Chamber to hold plant sale

SANFORD — The Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce Beautification Committee will be conducting its annual plant sale this Saturday, at the corner of Sanford Avenue and East First Street from 10 am until 5 pm.

It is believed this will be the fifteenth year that the chamber has worked on this specific fund raising project.

While most of the past events have featured only azaleas, the Chamber's Beautification Chairman Kevin Schweizer said that in addition to an outstanding selection of azaleas this year, crepe myrtles will also be available for purchase.

In addition to offering the plants for sale, the Chamber will also have Master Gardeners from the Seminole County Agricultural Extension Service on hand to give purchasers some expert advice if needed, on planting and after-planting care.

Schweizer said, "One of the goals of the sale is to help provide the people in this area with plants to help them conduct their own beautification projects which will help improve the appearances of not only homes but neighborhoods and cities."

The assorted azaleas can be purchased for $2.50 each and the crepe myrtles are available for $5 each. Schweizer said they will have about 400 crepe myrtle plants available in a variety of colors. Most of the azaleas are already in bloom and ready for planting.

The money derived from this annual plant sale will be used to help the work being done by the Scenic Improvement Board, with projects that include a beautification project at the Sanford Civic Center and hopefully several other local area improvement projects.

Festival arts and fun

Sanford's Ft. Mellon Park annual event's focal point

Puff, the dragon will be one of the children's fun areas during the festival.

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A big weekend is expected at Sanford's lakefront area tomorrow and Sunday because of the annual St. John's River Festival, sponsored by the Sanford-Seminole Art Association.

The two-day event will be complete with boating, live music and dancing, arts and crafts shows, and entertainment for the children as well as adults.

One of the highlights of the festival this year will be the Spring Survival Sailing Regatta to be held on Lake Monroe. The Lake Monroe Sailing Association is the sponsor of this event with the cooperation of the festival coordinators. Sailors from various parts of the state will be competing for trophies and prizes in several categories. An expected 40 monohull yachts are expected to be entered in the two days of sailing competition, with an estimated 50 additional entrants in the sailboard competition events.

The festival, to be held at Fort Mellon Park, will have approximately 120 artists and craftsmen displaying their goods for sale as well as in competition for prizes which will be awarded Saturday evening.

One of the highlights of the event for the children will be the appearance of Puff, the dragon, which stands 40 feet high, and is 40 feet wide. Rather than being something to just look at, Puff is something to climb into and bounce around on. It has been described as one of the main features during several of its past appearances at events around the state. There will also be clowns and face painting for the youngsters.

Janis Clary McGee, Chairperson of the St. John's River Festival said, "We are planning to conduct a special tribute to our troops in the Persian Gulf War during the both days of the festivities."

Continuous live entertainment is planned for the Fort Mellon Park area of the festival, provided by a group called the All American Sing-Along. There will also be various types of song and dance entertainment that ranges from jazz to country and western. These events will be located at the stage area which will be near the shuffleboard courts at the park.

This will be the first year of sponsorship of this event by the Sanford-Seminole Art Association. The annual event has been held for the past five years as this type of a presentation. Previously, it was held much later in the year and was known as the annual Fall for Art.

This year's festivities will get underway both Saturday and Sunday, March 2 and 3, at 10 am, and continue until 5 pm in the afternoon both days.

Huge homecoming parties planned

Across America troop welcomings to be expansive

By LESLIE DREYFOUS
AP National Writer

America's troops are in for the biggest party in years.

"It's gonna be a helluva welcoming home," says Jim Schroder, president of the Chamber of Commerce in Oceanside, Calif. "They will not be forgotten, I guarantee you that."

Parades are planned from Blount County, Texas to Rockland County, N.Y. Rallies are in store from Boston to Hawaii. The nation is enjoying a rush of pride in the first tentative hours of peace in the Persian Gulf.

The outpouring promises a far brighter homecoming than troops returning from the Vietnam War received two decades ago.

"I think what we did to the Vietnam veterans was a shame to America," said City Commissioner Abner Orick, who hopes to stage the largest parade ever in Dayton, Ohio. "I don't want anything like that to ever happen again."

Many said now is the chance for some healing.

"No matter where they look, they're going to see 'welcome home,'" said Kris Tourtellotte, a Vietnam veteran who remembers what it was like in 1969.

Tourtellotte hopes to decorate the airport, bus station, train station and the homes of soldiers from Rochester, N.Y.

It could take many months to withdraw all 537,000 U.S. troops from the Middle East. But starting in Washington, D.C., where talk at the Pentagon was of a parade down Pennsylvania Avenue, people on the home front said they were ready.

"I think the American public is going to need very little advice or prompting. They're going to give these troops a hero's welcome," said U.S. Sen. Bob Kerrey, D-Nebr., who

Sanford support group's plans shaping up for local troops

SANFORD — They cried together, they worried together, they waited together, they prayed endlessly together.

And now — it's official — they will celebrate the homecoming of their loved ones from war together.

The Sanford Operation Desert Storm Support Group, a group of more than 130 families of military men and women serving in the Persian Gulf, will continue weekly meetings even if the ceasefire announced last night holds, organizer Judy Osborn said. The group has been meeting every Monday at 7 p.m. at the American Legion Hall, 2874 Sanford Ave., Sanford, since just before the war started Jan. 16.

Even if families decide they no longer need the support of other military families, Osborn said, the group will continue meeting as a committee to plan a massive homecoming celebration for local troops.

The support group, through fundraisers and donations, has already raised about $1,500 to go toward the celebration, which will include a parade and a barbecue at the American Legion. About $3,000 will be needed for the affair, Osborn said.

Most of the families who attend the support group meetings didn't know each other before the Persian Gulf crisis began. Many of them now write to children or spouses of their new friends. Veralynn Williams said, so the homecoming festivities will be their first chance to meet soldiers they have known only through letters and photo-

Lake Mary growth plan finished after three years, $90,000

By LAURA L. SULLIVAN
Herald staff writer

LAKE MARY — After more than three years of work and nearly $90,000 in consultant fees, Lake Mary last night sent its comprehensive plan on its way to Tallahassee.

The 20-year blueprint of growth is required by every Florida city and county under the state Growth Management Act of 1985. The plan is to be submitted to the state Department of Community Affairs by April 1.

City commissioners last night leafed through the hefty document, making final changes, corrections and deletions, and correcting typographical errors. The commission unanimously adopted the plan on first reading, and will vote on final adoption of the plan once the state has reviewed the document.

The more than 700 pages of the plan project city's growth as it relates to roads, infrastructure, housing, land use, conservation, recreation and coordination of services with other government bodies.

Mark Reggentin, associate city planner, said the state will complete its review of Lake Mary's comprehensive plan within 90 days of its submittal to DCA. The city will then have 60 days to respond to any comments or objections raised by the state, and to return to the state its adopted version of the plan. Within 45 days after the plan is returned to Tallahassee, the state will issue a notice determining whether the city is in compliance with the growth management law.

According to that timetable, Reggentin said, the city commission should hold its second and final public hearing on the comprehensive plan in October or November.

The commission review and public hearing on the plan lasted less than two hours. During the

Pulp free

School project eschews use of paper products

By VICKI DeBORNIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — While memories of Earth Day celebrations may have faded in the minds of some people, the students at Idyllwild Elementary School haven't forgotten about conservation.

Today, in the school at 430 Vilhen Rd. in Sanford, they learned about saving trees through using less paper.

No paper products were to be used at the school all day today.

"No notebook paper, no hand-outs, no paper at all," said principal Carolyn Towles.

The idea of the paper-free day came from the gifted student classes who were studying about the effects on the environment caused by the destruction of trees to make paper products.

The students wanted to make a statement about what even a small community could do to help the environmental cause.

The students, teachers, administrators and staff at the school are finding out today what a world without paper would be like.

Classes will spend the day listening and speaking.

Tests, when necessary will be given either orally or on slates with chalk. Teachers will write all notes on the blackboard and students will solve problems on the blackboard as well.

"This is not a way out of doing work," Towles vowed.

The youngsters will monitor their teachers and other staff members to be sure that the policy of non-consumption is strictly followed.

The teachers have had to alter lesson plans a bit to accommodate the policy was followed, but there have been few complaints. Teachers regard the experience as a chance for the youngsters to learn by doing.

The students will also learn about the trees which are used to make the paper they consume.

In honor of the occasion of their paper free day, students planted a large live oak tree on the campus. The tree, purchased by the student government with money raised in a recent candy sale, will be cared for by the students.

While the school community will return to the regular consumption of paper products on Monday morning, they hope that everyone learns an important lesson about conservation with today's experience.

Site clearing underway for garbage plant

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

LAKE MARY — Construction is underway on the county's $9.4 million central transfer station south of Lake Mary on County Road 419 east of U.S. Highway 17-92.

Thursday, county officials broke ground on the construction of the facility, expected to be completed in a year.

The station will be able to serve as a half-way transfer and facility for garbage trucks collecting up to 1,900 tons daily from southern areas of the county. Garbage collected in northern and eastern areas of the county are taken directly to the county dump. Garbage from the station will be taken to the county dump in Geveva.

Currently, residents produce about 1,000 tons of garbage daily, but that amount is expected to climb as the population rises by 25,000 to 50,000 people within the next four years. The station's peak capacity is 2,900 tons.

The Central Transfer Station will replace the Sanlando Transfer Station in Akamonte Springs. The Sanlando site will be used for a softball complex. The Upeala Transfer Station west of Sanford was closed 1 1/2 years ago when the dumping platform showed signs of collapsing. The platform had been built on a buried mound of garbage.

All's quiet on Florida political front

By DAN SEWELL
AP News Analyst

HOLLYWOOD — Barely a year from Florida's presidential primary and with 1992 offering a U.S. Senate seat and other significant elections, the political front remains quiet.

"There's really no activity to speak of at all," said Alan Stonecipher of the Florida Democratic Party.

Same on the other side. "With the war, all the partisan activity and rhetoric seems to be quiet," said Stan Smith, spokesman for the state Republican Party.

The good news for Democrats is that there's no sign of the extensive fund raising and organizing that a Republican would need to challenge popular Sen. Bob Graham's re-election bid next year.

The bad news for Democrats is that no one from their party is started with the work for what appears to be an even steeper challenge — to President Bush's re-election.

Florida will be part of the Super Tuesday primary with most southern states March 10, 1992, but the Persian Gulf war and Bush's popularity have made Democrats — trounced in the last three presidential elections — reluctant to step forward.

The presidential race could

I think the two principle factors in the 1992 elections are still unknowns.

-U.S. Sen. Bob Graham

play a significant role in shaping Florida's political landscape. Next year's general election will have four new U.S. House seats and a yet-unknown number of redrawn districts.

"It's something we do have concern about because of the last few presidential elections," Stonecipher said.

Lt. Gov. Buddy MacKay can attest to the importance of having a competitive top of the ticket.

"My own experience was not very pleasant," said MacKay, who lost the closest Senate race in Florida history to Republican Connie Mack in 1988. MacKay polled nearly 360,000 votes more than presidential nominee Michael Dukakis, but was dragged down as Bush whipped Dukakis by nearly 1 million votes.

MacKay was here Saturday night to highlight the annual Broward Democratic Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner.

In 1980, the last time before 1988 a Florida Senate election fell on a presidential year, Democratic nominee Bill Gunter ran nearly 300,000 votes better than Jimmy Carter, but Republican Paula Hawkins followed Ronald Reagan to Washington.

Bush's coattails would have to be long and strong to carry a Republican past Graham, an incumbent and former two-term governor. But MacKay said "I don't think you can ever say a Senate seat is a safe seat."

President of Colombia wants drug cooperation

Associated Press

CORAL GABLES — Colombia's president says his government has the Medellín cartel "on the run," but that other nations aren't working together in the war on drugs.

"International cooperation was effective in the Persian Gulf and it should and will be effective if you really apply it to this fight on drugs," Cesar Gaviria said Thursday, ending a four-day U.S. visit.

Gaviria said his country, in the first six weeks of this year, seized double the amount of cocaine — 11.4 tons — as the same time last year.

The seizures record is all the more remarkable because much of the U.S. radar equipment that helps Colombian authorities track smugglers has been taken temporarily to the Persian Gulf, he said.

Despite his country's success in interdiction and a reduction in U.S. demand, Gaviria said, cocaine processing laboratories are increasing in other countries, drug demand is rising in Europe and Asia, and there has been little progress in stopping the laundering of drug money.

"When you see all this, you really see that it's so important to have international cooperation," Gaviria said.

He also defended his policy of not extraditing Colombian smugglers who surrender and said he was pleased with a Washington visit that included meetings with President Bush and drug czar-nominee Bob Martinez.

Returning soldiers will face conflicts at home

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK — When America's fighting men and women come marching home from the Persian Gulf and rejoin their families, the initial joy may give way to conflicts caused by long separation, mental health experts say.

Both spouses may have changed in ways they must now accommodate. New roles in marriage may have to be negotiated.

"The family will be the flash point of the major postwar stressors here because they've been under enormous pressure and stress," said psychologist Charles Figley of Florida State University in Tallahassee.

Combined with the tension the returning soldier or sailor has experienced, "and when you put them all together with the additional effort to make it right and get along with living, it could be extremely stressful."

Problems probably will be most pronounced in families of reservists, who may have left suddenly on their first long separation from home, and least troublesome in military families used to long separations, the experts said.

Basically healthy marriages should be able to overcome the stress, although previously troubled relationships may need professional help, they said.

Experts also said they expect fewer cases of post-traumatic stress disorder — a serious condition that can include sleep disturbances and flashbacks to combat — after the Gulf War than occurred after the Vietnam War. Families and mental health institutions are far better prepared to prevent the disorder now, Figley said. Families can help by encouraging the soldier to discuss his or her experiences and feelings and providing emotional support, he said.

Apart from that, a returning soldier or sailor may step into conflict because the relationship at home will not simply pick up where it left off. "You don't re-enter where you left, you re-enter in a new place," said Florence Kaslow, director of the Florida Couples and Family Institute in West Palm Beach, Fla.

For men who went to war, "their wives have been living by themselves and handling everything quite well, thank you," said Joseph Mancusi, former director of psychology for what is now the Department of Veterans Affairs.

The wives may be reluctant to relinquish new authority, he said. "Anyone, once they grow, does not like to un-grow."

For many women, the absence of the husband may drive home the fact that they had been doing most of the household tasks anyway, and they may press for a more equitable arrangement, Mancusi said.

Women back from the war zone also may resist returning to deferential roles, he said.

More generally, each spouse will have gone through a totally different experience during the separation, and each will have gained new friends, Kaslow said. The spouses need to share their experiences, he said.

Cease-fire holding; Allies watchful

By MARTIN MARRIS
Associated Press Writer

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia — Isolated clashes and the sounds of Iraqi weaponry being demolished were all that marred the Persian Gulf peace today, as allied soldiers kept a watchful eye on their vanquished foes. Allied officials warned that Iraq faced renewed fighting if it did not release allied prisoners.

In Kuwait, American soldiers hoisted the flag outside the U.S. Embassy as Ambassador Edward Gnehm arrived to take up his post. On Thursday, U.S. army explosive experts swept the embassy compound, blowing up stray ammunition.

When the former ambassador, Nathaniel Howel, left in December, "he took his flag off this flagpole and he brought it to me in Washington and he said at the time he left, 'We're coming back,'" Gnehm said. "We are back and I bring his flag back."

On the battle front, allied military officials today reported a few cease-fire violations, including several minor exchanges of fire overnight initiated by Iraqi units presumed not to have learned of the truce.

¶ We are going to get back our POWs and we're going to do it fast. ¶

—George Bush

U.S. commanders said allied and Iraqi commanders will meet "soon" for talks on a permanent cease-fire, the return of prisoners of war and other issues. They would not say when or where, although a spokesman for the British government said the talks may be held Saturday.

President Bush said in his speech Wednesday night announcing the cease-fire that the meeting would have to be held within 48 hours, and U.S. officials in Washington said Iraqi diplomats had been informed of a desired time and place.

"We are going to get back our POWs and we're going to do it fast," Bush declared on Thursday. Forty-five Americans are missing, and at least eight are believed to be Iraqi prisoners.

U.S. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said on Cable News Network today that the Iraqis could face renewed fighting if they do not cooperate. "We have the ability to resume hostilities at a moment's notice...the lights are out in Baghdad, they'll stay out until we get satisfaction," he said.

U.S. commanders still had not revised the death toll of 79 Americans provided Wednesday night.

The allies were turning their attention to identifying Iraqis whose units were suspected of involvement in atrocities in Kuwait. But a senior U.S. military official in Riyadh said today that the Iraqi command in Kuwait City fled before the arrival of U.S. and allied forces and could escape prosecution.

"The Iraqi security forces saw the handwriting on the wall early and they got out... before the Marines were even within striking distance of getting in there," the official said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Saddam's men blundered the way to defeat

By PETE YOST
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — It was the fourth largest army in the world, battle-hardened from eight years of war. Ready to make allied blood flow.

"This is a very formidable force," Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said of Iraq's army in August.

So what happened? Saddam Hussein's army blundered to defeat because it was badly used by its commander in chief, say military analysts. And it was crushed by a brilliantly implemented allied battle plan, say Pentagon officials.

Instead of battle-hardened, the Iraqi army was battle-weary. It was big, but much of it was poorly trained. Saddam mobilized 40 divisions of reservists late last year.

"Cannon fodder. The talent pool was too thin," said Kenneth Brower of Britain's Sandhurst Royal Military Academy.

But in the hands of competent generals, the Iraqi army could nonetheless have inflicted heavy casualties, the analysts added.

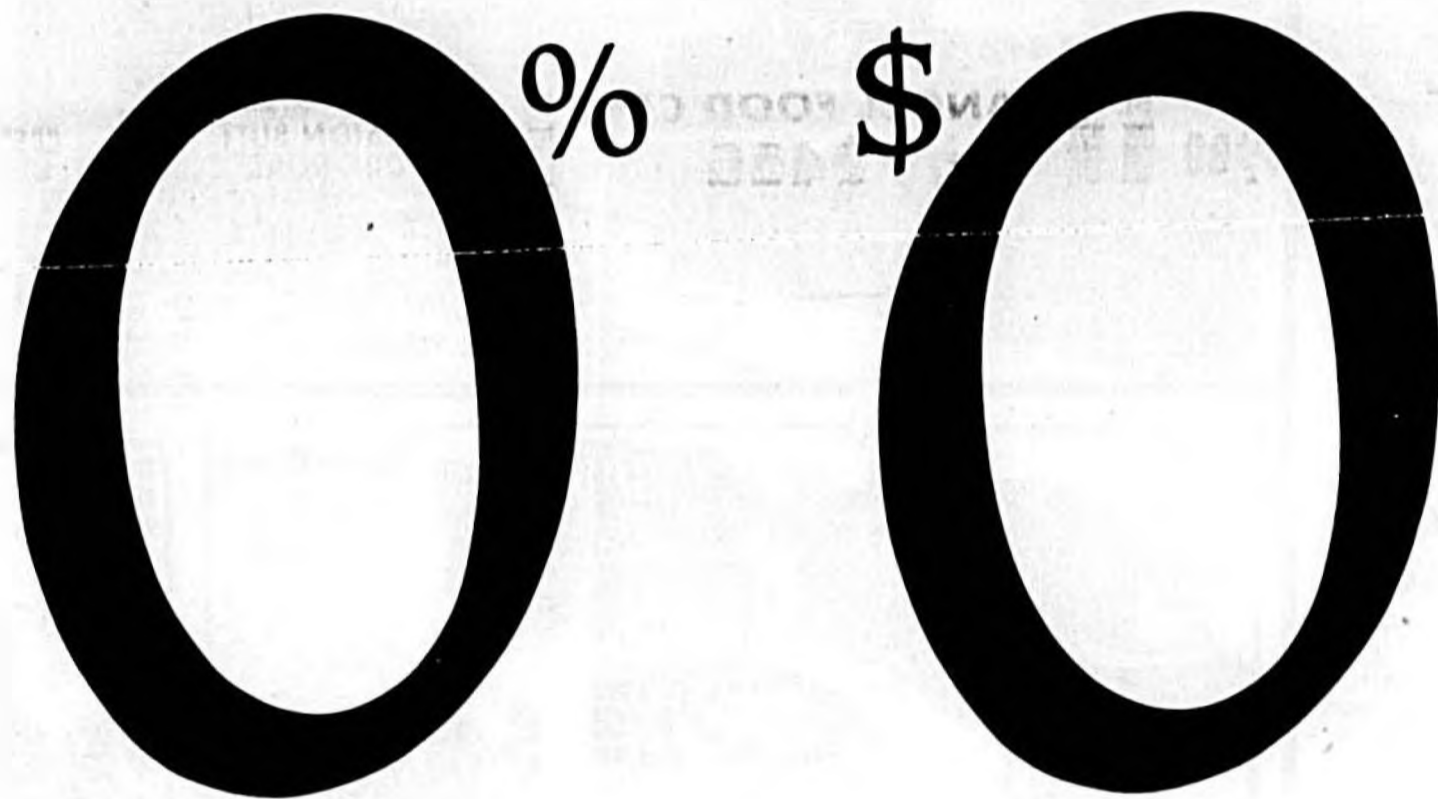

The Air-Land battle doctrine of the U.S. Army emphasizes rapid maneuvers and attacking an enemy's vulnerabilities. Instead, Saddam's men were ordered to fight the same way they had in the war against Iran: hunkered down.

"They didn't read our book," said a Pentagon source who requested anonymity. "We knew more about them than they knew about us."

Saddam should have positioned his Republican Guard and armored reserve further west, said the source. That would have allowed the Iraqis to blunt the allied flanking movement that trapped the core of Saddam's army.

The Iraqi army "underperformed" because the allies played "our strengths against their weaknesses," said the source.

The allies blew apart Soviet-designed T-72 tanks used by the Republican Guard.

The amount of personal loan interest that's tax deductible in 1991.

The amount of closing costs you pay on our home equity loan.

Two Reasons For Getting A Barnett Home Equity Loan That Have Nothing In Common.

As many of you probably already know, the tax laws have changed. And as of January 1991, the interest on most personal loans is no longer deductible.

Just about the only personal interest that is deductible is that which you pay on your home.*

That's where a Barnett Home Equity Loan comes in. Not only do you get a loan with tax deductibility, you also get one that's very flexible. You can use it to pay for a car, a boat, a vacation or tuition.

You can even use the funds to make certain investments or consolidate other loans into just one payment.

That's not all.

Now through May 15, Barnett will pay the closing costs associated with the loan. That can save you hundreds of dollars right from the start.

To make things even easier, you can have your loan payment automatically deducted from your checking or savings account. And if you have recurring borrowing needs, ask about Barnett's Home Equity Credit Line.

So come in to your local Barnett office and find out how a couple of things that have nothing in common can actually save you money.

Economic signs off once again

Analysts nevertheless maintaining optimism

By JOHN D. McCLAIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The government's chief economic forecasting gauge fell 0.3 percent in January, its sixth straight drop and the longest string of declines since 1984, the government said today.

Still, most analysts maintain the recession, believed to have begun during the last half of 1990, will be milder and shorter than most contractions since World War II. Those averaged 11 months in length, during which the economy declined 2.5 percent.

The drop in the Commerce Department's Index of Leading Economic Indicators followed a revised 0.1 percent decrease in December — even worse than the barely perceptible 0.1 percent gain first reported last month. The department attributed the revision to a shorter average workweek than initially thought.

The current string of declines matched the six consecutive drops from May through October 1984.

The index has not advanced since an anemic 0.1 percent gain was posted last June. The July index was unchanged.

The index is designed to forecast economic activity six to nine months in advance.

The Commerce Department reported on Wednesday that the gross national product — the nation's total output of goods and services — fell 2.0 percent in the final quarter of 1990.

Analysts say economic statistics so far during the current quarter indicate the downturn continues, but at a slower pace, meeting the general definition of a recession — at least two consecutive quarterly declines in economic growth.

However, many economists, who expect the end of the Persian Gulf War to boost consumer confidence and lead to a spurt in spending, say the pace of an economic recovery will be slower than the robust upturns following many past recessions.

Six of the 11 forward-looking components pulled the index down in January.

Rights movement 'mother' receives solid recognition

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A bronze bust of the woman often referred to as "the mother of the civil rights movement" is the newest addition to the National Portrait Gallery.

The sculpture of Rosa Parks, who ignited the civil rights movement by refusing to relinquish her seat on a Montgomery, Ala., bus more than 35 years ago, was unveiled at a ceremony Thursday. "I am very pleased and happy and this is the high point of my life," Mrs. Parks said. "I have experienced many tributes over the years."

Now 78 and living in Detroit, Mrs. Parks said she hopes the sculpture in the national gallery will help remind children in years to come of the struggle for freedom waged by blacks in this country.

Cheerleader's mom denies murder plot

By WENDY BENJAMINSON
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON — A woman pleaded innocent Thursday to a charge she tried to hire a hitman to kill the mother of a girl competing with her daughter to be a high school cheerleader.

Wanda Webb Holloway is scheduled to go on trial June 10 on a charge of solicitation of capital murder, said her attorney, Troy McKinney.

Mrs. Holloway sat calmly in the courtroom while McKinney entered the plea. She walked quickly through a phalanx of television cameras without making any public comment.

"She's dealing with it," McKinney said. "She has to be that way. I'm sure there are moments when she's not that composed, as you can imagine. But she's dealing with it."

Police say Mrs. Holloway is the "ultimate stage mother," so intent on having her daughter, Shanna, 13, make the cheerleading squad at the Channelview school that she tried to hire a gunman to kill Verna Heath, undermining the chance of Mrs. Heath's daughter, Amber, to win auditions.

Mrs. Holloway, 37, who was arrested Feb. 1 and indicted Feb. 19, is free on a $10,000 bond. She could face five years to life in prison if convicted.

Mrs. Holloway also faces a March 6 hearing sought by her ex-husband, Tony Harper, to take custody of Shanna and her brother, Anthony, 17.

Investigators said Mrs. Holloway contacted her former brother-in-law, Terry Lynn Harper, in January to find someone to kill Mrs. Heath, 38, before the spring cheerleader tryouts for the future ninth-graders.

Drought ends for CBS as it wins sweep

By DEBORAH HASTINGS
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES — CBS claimed its first sweeps victory in six years, squeaking past perennially first-place NBC by six-tenths of a ratings point.

CBS finished the 28-day February sweeps period with a 13.5 average Nielsen rating and a 22 audience share — about half a million homes ahead of NBC.

It was a hard hit for NBC, which had reigned as the No. 1 network for the last 11 sweeps battles. Although the network placed second in the February race with a 12.9 average rating and a 21 share, it suffered the largest viewer drop-off (15 percent) of the Big Three.

ABC was third with a 12.1 rating and a 19 share.

Sweeps are quarterly ratings contests used by local stations to help set advertising rates.

A rating point equals 931,000 TV households in the Nielsen universe of 93.1 million homes. A share is the percentage of the audience tuned in to a show in its time period.

'Diff'rent Strokes' actress arrested

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — An actress from the popular television show "Diff'rent Strokes" was jailed after allegedly robbing a video store clerk at gunpoint.

Dana Plato, who played 13-year-old Kimberly Drummond on the long running show, was arrested Thursday after she approached officers investigating the robbery and the clerk pointed her out as the suspect, said Las Vegas Metro Police Lt. Charles Davidants.

The clerk had recognized the woman as the actress when she held up the store, despite an all-black disguise that included sunglasses and a hat. Davidants said he said $100 was taken in the robbery.

Perseverance isn't always right path

DEAR ABBY: Many years ago, you printed a very comical column about an editor who tried to correct a typographical error.

BETTIE EVANS
DEAR BETTIE: I found it. And here it is:

DEAR ABBY: My mother recently passed away after a brief illness. In the obituary published in our local newspaper, her age was given as 69.

Because of this typographical error in her obituary, everyone will think she was nine years older than she actually was. Should we ask the newspaper editor to publish a correction? I say we should. The rest of the family says to skip it.

OUTVOTED IN OHIO

DEAR OUTVOTED: Sometimes it's better to leave bad enough alone. In support of my advice, I offer the following from the California Newspaper Association. It is an example of a typographical error in the classified section of a small-town newspaper, and the subsequent disastrous attempts to correct it:

(Monday) "FOR SALE — R.D. Jones has one sewing machine for sale. Phone 948-0707 after 7 p.m. and ask for Mrs. Kelly who lives with him cheap."
(Tuesday) "NOTICE — We regret having erred in R.D. Jones' ad yesterday. It should have read: One sewing machine for sale. Cheap. Phone 948-0707 and ask for Mrs. Kelly who lives with him after 7 p.m."

(Wednesday) "NOTICE — R.D. Jones has informed us that he has received several annoying telephone calls because of the error we made in his classified ad yesterday. His ad stands correct as follows: FOR SALE — R.D. Jones has one sewing machine for sale. Cheap. Phone 948-0707 p.m. and ask for Mrs. Kelly who loves with him."
(Thursday) "NOTICE — I, R.D. Jones, have no sewing machine for sale. I smashed it. Don't call 948-0707, as the telephone has been disconnected. I have not been carrying on with Mrs. Kelly. Until yesterday she was my housekeeper, but she quit."

FROM THE PULPIT

Create a conspiracy for peace

By REV. GEORGE SPRANZY JR.

Luke writes in the 18th chapter of his gospel that when Jesus approached Jerusalem on that day we have come to know as Palm Sunday, he was moved to tears because the people there did not know the things that made for peace. His tears on that occasion reflect a real hunger in the heart of God for shalom, for wholeness and well-being in all of creation. Those tears are symbolic of the tears of God, even today, as he sees the needless pain and suffering which humanity has inflicted upon itself and his prayer for that city, and his prayer for our global village, is that we all come to know the things that produce wholeness and healing and brotherhood in our world.

I believe that one of the most productive things we can do in terms of world peace today, right now, is begin to create a conspiracy, a conspiracy for peace. "Conspiracy" in its literal sense, means "to breathe together." Such a conspiracy is appropriate, I believe, because to continue with the philosophy of an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth will soon produce a world in which everyone will be blind and toothless.

Our breathing together, living together, working together toward a common goal can result in the salvation of and peace for the world. And that comes, not just as we reduce weapons of war, but also as we aid victims of earthquake and hurricane, as we walk for the hungry, even as we pray for one another, working for the reduction of tension, conflict and turmoil which marks human lives.

And, just as intense as the struggle for peace globally may be, so also is the struggle for peace personally, peace for our own troubled spirits? Peace within comes from listening to what our hearts are telling us. The Psalmist wrote, "Let me hear what the Lord will speak, for the Lord will speak peace to the people, to the saints, to those who turn to the Lord in their hearts. Listening to one's own heart gives the soul time and space for meditation and refreshment."

We may also find a connection between making peace and saying prayers, both personally and globally. Prayer makes us one in and before God with those who are bound with us in this bundle of life upon this earth. It also changes our relation to our selves. Prayer is a reclaiming of our own true identity, a recovering of who we are and whose we are. When I pray as Jesus taught, "Our Father," I am defining myself as a child of the God "who sends the sun to shine on the evil and on the good, the rain to fall on the just and on the unjust."

Sometimes the burdens of life are so great that we think cannot handle them. In times and situations in which we feel helpless or powerless to act, our praying together may be the most powerful thing we can do in pursuit of peace in our world. It is God's peace which can overcome our brokenness and despair and it is God's peace which comes to us when we pray.

Jesus did not spell out the things that make for peace that day as he looked out over Jerusalem. But he embodied that vision of peace, it seems to me, by bringing people into relationship with God and with one another. He demonstrated that peace by his willingness to suffer for others and to be faithful to God's will; by praying for and showing goodness to those who showed hostility toward him and sought his death; and, finally, by dying for the sake of God's vision that it might be done "on earth as it is in heaven."

The things that make for peace? They are the things which lead to salvation, to wholeness, to healing, and to health but, most of all, they are the ways we participate in God's continuing re-creation of ourselves and this glorious earth upon which we live!

Would that we knew the things that make for peace!

Rev. George B. Spranzy, Jr., is pastor of First Presbyterian Church, 301 Oak Ave., Sanford.

Good News Ministry banquet set for tonight

SANFORD — The Seminole County Board of County Commissioners recently presented Chaplain Charles Pitroff, of The Good News Jail & Prison Ministry, with a proclamation announcing the week of Feb. 25-March 1 as John E. Polk Correctional Facility Jail Chaplain Appreciation Week. As a grand finale to this announcement, The Good News Jail & Prison Ministries' annual banquet will be held this evening at 8:30 p.m. in the Sanford Civic Center. There is no charge for the turkey dinner, which is sponsored by the President's Council and supporting churches to familiarize the community with the ministry at the jail.

The program will feature Harry Greene, Good News J&PM

president, interviewing ex-inmates of Seminole County's John E. Polk Correctional Facility on how they have grown in the faith they found through the jail ministry and how it has helped them get their lives together after their release.

Music will be provided by "Glory Bound" and a ministry video called "Breaking the Cycle of Crime" will be shown. Other highlights of the evening will be presentation of the annual "Volunteer of the Year" and "Corrections Officer of the Year" awards. Sheriff Don Eslinger is scheduled to make remarks.

Also participating on the program will be former chief deputy Duane Harrell, Regional Director for Good News Dan Mathe, Chaplains Charles Pitroff and James Brown, council member Bob Gregory and Corrections Facility Administrator Duane Rutledge.

A freewill offering will be received to help defray costs.

Through the efforts of the two full-time Good News chaplains and volunteers from more than 30 churches, 204 preaching services were held at the jail with 7,582 inmates attending in the past year. 20,415 inmates attended 818 Bible classes and 19,235 individual Bible lessons were graded.

Good News Jail and Prison Ministries is an international ministry founded in 1961. It is the largest supplier of civilian seminary-trained jail chaplains in the world without the benefit of any government support.

For free tickets, and information about the banquet or the ministry, call the chaplains at 323-6512, Ext. 246.

Consult your doctor about mononucleosis

MEDICINE
PETER GOTT, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My daughter has been diagnosed with mononucleosis. An allergy doctor wants to put one drop of Fluogen (the flu virus) under her tongue four times a day for treatment. Is this an approved method for control?

DEAR READER: Mononucleosis is an acute illness caused by the Epstein-Barr virus, an infectious agent estimated to infect at least 85 percent of the world's population. In most instances, patients are not even aware of Epstein-Barr infection; however, their immune systems are activated to produce antibodies to the virus. These antibody markers, which can be identified in a blood test, persist for a lifetime. In some cases, patients become quite ill: overwhelming exhaustion, swollen glands, sore throat and fever, which may progress to rash, jaundice and liver inflammation. In most instances, the spleen swells, too. Occasionally, patients exhibit neurological signs, such as Bell's palsy (facial weakness), blurred vision, confusion and paralysis. These signs are more common in older adults and rarely appear in youngsters and adolescents.

Being a virus infection, mononucleosis is untreatable with current means. Although some practitioners advocate various therapies, such as Fluogen, these methods have not been proven effective.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have endometriosis and suffer from chronic pain on my left side. I've been taking hormone pills for relief. Can certain foods I am sensitive to aggravate my condition?

DEAR READER: Endometriosis is a common congenital disorder marked by abdominal pain and cramping due to the presence of endometrial tissue (the lining of the uterus) in abnormal locations, such as abdominal organs. During menstruation, when the endometrium usually sheds and bleeds, these aberrant "islands" also bleed, leading to inflammation and a buildup of pressure. Treatment consists of suppression of menstruation, using drugs such as danazol or continuous oral contraceptive pills (hormones). This may lead to unacceptable weight gain, breast tenderness, fatigue and depression.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

At the bridge table a little learning can be dangerous, and this is particularly true of defense.

In a pairs tournament, South had already managed to guarantee his side most of the match-points when he steered the final game contract into three no-trump.

West led the three of clubs, and East won the ace and led back the deuce. That two-of-clubs return should denote an original holding of four clubs to the ace. West, eager to show that he knew how to maintain communication between himself and his partner, inexplicably ducked the second club. South was quick to win and cash dummy's A-K-Q of hearts, throwing diamonds.

He next ran all his spades. Can you see what happened on the last spade? Dummy was down to A-9 of diamonds and the jack of clubs. West held K-8 of diamonds and the king of clubs, but now had to make a discard. Since throwing the club king would make dummy's jack good, West had to hope that East held the diamond queen. So he threw a diamond. Declarer discarded dummy's jack of clubs and took the last two tricks with the ace and queen of diamonds.

Does South's rebid of two no-trump seem strange to you with such a tenuous club stopper? Ask yourself what might happen in a major-suit game contract if North held the jack of diamonds instead of the ace. Right. The defenders would quickly take four tricks in the minor suits.

Dentures take a trip to dump

MARSHALLTON, Ohio — A city worker retrieved a woman's dentures by picking through tons of garbage at a dump after they were hauled there inadvertently.
"All they had to go on was the lady said it was a white kitchen bag," Charlie Williams of the city's waste hauling department said Thursday after the teeth were found at the landfill. "Probably 80 percent of our bags are white."
The woman, whose name wasn't released by city officials, said she apparently knocked the false teeth off her nightstand and into the bedroom wastebasket overnight.
By the time she realized the teeth were gone, the wastebasket had been emptied into the kitchen trashbag and in turn set outside.
Ed Darr of the waste hauling department said it took less than an hour to find the teeth. His memory of garbage truck routes helped him guess where her lone kitchen bag was.

Police free stranded shark

ST. PETERSBURG BEACH — A stranded shark joined sunbathers on a Gulf beach until police rescued the 9-foot animal by tying a rope to its tail and towing it to deeper water.
"We didn't have to ask him to leave. He left in a hurry," said officer Ron Bittaker of the St. Petersburg Police Department.
Two sharks had been swimming between a Pass-A-Grille beach and a sandbar 50 feet out on Friday, beachgoers said. One made it over the sandbar, but the other was trapped by low tide shortly after 4 p.m. Eventually the waves pushed it onto the beach. Bittaker said.

SANFORD — Federal and local law enforcement officers have cut off a major crack cocaine supply source in Sanford with the arrests of 10 individuals, Sanford Police Chief Steven Harriett said Saturday.

City of Sanford police officers, agents of the Federal Drug Enforcement Administration and the Seminole County Sheriff's Department concluded a long-term investigation with the arrests of the 10 for their alleged involvement in a crack cocaine distribution organization operating out of Sanford.

"It's a significant effort on behalf of the three agencies," Harriett said.

It targeted an organization moving a significant amount of crack cocaine through Sanford. We should see that flow drop.]

-Steve Harriett, Sanford police chief

Harriett said 50 law enforcement officers from the three agencies and Volusia County "rounded up the suspects after converging on five different locations to execute the two search warrants" that were issued to the federal agency.

The arrests were "affected without incident in the wee hours of Friday morning," Harriett said.

Harriett said the investigation, which he stressed was carefully coordinated over a long period of time, was different from a routine drug investigation targeting an individual.

"What's different is it did not target an individual but an organization that moved a significant amount of crack cocaine through Sanford. We should see a definite drop in that flow," he said.

Harriett said the federal agents were called in to assist Sanford because of the significant amount of drugs coursing through Sanford's streets from the organization.

"It took on a magnitude to make it advisable to have concurrent investigation," he said. Indicted by the federal grand jury on one count of conspiracy to possess with intent to distribute crack cocaine and one count of possession with

Lake Mary chamber gears up

By NICK PFEIFAUF Sanford Herald Writer

LAKE MARY — March has been declared Membership Awareness Month by the Lake Mary Chamber of Commerce, in an effort to not only remind present members of the benefits they receive by belonging to the organization, but to help increase the total membership.

The size of the chamber and the work it has been accomplishing have both grown during the past years, but the city itself continues to enlarge and the role of the chamber and its membership is ever increasing.

Executive Director Diane Parker said there are presently 320 members in the Lake Mary Chamber of Commerce. "I've signed up 107 new members since last April," she said, "and I think that now, with the economy being what it is, a chamber membership is more important than it has ever been."

This year's annual membership drive with teams of members in competition with each other, will be held March 20 through 22, but Parker said she hopes that the new members will be joining up throughout the entire month.

In the March edition of Lake Mary's Chamber News, Parker told members "Membership is lifeblood. The strength we have is derived from the number and diversity of our membership." She suggested that if each current member would make it a personal goal to sign up just one additional member during March, the membership would

Legislature may change school financing

By JACKIE HALLIFAX Associated Press writer

TALLAHASSEE — The state could change its philosophy about how it oversees the education of Florida's two million school children if lawmakers agree to repeal programs they've put on the books over the years.

Instead of spelling out how schools should teach children with dozens of specific programs, the state should measure what schools accomplish according to Education Commissioner Betty Castor.

Gov. Lawton Chiles has come out wholeheartedly in support of the approach, most frequently referred to as "accountability and flexibility."

But the idea will run into some opposition from lawmakers during the 60-day session that starts Tuesday. Legislators also must search for ways to pay for education during a tight year.

Even those who support the approach express some reservations.

"I really don't have a lot of problem with it as long as there's accountability," House Speaker I.K. Wetherell, D-Daytona Beach, has said. "We probably have tried to Question: Enjoyed your remarks about brothers. Let me suggest you write about the Hickson family.

Answer: How many of you remember Jack Hickson? He served under Sheriffs Charlie Hand and Jim McCalland and then as a Sanford Police Department lieutenant for many years under Chief Roy Williams. Well, Jack is now at Hillhaven on McCalland Avenue.

Garden club prepares for spring event

By LAGY BOWEN

SANFORD — Although the blazing, once-common tropical shrub, Ixora, is rarely seen in the area now, members of the Ixora Garden Club in Sanford have been seen everywhere in preparation for the upcoming Annual Spring Luncheon and Home and Garden Show, to be held at the Sanford Civic Center March 8.

Perennials, annuals, hanging baskets and terra cotta statuary for the garden will be available for sale, according to Judy Wimble, who heads the horticulture committee. Proceeds are earmarked for city beautification.

Gourmet luncheons are available to eat in or take out, but advanced reservations must be made.

Craft and homemade baked goods will also be available.

"I'm most excited about something we are offering for the first time," Wimble said.

"Grandmother's Garden" is based on the principle of sharing with one's neighbors.

"The girls will all bring seeds, bulbs and cuttings from their own gardens. For a nominal fee we will share with our neighbors," Wimble explained.

Wimble said master gardener from the Seminole County Extension Services will be available to answer gardening questions.

Club member Shirley Schilke said Ixora ladies are "very community conscious."

"At the present we are spending over $2,500 to beautify two large planters at Seminole High School and the girls are doing a lot of the work themselves," she said.

Other projects to which Ixora Garden Club has contributed include: Cultural Arts Building, Park on Park, the Sanford Marina entrance, Central Florida Regional Hospital's "Poison Plant Educational Garden", St. Lucia Luncheon and scholarships for deserving area students.

Display hours are 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Luncheon hours are 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Call Joyce Malone at 322-5600 for luncheon reservations. Only 350 lunches will be prepared.

Bolster the family

Government is increasingly called upon to solve a myriad of problems that flow from the breakdown of the American family. But government can never be a substitute for family cohesion.

Government social programs, no matter how well structured, cannot provide the kind of nurturing and stability that children, in particular, need. The self-esteem, moral values, study habits and emotional support provided by loving parents are crucial during a youngster's formative years.

Accordingly, policymakers should focus on preventive strategies to strengthen families instead of trying to deal only with the consequences of family disintegration.

Although government cannot compel people to be responsible parents, it can certainly promote policies that make it easier for them to take care of their children. One such policy is to alleviate the economic pressure on families by reducing their heavy tax burdens.

The United States has just experienced the longest peacetime economic expansion in modern history. But more and more families are finding it necessary to have two incomes in order to pay their bills. One reason for this is that real wages have not kept pace with rising tax rates, particularly Social Security payroll taxes, which have risen steadily and hit middle-class families especially hard.

During the past two decades, dollar earnings of American men increased by less than 1 percent annually. That compares with a real growth rate of 3 percent annually during the 1950s and '60s. To compound this problem, the real wages of several groups, particularly non-supervisory workers and males under 25, have actually declined since 1973.

As wages have stagnated, taxes have skyrocketed. In 1950, a median-income family of four paid only 2 percent of its annual gross earnings to the federal government in income and payroll taxes. The current rate is 24 percent, plus an additional 8 percent for state and local taxes. Factor in steep increases in housing, health care, transportation and college costs, and the economic squeeze on the average family becomes apparent.

If the federal government allowed parents to keep more of their earned income, there would be far less economic pressure for both parents to work outside the home.

One place to start is by increasing the tax exemption for dependents. If the exemption had kept pace with inflation since 1950, it would be closer to $7,000 instead of the current $2,050. The exemption now covers only a fraction of the cost of supplying a child with food, clothing and housing.

A pro-family policy also should include loosening restrictions on the deductibility of home-office expenses and encouraging companies to adopt flexible work schedules for their employees.

It is unfair that families with young children have the lowest per capita incomes yet are saddled with such high tax burdens. Rather than taxing them further, the government should let them keep more of their own earnings. That is one sure way to strengthen the family.

Berry's World

"This is my leader."

Looking at school social workers

Josephine Newton is Florida's chief school social worker. Her official title is Consultant with the Department of Education. Her primary function is to evaluate each of the 67 counties' plans for the delivery of social work services. She also provides technical assistance for school health services.

Newton traces the evolution of social work services from 1915 when the first truant officer was hired. In 1919, state legislation was passed and a new title, attendance assistants, came into being. These assistants were to determine why children were not attending school. The first state consultant for school social work, Annabel Brantley, was appointed in the 1960's. Newton followed Brantley in her current position in 1971.

According to Newton, school social workers provide an essential link between the school district, parents and the community. School social workers are employed in 52 counties in the state.

School social workers function as liaisons between the home, school and community. They are advocates for families. Families, whose children are not attending school as they should, are visited by the school social worker. An assessment is made of factors that may be contributing to children's non attendance and assistance is given to remedy the situation. School social workers make referrals to appropriate community agencies and also give practical help. For example, if children are not attending school because of lack of adequate clothing, the social worker will work to change this situation. School social work services include offering parenting classes and crisis intervention.

SEMINOLE OPINION

The nature of school social work demands that the majority of the social workers time is spent visiting homes. They facilitate the flow of information between school and home and vice versa.

School social workers are required to have a bachelors or masters degree in social work and be certified by the state. Training in social work is available at the following institutions: Florida Agricultural and Mechanical University, Florida State University, University of West Florida, University of South Florida, University of Central Florida and Barry University in Miami.

Another aspect of Newton's job, which brings her to Seminole County at this time, is compliance monitoring. The Florida Department of Education teams visit school districts to ascertain whether they are in compliance with state and federal regulations. All indigenous school policies are reviewed. Children's records are also examined. This record review includes children served by Chapter 1, exceptional education, and in the regular school district programs. Chapter 1 programs serve students who are educationally disadvantaged and in need of remediation. Exceptional education programs serve children in need of special services.

There are two phases to the compliance review. The first phase entails determining the correlation between Seminole County school district policies and state and federal policies. The second phase calls for analyzing student records relative to the implementation of the district's policies.

As the state level consultant for school workers, Newton contends that school social workers are an invaluable asset to any school district. Particularly, in this age of escalating economic and social problems that have created multiple dysfunctional families. Prime examples are homeless children and their families and the emotional and economic havoc that divorce may create. The role of the school social worker and the services they provide is not duplicated by any other school district employees.

Allied frustration led to attack

WASHINGTON — The decision to bomb the suburban Baghdad bunker/shelter — which caused a large number of civilian deaths — was the result of the allied high command's continued, frustrated attempts to shut down Iraqi communications, according to Pentagon intelligence sources.

From the first moments of the air war, a primary allied target was Iraq's command and control facilities. The aim was to cut off communication between Baghdad-based commanders and Iraqi troops in the south, and to eliminate Saddam Hussein's ability to communicate with his people. However, after five weeks of bombing, neither goal had been attained.

In the first hours of the war Tomahawk missiles destroyed Baghdad's International Communications Center. That wiped out much of the general telephone capability in Baghdad, including many major international trunk lines carrying calls out of the country. Also hit was the main television tower and transmission station, knocking the government television station off the air.

Subsequently, hundreds of daily air sorties were aimed at communications facilities. One after another they were destroyed, but no matter how many were hit, Saddam still seemed able to communicate with his troops and people.

Pentagon sources attribute this ability to a combination of expensive high-tech equipment the Iraqis assembled over the past several years and to some relatively low-tech solutions.

On the high-tech end, the Iraqis may have acquired — from Soviet, French and British sources — "frequency-hopping" communications gear. This state-of-the-art equipment allows radio messages to be sent in such a way that the frequency they are being carried over changes every few seconds. Both the sending radio and the receiving radio are computer-programmed with the multitude of frequency changes, and both sending and receiving radios are synchronized to change instantly in unison.

Someone listening in cannot possibly follow the frequency changes and thus cannot jam or overhear the communication. Nor can the communication easily be traced to its point of origin.

Pentagon sources say the super-secret National Security Agency has developed a method of simultaneously monitoring a broad spectrum of frequencies, of recording everything heard, and then having a computer reassemble the transmission. However, this is a difficult, slow and still-inexact process.

In addition, the Iraqis have apparently obtained the latest in encryption devices. Reportedly, they have put most of their high-level military transmissions into complex, randomly generated codes. Pentagon sources report that the Iraqi code machines are also state-of-the-art and that the resulting codes are very difficult to break.

Ironically, though, what appears to be causing the allies the most trouble is a low-tech solution. The Iraqis have buried thousands of miles of fiber-optic and regular telephone lines connecting Baghdad and military centers in central Iraq with the southern front and Kuwait. These lines are not susceptible to satellite detection, and they are buried so deep that they are almost impossible to destroy from the air.

The key to this telephone communication system, say Pentagon intelligence sources, is that the thousands of telephone lines do not emanate from, or even pass through, any central point. Rather, Iraq has established a series of some 50 command centers from which lines reach equally into the system. Thus, no one center is used two days in a row, and if one center is destroyed, operations are quickly shifted to another.

Reportedly, many of these communication centers are hidden in civilian structures such as apartment buildings, hospitals, mosques and even a sub-basement of the Al Rashid hotel where the Western press corps is housed.

Pentagon sources insist that the Amiriya bunker was one of these active communication centers. In the week before the air attack that dropped a pair of 2,000-pound delayed-fuse smart bombs down a ventilation shaft, U.S. electronic intercepts had eavesdropped on extensive communications coming from the bunker. It is also believed that Saddam Hussein himself used the bunker several times since the air war started and had been there during the same week of the deadly attack.

After the bombing Western television crews were allowed to roam through the structure and reported seeing no communications facilities. Pentagon sources say reporters were only shown what was left of the top two levels of the largely demolished structure. Its Swedish builder confirms that two additional lower levels exist. The Pentagon says the Iraqis flooded them to prevent access. It was on these levels the communication center was located.

Alter five weeks of bombing, neither goal had been attained.

Soviet human rights activist crusades

WASHINGTON — A year ago, Almaz Esketov was an aide to two high-ranking members of the Supreme Soviet. Today, he is homeless in Washington, D.C., relying on friends to give him a place to sleep. He passed a couple of nights in Union Station — nicer digs than the steam grates, but no place to call home.

Esketov is from the Soviet republic of Kazakhstan, and he is a peace and human rights advocate. For a brief period under Glasnost, that was not a crime. But last fall, Esketov led a demonstration in front of the KGB headquarters to protest nuclear weapons testing, and President Mikhail Gorbachev stripped him of his citizenship.

With hardliners threatening Gorbachev's power, he no longer has the luxury of tolerating the dissent that Glasnost once promised.

Gorbachev says he hasn't backed off of his campaign to liberalize the Soviet system. But the crackdowns in Lithuania and Latvia say otherwise. On Jan. 13, Soviet troops invaded Lithuania's broadcasting center in Vilnius and killed at least 13 people. Then a Soviet militia stormed Latvia's interior ministry in Riga, killing four people.

Gorbachev played dumb. He said the military was acting on its own, and he ordered an investigation. But he also kept the troops patrolling the Baltic cities. Gorbachev is desperate to hang on to the republics that are pulling away from the Soviet Union.

One of the casualties of Gorbachev's panic is free speech. Journalists are once again being censored. And, if Esketov is any indicator, demonstrators are risking retaliation.

Esketov's long dark hair and beard can't hide the passionate commitment in his eyes. Human rights groups in the United States are starting to listen to him.

A Muslim and an anti-war activist, Esketov became an assistant to two Supreme Soviet deputies, Olzhas Suleimenov and Mukhtar Shakhhanov, in the late 1980s. He was also editor of a newspaper called Turkestan. He had a warm relationship with officials at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow and met with a congressional delegation that visited Moscow last year.

But his biggest crusade, nuclear testing, got him in trouble. Esketov told our associate Scott Sleek about the growing number of children in his republic of Kazakhstan suffering from oncological diseases such as leukemia. He believes that is the result of sloppy nuclear weapons testing procedures.

Last fall, Esketov made his concerns public in the demonstration in front of the KGB building. When Gorbachev expelled him from the country, he came to the United States to bring attention to his cause.

Despite the expulsion, Esketov still believes Gorbachev's policies deserve support because the Soviet president is still the main hope of the Soviet people to overcome communism. "The best way to speed change, Esketov says, is to weaken the conservative wing of the Soviet government that is threatening Gorbachev.

Meanwhile, Esketov has more pressing problems. He searches for work in America, tells his story to human rights groups and sleeps in a strange place every night.

CHAIN MAIL — One of the more prestigious mailing lists in U.S. postal history is the one making its way through the mails on, of all things, a chain letter. This letter has no financial come-on and makes no dire threats if the chain is broken. It merely sends good wishes to anyone who gets it, and some very big names have joined the chain.

Gorbachev says he hasn't backed off.

downtown Sanford. On Saturday, the opening day was deemed successful despite some brief weather problems. Artisans and craftsmen from throughout Florida and many other states were on hand to display their work for sale as well as in competition.

Some of the entrants came to Sanford from as far away as Colorado, Wisconsin, Oklahoma, California and Michigan. Individual items specifically entered in the arts and crafts competition were taken to the Chamber of Commerce building where judging was done late Saturday afternoon. Festival officials reported the total number of individual booths signed up for this year's event is 126, offering such items as food and beverages, in addition to the arts and crafts.

The weather was warm as the festival opened Saturday morning, but shortly before noon, dark clouds began to appear, heading toward the park area from the north.

One of the advantages of chamber membership is the business referrals, available not only through the regular Chamber News publications but through contacts made during regular meetings and Business After Hours functions. Chamber members are also urged to conduct business with other members whenever possible. Parker said that new chamber members will still be able to take advantage of the current annual membership fees, which will increase slightly in the near future. Information on new memberships can be obtained by phoning the Lake Mary Chamber of Commerce office at 333-4748 during regular business hours or contacting a present member of the chamber.

Sanford's contribution

These photographs of Sanford-area service men and women were collected through Sanford's Operation Desert Storm Support Group. Only 71 of about 160 area troops are pictured here because many photographs were unavailable.

Many of these photos, received by families as gifts from loved ones, bear messages such as, "I'm going to make you proud," or simply "I love you." For many mothers, wives, husbands and daughters, parting with these photographic souvenirs from their loved ones overseas — even temporarily — was not easy.

The support group plans to welcome home these soldiers with a monumental parade and other festivities. Fundraising and planning for those festivities have already begun. For information about or donations to the parade committee, call organizer Judy Osborn at 323-0105.

Baltic separatists predict victory

By BRIAN FRIEDMAN
Associated Press Writer

RIGA, U.S.S.R. — Nationalists in Latvia and Estonia hope independence referendums Sunday duplicate those by neighboring Lithuania and unite the Baltic nations in their march away from the Soviet Union.

The votes are a pre-emptive strike against a March 17 Kremlin-ordered nationwide referendum asking citizens if they want to preserve the union.

"One important reason is to have all three Baltic states moving in the same direction in their course for restoring independence," said Juris Dobelis, a Latvian legislator and coordinator of the referendums.

Dobelis spoke to reporters Friday in Latvia's parliament building, which is surrounded by walls of huge concrete blocks and sandbags. The separatist government erected the barricades following the January crackdown by Soviet troops that left 22 people dead in Lithuania and Latvia.

Dobelis said even though his republic's poll is non-binding, it had "political and tactical" significance.

"Also, we decided to show in spite of the fact that after World War II, more than a million immigrants were flooded into Latvia (by the Kremlin), that we can even find in the midst of these immigrants people who support the independence of democratic Latvia," Dobelis said.

"We also want to convince the international community and world opinion that we are able to continue on our path toward independence in Latvia," he added.

Lithuanians voted in favor of independence by a 91 percent margin in their polls Feb. 9. Roughly 80 percent of the republic's residents are ethnic Lithuanian, but even predominantly Russian and Polish areas supported independence.

The margins Sunday are expected to be closer. Only 54 percent of Latvia's 2.7 million people are ethnic Latvian, and 33 percent are Russian. In Estonia, 65 percent of its 1.5 million people are ethnic Estonian and 28 percent are Russian.

Latvia has 1.8 million eligible voters and Estonia 1.1 million.

At least 112 observers from a dozen Western nations, including the United States and Canada, have fanned out across Latvia to monitor the vote. Final results were expected Monday or Tuesday. Polls close at 8 p.m.

Dobelis predicted that 75 percent of Latvian voters and a third of all ethnic Russian, Byelorussian and Ukrainian residents will vote "yes" on the question: "Do you support the democratic and independent statehood of the republic of Latvia?"

Even a Communist Party hard-liner conceded that the vote will favor supporters of independence, but said he was eager for the Kremlin's poll.

"We are going to have two different results after two referendums — one on March 3, the other on March 17," Col. Viktor Alkanis said in an interview in Moscow.

Georgians build army to fight political foes

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer

TBILISI, U.S.S.R. — Before Zviad Gamsakhurdia's pro-independence party won a majority in the Georgian parliament last fall, he surrounded himself with armed men that he called his "friends."

Now he is appointing them to top positions on the Georgian police force and calling them his army.

The aspirations of Gamsakhurdia, whose party holds 155 seats in the 250-member legislature, present Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev with one of the most explosive ethnic problems he has faced to date.

"We are creating our own army," Gamsakhurdia told The Associated Press in a recent interview.

Gamsakhurdia's critics say he plans to use that army against his political opponents and the non-Georgians who make up 31 percent of Georgia's 5.3 million people.

But the 62-year-old Gamsakhurdia, whose father, Konstantin, was an acclaimed Georgian novelist, is a hero for most Georgians. They elected his Round Table-Free Georgia coalition on a platform of independence for the small Christian republic perched between the Caucasus Mountains and Turkey.

Georgians are a proud race, with a strict code of honor honed in bloody but vain resistance to waves of invaders that included Persians in 523 A.D. and the Soviet Red Army in 1921.

Gamsakhurdia, whose dissident activities landed him in jail and internal exile in the 1970s, has pushed a program of gradual independence from the Soviet Union, trying to disentangle Georgia from the Kremlin's highly centralized economic and political system.

He wants to raise the prices of the fruits and wines for which Georgia is famous in order to buy Soviet oil, natural gas and other raw materials on which the republic depends.

"Here we have committed a revolution," Gamsakhurdia said. "We changed our constitution. ... The working of the Soviet constitution has almost stopped on our territory."

His parliament passed a relatively modest package of laws that includes changing the Georgian flag, anthem and national emblem, as well as suspending elected local governments in favor of prefects appointed by him and approved by the legislature.

So far, Gamsakhurdia has not followed through on his campaign program of transferring farmland and industry from state to private ownership.

But he has tried to remove Georgia's Interior Ministry and KGB from the control of the Kremlin. Similar steps in the Baltic republics have provoked confrontation with Gorbachev.

The Baltic republics of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia seem committed to peaceful secession from the Soviet Union, but Georgians may fight. Numerous armed groups have sprung up.

Armed bands of Gamsakhurdia supporters regularly stop cars on the outskirts of Tbilisi, searching for arms and enemies. Exchanges of gunfire are common.

Gamsakhurdia's Interior Ministry has 10,000 troops, plus a handful of armored personnel carriers. He wants to expand that force by many times.

Hundreds of those troops now ring the city of Tskhinvali, capital of the enclave of South Ossetia in mountainous north-central Georgia, the scene of the hottest current ethnic conflict in Georgia.

The amount of personal loan interest that's tax deductible in 1991.

The amount of closing costs you pay on our home equity loan.

Two Reasons For Getting A Barnett Home Equity Loan That Have Nothing In Common.

As many of you probably already know, the tax laws have changed. And as of January 1991, the interest on most personal loans is no longer deductible.

Just about the only personal interest that is deductible is that which you pay on your home.*

That's where a Barnett Home Equity Loan comes in. Not only do you get a loan with tax deductibility, you also get one that's very flexible. You can use it to pay for a car, a boat, a vacation or tuition.

You can even use the funds to make certain investments or consolidate other loans into just one payment.

That's not all.

Now through May 15, Barnett will pay the closing costs associated with the loan. That can save you hundreds of dollars right from the start.

To make things even easier, you can have your loan payment automatically deducted from your checking or savings account. And if you have recurring borrowing needs, ask about Barnett's Home Equity Credit Line.

So come in to your local Barnett office and find out how a couple of things that have nothing in common can actually save you money.

*Subject to certain important qualifications generally, interest paid on home secured loans is tax deductible. Please consult with your individual tax advisor for the tax consequences of any Barnett loan.
Offer applies only to 15-year Equity Loans. Several closing costs apply to other mortgage loan programs. Offer expires May 15, 1991. © 1991 Barnett Bank Inc.

Viability of aging fleet questioned

By MARCIA DUNN
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL — The space shuttle Discovery has been carrying astronauts into orbit for nearly seven years. Atlantis for almost six. Next month, Columbia will celebrate the 10th anniversary of its first flight.

As NASA prepares to haul Discovery back to the hangar because of cracked door hinges, many are questioning the viability of the aging fleet. It's the third time in less than a year the space agency has had to pull a shuttle off the launch pad for repairs.

Discovery, NASA's most traveled spaceship, was to have made its 12th trip on March 9, but the military mission is now targeted for late April or early May. Atlantis, whose door hinges seem fine, is set to blast off in early April.

"Nobody has ever flown a shuttle 12 times, and nobody knows what's going to come next," said former NASA historian Alex Roland. "I'd be inclined to expect more surprises rather than less." He said he had been skeptical from the start about NASA's goal of making each shuttle last 100 flights.

Columbia's aluminum door hinges also are cracked, but not so badly as those on Discovery.

The hinges on two doors on the belly of the orbiter that cover fuel lines are original shuttle parts. There are no spares because no one thought they would be needed. NASA plans to replace Discovery's cracked hinges with parts from the nearly finished shuttle Endeavour, while making more pieces.

Design, more so than age, produced the fault, said Keith Hudkins, director of NASA's shuttle orbiter division. The doors are opened and closed in the hangar more than anyone envisioned, he said.

Launch director Bob Sieck said it's inevitable "some hardware is going to require periodic replacement" though NASA would prefer to make replacements "on a planned basis as opposed to having to do it because it falls or breaks at the wrong time."

Discovery's cracks were detected Feb. 18, three days after the shuttle arrived at the launch pad. They were missed in the hangar because the two hinges on each door are not normally checked, officials said.

Engineers determined wear and tear caused small stress cracks on the lugs of the 4-foot-square doors' hinges. Those somehow gave way to two 2-inch-long crevices, one on each door. Not knowing exactly when or why the large cracks occurred prompted officials to order repairs Thursday, even though tests indicated the doors probably would work in space.

Both doors must shut tightly once the external fuel tank drops off shortly after liftoff. Otherwise, the shuttle could be destroyed during its fiery plunge to Earth.

NASA managers opted for the conservative route even though that meant disrupting the flight schedule. Seven missions had been scheduled this year; one likely will be dropped. Nine were planned last year; six were achieved.

Roland, now a history pro-essor at Duke University, believes NASA once would have flown with the cracks.

"They've been so chastened by the Challenger explosion that they're very careful now," Roland said.

Last summer, NASA moved Columbia and Atlantis off the launch pad and back to the hangar because of hydrogen leaks. In the nine years before that, shuttles had been sent back only three times.

Last year's grounding, the second longest in shuttle history, makes Discovery's setback especially disappointing for NASA workers.

Florida KKK reportedly resurging

By Associated Press

MIAMI — Florida is one of three southern states where the Ku Klux Klan is on a noticeable upswing, a new study says.

The study, released by the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, said Florida's Klan groups have seen recent growth in strength and activity, and membership now numbers about 100.

During the last decade, the national population of the Klan declined from 11,500 to an estimated 4,000, officials of the New York-based ADL said.

However, the numbers have stabilized and there has been a recent increase in activity, such as cross burnings and demonstrations. Michael Winograd, associate director of the ADL's regional office in Miami, said Friday.

Klan organizations and activities in at least 10 Central and North Florida cities were mentioned in the ADL study. "The KKK Today: A 1991 Status Report."

In the Southeast, Georgia and North Carolina also have shown "significant gains" in Klan activity, while Tennessee, Louisiana and Mississippi have registered "minor gains," the report said.

"The Southeast is the traditional stronghold of the Klan and that continues to be the case," said Winograd.

"Deepening social problems and the recession have made it easier for the KKK's hateful messages to be heard and could spur renewed KKK growth, especially if the recession becomes lengthy," said Gary Zaslaw, chairman of the ADL's fact-finding committee.

However, as Klan activity has increased, so has public outrage. Winograd said.

"We're seeing a strong response from law enforcement and from communities rejecting criminal activity," he said.

Florida has adopted some of the toughest hate-crime laws in the country.

Trade official trying to polish image in Japan

By BILL KACZOR
Associated Press Writer

PANAMA CITY BEACH — When Japanese think of Florida their image is of Walt Disney World, "Miami Vice," beaches and resorts.

Yuichi Osawa wants them to think Florida also is a good place for business investment and a source of imports, particularly citrus, boats and other marine products, computer software and medical equipment.

The Japanese businessman received a contract late last year to serve as Florida's Tokyo-based trade representative after working voluntarily on the state's behalf for nearly two years.

"I felt kind of a mission since my company ... was making money by exporting products outside Japan," Osawa said. "I felt like doing something in reverse since my wife was from Florida."

More than 300 Japanese business people and government officials have been invited to the Florida trade office's grand opening party Thursday.

"It's like an embassy of a country," Osawa said. "If there is no embassy of that state ... (Japanese business executives) don't know where to go when some program happens. So they always select the states that have offices in Japan."

A similar celebration will be held Feb. 27 in Seoul to open Florida's new Korean office, said Tom Slattery, chief of trade development for the state Department of Commerce in Tallahassee.

Florida had a full- or part-time paid representative in Japan for about a dozen years until 1989 when the Legislature slashed funding, forcing the state to close trade offices in all but a couple of countries.

Osawa, however, agreed to represent Florida without compensation until the Legislature last year appropriated money to restore the trade offices and open some new ones. In addition to Japan and Korea, Florida has trade representatives in Toronto, London, Brussels and Frankfurt. Slattery signed a contract last week for a seventh office in Sao Paulo, Brazil.

The Legislature also dedicated money from a new rental car fee to the trade offices, effective July 1 of this year, which should spare them from future spending cuts.

Osawa, 40, is managing director of his family's Win Lighter Corp., which makes cigarette lighters. His younger brother manages the business on a day-to-day basis so he can work part-time for the state. The office also has two full-time staffers.

He and his wife, Sonia, met in Tokyo where she worked for the U.S. government. They and their two children live in nearby Lynn

When Dennis comes marching home again, hurrah! hurrah!

By LAGY BOWEN
Herald People Editor

LAKE MARY — Cindy Brown has had an eventful week.

The long-time Lake Mary resident was treated to a surprise 40th birthday party when friends Barbara Carroll, Maureen Liberatore and Betty Fortner whisked her away from her printing business on the pretext of delivering yellow ribbon to make bows.

"They knew I'd fall for it. I walked right into that one because I'm not doing too well these days," Brown admitted.

With her spirits buoyed by good friends, she said it wasn't turning 40 that was so bad, although she dubbed the event the "birthday week from hell."

Brown said she isn't doing so well without her husband of 18 years, Dennis, at her side. Dennis, a Seminole County Corrections Officer, is also a water purification specialist in the Army Reserve. He is currently serving in the Persian Gulf.

"Even with the war ending, and I'm very relieved, he may not get to come home right away. There is so much devastation there now," Brown said. "I told him to make sure the Army knows he's a corrections officer. With all the Iraqi prisoners, I thought they might let him out of Iraq," she jokingly added.

Brown's eyes welled with tears when she discussed the turmoil family members face when loved ones are in danger.

She credited her dear friends in Lake Mary and her mother-in-law, Sanford resident Irene Brown, with helping her through this trying time.

"My friends are beautiful. And I'm Irene's favorite daughter-in-law, she smiled and said through her tears.

Brown said she and Dennis devised a secret code to use during phone calls. Dennis is not permitted to divulge any information about his whereabouts.

"He's in Iraq, I know," she said.

She also said Dennis, who has been gone since November, is ready to come home.

"He said he's not as young as he was during Viet Nam. He's getting too old for this," she chuckled. Dennis is 42.

Brown has worn ribbons and a metal bracelet in support of her husband and all allied troops. She has been instrumental in making and placing large yellow bows around Lake Mary, her friend Mary Jane Duryea said.

"She's so sweet and just quietly does things for everyone. We wanted to do something for her. We know how much she misses Dennis," Duryea said.

Among the 40 guests at the party were: Ralph and Pauline Stevens, Irene Claypool, Hester Weir, Maurie McAllister, Margaret Wesley, Mary Wolff, Claire O'Conner, Nellie McCarthy, Bernice Bayliss, Barbara Duncan, Brad Tallmon, Helen Gannon, Alta Ombres, Emily Jenkinson, Fay Carson, Dottie Smith, Margie Seay, Arolyn Truc, Liz Knott and Norman Neuss.

Brown said the party was wonderful and so are her friends.

"My best presents are my friends," she said.

Brown blushed and smiled.

"And the two yellow roses Dennis sent me from Saudi Arabia," she added.

Cindy Brown anxiously waits for her husband.

Volunteer saves Longwood money

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — Work done by Don Delaney has saved the City of Longwood thousands of dollars. Delaney is not a paid city employee. He is a volunteer.

Recently, Longwood Mayor Hank Hardy sent a letter of appreciation to Delaney on behalf of the city, thanking him for his outstanding contribution, especially in the area of volunteer work which involves checking and insuring that all businesses in the city have current Occupational Licenses.

City Clerk Don Terry said, "Delaney saves just one day a week on this project, but he does a great job. It takes a special type of person to do this, because a lot of folks sometimes become relatively angry when approached about a license. But he is really good at what he does."

The reason Delaney undertook this job was a desire to help his community.

"I was at a city commission meeting one night and they started talking about a lot of things that were not getting done, because of a low budget and a few other things," he said. "So I thought I'd volunteer. The way I figure it, spending one day a week working for the city wouldn't hurt, and that's what I'm doing."

According to Terry, "Delaney has already saved the City of Longwood over $10,000 by finding businesses that do not have the proper occupational licenses."

According to what Delaney has been finding, some businesses have merely failed to renew existing licenses while in a few instances, some businesses didn't get one in the first place.

Hardy's letter, sent earlier this month, also commended Delaney for other work on behalf of the city during the past, including donating time and efforts while serving as an elections clerk, and as a member of the Longwood Canvassing Board during election time.

Living in the Highland Hills section of Mary Volkenning gladly shows Don Delaney her valid Occupational License.

Longwood, he has also been active in the affairs of his subdivision and has undertaken other volunteer work for the past ten years.

Delaney has been working with the Occupational License section of the clerk's department for almost one year.

Getting their kicks

Lake Mary High School Marionettes competed and won in Universal Dance Association's National Dance Team championship at Sea World February 17.

The event will be televised in late March or early April.

There were four categories in which to compete: Pom Pom, Jazz, High Kick and Prop. Each team was allowed to enter only two of the categories.

The Marionettes entered High Kick with a routine titled Look Out for Number 1, which is also this year's theme. Look out for the Number 1 squad: the Lake Marionettes. Out of 25 teams from as far away as California, the Marionettes took 1st place in both the preliminaries and finals with average scores from the judges of 95 and 97. The Lake Marionettes squad was the only team to receive trophies in both of the categories they entered.

The 4 D's: Desire, Declaration, Dependability and most of all, Discipline, paid off for the Marionettes on Feb. 17th. All the grueling sixth period classes and extra practice were worth it, Marionettes said.

The Marionettes also received a trophy for third in the nation in the Prop category.

HOROSCOPES

By Bernice Bede Osof YOUR BIRTHDAY
March 3, 1991

Within your sphere of influence in the year ahead, you may establish a leadership position by promoting an interest that could be of benefit to you and others. The results look promising.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You're presently in a cycle where you should be able to easily establish a friendly rapport with others. This will enhance relationships and help you establish new ones.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If developments test your ingenuity today, they are not likely to find you lacking. Your resourcefulness will be awakened by challenges, be they large or small.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Someone you recently met appears destined to play a prominent role in your present affairs. This is a person for whom you felt an instant kinship.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You're presently in a cycle where you might be more fortunate than usual in advancing your status, as well as enhancing your financial position. There could be some linkage here.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Even though you are likely to author some ingenious ideas today, you will still maintain an open mind. Furthermore, you'll be prepared to make adjustments if someone's suggestions are better than yours.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Early in the day, you might be annoyed by some changes that are implemented by influences over which you have little or no control. However, you'll quickly realize that they will serve your best interests.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Take matters into your own hands in the romance department today. If someone for whom you've been yearning has been reticent, invite this individual out instead of waiting for the phone to ring.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you make them priority issues, several matters which have not been concluded to your satisfaction can be finalized today. Know what you want and hold firm until you get it.

By Bernice Bede Osof YOUR BIRTHDAY

Dealings you have with those who reside far from your present locale should work out favorably for all concerned in the year ahead, especially if they have commercial overtones.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You will not make a favorable impression on associates today if you blame them for mistakes that you authored. Own up to your errors or say nothing at all. Major changes are ahead for Pisces in the coming year.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Manage resources wisely at this time, and don't draw upon reserves just to gratify extravagant whims. What you presently have at hand, you may need later.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A matter you're anxious to negotiate could be a trifle more involved than you realize, and it might not be resolved as quickly as you think. Be patient.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your ability to accurately evaluate information could be your greatest asset today. If someone produces an idea, you should be able, quite quickly, to determine its real worth.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you feel imposed upon by others today, you're apt to reject their demands. However, when motivated by your own congeniality, you're likely to be generous to a fault. (C)1991, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You could be a slow starter today, and you might put more focus on talking about your intentions rather than fulfilling them. Getting involved with uninspired co-workers may only add to your problems.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Usually, you're adept at getting good mileage from the dollars you spend. However, you might run out of fuel before you're halfway through your shopping list today.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If your approach is demanding, you're not likely to be effective at winning friends or influencing people today. For a favorable response, speak to them with consideration.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) It might be easier for you to see things as you would like them to be, instead of as they actually are. Don't confuse optimism with a lack of objectivity today.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Occasionally, you can be overly attentive or unduly generous with individuals who do not merit such behavior. Today will be one of those days. There's a possibility that something opportune might slip past you today, a result of your inability to appreciate it for what it is. Don't make snap judgments where unusual developments are concerned.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) To be on the safe side, it is best to understate your case rather than overstate it today. You may not be a good storyteller, and embellishments will be easily detected.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Loaning something to another that was previously loaned to you could prove to be an unwise policy today. If you don't own it, don't loan it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) When bargaining with another today, don't underestimate your opposition. If you do, someone will make a good deal, but it might not be you.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

In Truscott's "Intermediate Bridge in Three Weeks," the nephew of expert Sam arrives in six spades. He wins the opening club lead and immediately leads a club back, hoping to ruff a club in dummy. But East wins and returns a trump. Poor South cannot avoid going down, since he loses the final trick to East. Sam later explains that the slam should be made. Even if West is leading from a three-card club holding (highly unlikely, since a lead-directing overall on a five-card club suit would be quite dangerous), either defender would certainly lead a trump to prevent declarer from ruffing his last losing club. More likely the three of clubs is a singleton. In that case, declarer can succeed by winning the ace of clubs, cashing just three rounds of trump and then playing A-K of diamonds and ace of hearts. Next comes the lowly two of spades, forcing West to win the trick, and just as inexorably forcing West to get off lead with a red card, giving declarer two club discards on dummy's king of hearts and queen of diamonds.

By giving up an unnecessary trump trick, declarer gets back two tricks and his contract. Now that's more than a fair exchange. (C)1991, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN

Law school for $5 at SCC

By VICKI DeBORMIER
Herald staff writer

Many of the same legal experts, ranging from local attorneys to judges to state legislators, are returning for a second chance to teach the class.

"It was a lot of fun," said Beth Rutberg, an assistant state attorney from Sanford who investigates and prosecutes economic crimes and consumer-related unfair practices.

"I look forward to teaching the class again," Rutberg said.

Rutberg will teach a one-hour session on consumer law.

Each two-hour session will deal with a pair of different topics such as court and legislative processes, consumer law, DUI laws, workers compensation, personal injury and insurance law and wills, estate and financial planning.

The People's Law School is by no means a substitute for a pre-law education, the organizers warn.

"The participants aren't going to be ready to enroll in law school," Torma said, "but they will have a much stronger understanding of many aspects of the legal system."

Rutberg said the thing she found most exciting about the class was seeing the look of comprehension on the faces of the participants as they began to understand concepts that had previously been a mystery to them.

Much of the information given in the class is practical advice, but it helps the public to unravel the complexities of the legal system and to protect themselves from litigation in some cases.

SANFORD — Attending law school can be an expensive proposition.

For those who do not have the financial wherewithal to get their juris doctor degree, Seminole Community College has a less expensive way to learn about the legal system.

The People's Law School, presented last year for the first time at SCC, was very successful in its first incarnation.

This year, the class will begin on March 5 and run through April 23. It will meet in room J-100 from 7 to 9 p.m. each Wednesday evening.

"We had 170 spaces and filled every one of them," said Elaine Torma, the administrative assistant for the Leisure and Lifelong Learning Programs, said. "There were people we had to turn away."

The law school costs five dollars for eight classes which meet once a week for two hours.

"The course is designed to teach the public about the rights, privileges and responsibilities under the judicial system," Torma explained.

Because we live in a litigious society people need to understand the legal system.

According to a report issued recently by the American Bar Association, one in five people will be involved in a law suit some time during his lifetime.

"They need to understand the law," Torma said. "It's almost a necessity for people to learn the legal system."

Businesses encouraged to help schools improve

Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — A top business panel urged fellow executives today to lead the fight for a sweeping school reform agenda stressing the total well-being of children, not just academic gains.

The Committee for Economic Development, a non-profit group of 225 business leaders and educators, said in a new report that "quick and easy" tactics like school choice are unlikely to improve education by themselves.

"The Unfinished Agenda: A New Vision for Child Development and Education," urged corporate chiefs instead to help communities address the full range of social, economic and educational problems afflicting families.

It called for, among other things, $10.23 billion in added spending for prenatal care and early childhood and nutrition programs to help ensure that all youngsters arrive at school physically, emotionally and intellectually ready to learn.

"This amount represents less than 5 percent of the nation's total outlay for elementary and secondary education."

Pain therapy improves patient outcome

By PETER R. PRIGANZ, M.D.
Anesthesiologist

Among the most substantial and potentially beneficial advances in medical sciences in recent years has been the advent of algology, or the study and treatment of pain syndromes.

The introduction of modern pain theories and the understanding of the mechanisms of pain transmission have permitted the physician to intervene earlier in the natural course of a disease or process, and this has often resulted in improved outcomes for patients.

The physician broadly divides pain into one of two categories: acute pain and chronic pain.

Acute pain may be thought of simply as that immediately following an injury or surgical operation. Mainstays of therapy for acute pain include oral and parenteral (injectable) analgesics (pain medications), and are usually quite effective.

One newer modality of treatment is that of patient-controlled analgesia, wherein a small device allows a patient to control his or her own rate of injections of these pain medications. A programmed microprocessor allows a prescribed dosing regimen, not to be exceeded. This form of therapy permits a more steady level of analgesics in the patient's bloodstream, thus affording more effective pain relief while avoiding excessive narcosis or sedation.

One further method of treating acute post-surgical pain in certain patient groups is epidural analgesia. A small catheter is temporarily placed into a potential space in the patient's back, in proximity to those nerve fibers responsible for pain transmission. Injections of small amounts of analgesics through this catheter then result in more profound pain relief, often with less chance of pulmonary complications from impaired breathing, secondary to either excessive sedation or an impaired ability to ambulate about the hospital ward.

Peter R. Priganz, M.D.

Chronic pain is that which persists beyond approximately six months following an inciting injury or cause. The huge costs of chronic pain in human suffering, let alone financial burdens, can hardly be underestimated. It is thought that between 30-40 million Americans live with chronic pain, and it is the single most common cause of disability in those patients under 45 years of age. Work-related injuries account for over 90 million lost work-days per year from the workplace. It is correspondingly estimated that the cost of chronic pain to our society exceeds $40 billion per year.

The social and family consequences nonetheless dwarf these economic concerns. The patient who suffers from chronic pain is virtually by definition under duress, if not actual anguish. Chronic pain may alter or diminish family or interpersonal roles as the patient attempts to cope with his or her condition. Exhaustion and irritability can easily occur.

The patient with chronic pain requires a conventional medical assessment, and is most reliably referred by other physicians to the pain management specialist. The specialist may recommend a regimen consisting of certain diagnostic or therapeutic nerve blocks utilizing local anesthetics, steroid-containing compounds or, in certain instances, narcotic analgesics. The purpose of these is to enhance a correct diagnosis as well as to provide therapy. A knowledge of regional anatomy, the pharmacology of the agents used as well as the management of possible complications is, of course, implied in the decision to use this approach. Conditions that are often amenable to this treatment include cancer pain, myofasciitis, reflex sympathetic dystrophy, and inflammatory nerve pain.

Techniques of neural blockade, properly applied, can certainly play a role in the diagnosis and treatment of chronic pain. However, it must be used in the broader context of full-range physical and psychological modalities. Therefore, the patient must be prepared to undergo important adjunctive therapy, including relaxation techniques as well as physical therapy, to achieve optimum results. The end-points desired in the treatment of chronic pain include decreased pain, diminished use of analgesics, correction of insomnia and an increased ability to engage in the activities of daily family living.

The patient with acute or chronic pain presents a challenging and often complex problem to the medical practitioner. The appropriate diagnosis and treatment of pain is perhaps the most fundamental aspect of the patient-physician relationship, and the successful treatment of these patients can prove most satisfying for those involved in their care.

Carlin-Rogers elected to head council

ORLANDO — Fran Carlin-Rogers has been elected chairman of the state's Long-Term Care Ombudsman Council for District VII, according to a press release from Orlando Regional Medical Center. As chairman, Fran will guide the council in its efforts to survey problem areas and monitor conditions in long-term care facilities. Additionally, she will have input into the state's legislative process, coordinate community education, monitor needs at the district level and assist in the recruitment and training of new ombudsmen.

Employed by Orlando Regional Medical Center since 1987, Carlin-Rogers is the Division Administrator for the hospital's Department of Medical Education.

SKIN TOPICS

RETIN A Therapy for the skin is useful in reversing sun induced skin aging. At least 92% of patients improve with smoothing of fine wrinkles, better texture, increased blood flow, and giving leathery skin a more youthful glow. Benefits go beyond the cosmetic by reversing pre-malignant cells to more normal and this holds promise as a cancer preventative.
