to doing this again," he said. "Maybe that's not fair. Maybe he will change, but in reality, that's probably not going to happen."

Managing Editor Michelle Joris contributed to this article.

"It's a real dilemma. I can understand people not wanting to put the dogs to sleep, but if we did adopt these dogs out and any problems occurred, who do you think they're coming after? Ultimately, the county."

Black Journalists meet at Sanford airport

The city of Sanford and the Sanford Airport hosted the December meeting of the Central Florida Association of Black Journalists and Broadcasters. The evening consisted of a brief program, food and a tour of the new airport terminal. Among those attending the meeting were Melissa Green, Chester Glover, Stefany Strong, Clarence Natto, Nikki Frenney, Sanford Deputy City Manager Roger Dixon, Carolyn Fennell, Sanford Community Development Director Charles Rowe, Kenneth Gilleylen and Phyllis Gibson.

Hunter

In the '70s, the Alabama native spent several years living in Sanford. Hunter returned to the city several years ago while on vacation with her husband. The visit became the catalyst in the couple's decision to relocate to the shores of Lake Monroe.

Hunter, who retired due to a disability, has become a familiar face in Sanford's downtown area. Many people know her as the woman with the "If this were an F-16, I'd be home by now" bumper sticker on her motorized wheelchair.

The bumper sticker was one of the first things Padgett noticed about Hunter.

"I saw it, and I thought 'Gee, she's got to be an interesting person."

The Main Street director eventually met Hunter and asked her if she would like to volunteer for the organization. In May, the community group got its first full-time volunteer office manager.

"When Walt asked me to volunteer, I really got fired up," Hunter said. "It's something I can do, and it's a way that I can get involved in the city and the community."

Hunter wants Main Street to be the most informative and most friendly source for what's going on in Sanford. Her husband, Bob, also helps out by creating and updating the organization's Web site, located at www.sanford-mainstreet.com.

mainstreet.com

"This is a great place to work," she said. "The best part of it is knowing sometime during the day I'll see a face I've never seen before."

As for her stay in Sanford, Hunter has no plans of leaving. "There must be something in the water in Sanford that seeps into you that can't get out," she said.

Hunter also encourages others to volunteer for Main Street. The organization is currently looking for people to help out in its office, located in downtown Sanford.

For more information about Main Street or volunteer opportunities, call 407-322-5600.

Stephenson

than 15 years ago. He began working for Color Tile in southern California.

"There wasn't much in San Diego for an old Navy guy to do," he said. "Actually, I tried to get out of the flooring business numerous times, but I kept getting back into it. It must be inevitable for me to stay with it."

He continued living on the West Coast until his wife started getting homesick for her hometown of Ormond Beach. About two years ago, the couple decided to leave the rainy state of Oregon and return to Central Florida.

While driving through Lake Mary's old downtown area, Stephenson decided it was time to stop working for someone else and start being his own boss. He and his partner, Larry Perry, signed the lease for the space at 181 N. Country Club Road and began renovating the old building, including the newly tiled entranceway.

"I wanted to bring back the quality of customer service to the flooring business that is lacking in Orlando," Stephenson said. "And, this is a perfect place to do it." Stephenson said he hopes others will relocate to Lake Mary's old downtown, and he is encouraged the city is currently planning a downtown renovation project.

"I'd like to see this become a gas lamp-like district," he said. "It's got the potential for that. I think a lot of people are tired of strip malls. It's time to bring back nostalgia."

Commissioners also Tuesday unanimously authorized the Community Development Office staff to administer a pilot housing reconstruction project including the issuance of a Request for Proposals (RFP) for housing reconstruction to assist very low income owner-occupants.

In November 1999 the County issued an RFP to select and agency to administer and implement the County's Reconstruction Program. The focus of the program is to replace dilapidated housing with new units. Assistance is offered only to very low income occupants via a conditional grant, normally a 15-year recapture lien.

The Original RFP request at the time drew proposals from only two builders. Demetree Builders, Inc. was initially chosen but ultimately withdrew from the contract negotiations, citing the difficulty in locating eligible low income owner-occupant candidates, its desire to build five units in close geographical proximity to each other and its lack of expertise necessary to administer state housing programs and implementation requirements.

Staff recommendations now call for restructuring the new RFP to separate the household qualifying process from the actual reconstruction process. The Board approved a "pilot project" to reconstruct 10 to 12 units in one or more of the County's low income target areas.

Vandalism

Just last Thursday a total of 14 of 20 barrels put in place by construction crews were found damaged the next day.

"We were notified Friday that this was going on," said Steve Olson, spokesman for the Seminole County Sheriff's Office. "According to the construction company, this went from being a nuisance to being something that was reportable."

Olson said the sheriff's office will increase patrols in the area in hopes of eliminating the problem.

"This may have been a situation over the holidays because students were out of school,"

Olson said. "The increased patrols should help."

The DOT is asking anyone with knowledge regarding the person or persons responsible for the construction site vandalism to contact the Seminole County Sheriff's office or to contact the Public Information Office of the DOT at 407-832-8655.

Worthington resigns

By Dean Smith
 Sports Editor

SANFORD — Jim Worthington, who returned Seminole High School football to the elite level in the State of Florida, resigned abruptly on Monday, leaving behind a program that he had directed into the state playoffs in three of the past four years.

Worthington coached the Fighting Seminoles to a 7-5 record and an At-Large bid into the Florida High School Activities Association State Players, and the Tribe proved their worthiness in the first round, crushing Palm Beach Gardens High School, on the road, 41-16.

Worthington informed Principal Karen Coleman that he was leaving to be more involved with his family while his wife pursues her doctoral degree. Coleman had high praise for Worthington as a coach and an instructor and said that a search committee would be formed immediately to find a successor.

Worthington, who played linebacker at Duke University for current University of Florida head coach Steve Spurrier, started his coaching career as an assistant at Taylor High School in Pierson before taking on the job of building the program from the ground up at new Pine Ridge High School.

After two years at Pine Ridge positive-minded coach came to Seminole and turned a Tribe team that went 3-7 in 1996 into an 8-3 squad that was second in the district.

Seminole then went 7-3, 8-3 and 7-5, only missing the playoffs when the team went 7-3, giving Worthington a 30-14 record in three seasons in arguably the toughest Class 5A district in the state.

A star emerges

On a night to honor ex-star McIntosh, Kesckes steals the spotlight

By Dean Smith

LAKE MARY — Zolie Kesckes showed Don McIntosh that he wasn't the only soccer star at Lake Mary's Don T. Reynolds Stadium Friday night.

The former Ram All-American and current Duke University star was on hand to have his jersey retired during a halftime ceremony and he got to see first hand the next Lake Mary star in action.

Kesckes, senior forward, scored all three of the Rams' goals, two in the second half that broke a 1-1 tie, as the hosts claimed an important SAC victory.

Kesckes then did it again Monday night, scoring three more goals as Lake Mary broke a 0-0 halftime deadlock to defeat visiting Deltona, 4-0.

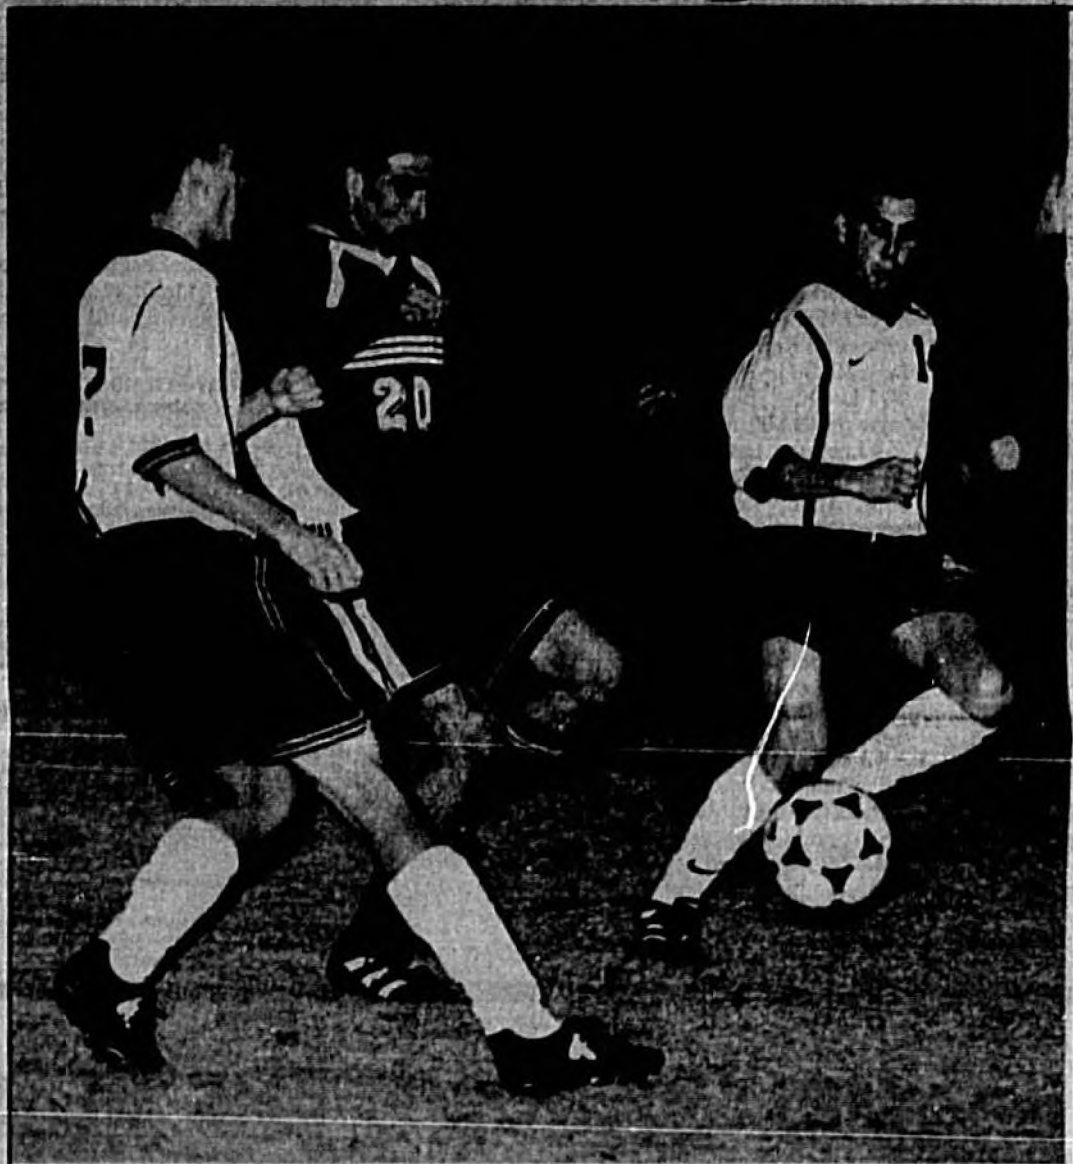

Tarek Jawad scored the other goal in the victory over the Wolves, while Devin Esterbrook had three assists in the two wins. Samer Jawad chipped in with two assists, while Tres Loch helped out on another as the Rams improved to 14-2-2 on the season.

McIntosh was honored for being both an NSCCA and Adidas All-American in 1999, a member of the FACA All-State Team in both 1998 and 1999, and was the Gatorade Player of the Year in Florida in 1999.

He also holds the Lake Mary school record for assists in a season with 22 in 1998 and was a four-year Letterman when he graduated in 1999.

At Duke University, McIntosh made the All-ACC Tournament Team as a freshman and will leave the North Carolina power in 2003 with four letters.

LAKE MARY — The undefeated Oviedo High School basketball team celebrated being ranked No. 1 in the FSWA Class 6A State Poll this week by humbling Lake Mary on its home floor Monday night, 111-52.

The victory was the third in four nights for the Lions, who clobbered Winter Springs, 83-58, at home on Friday and then traveled to Lakeland to defeat Haines City, 64-51, in the Lakeland Classic at The Lakeland Center, where the State Tournament will be held in less than two months.

Marcus Hayes scored a game-high 24 points to lead five Lions into double figures as they used what has become a patented fast start, taking a 34-11 lead after one period and 58-20 at halftime over the Rams.

Kyle Simpkins (15), Darrell Freeman and Shawn Witherspoon (who led Oviedo with 23 against the Bears, both had 12) and Grant Herron (11) were the other Oviedo players in double figures as it improved to 17-0 on the season.

Francis Lizardo (16) and Trevor Berryhill (12) led Lake Mary, which is still looking for its first win of the season.

For Winter Springs on Friday, Tony Bell was the top scorer with 25 points.
