'Slice Of Life' Tales End-Less

DEAR DICK: I like "Lou Grant" but am tired of his shows being unfinished, left up in the air. I am convinced somewhere there are endings to these programs being shown at some other time. Do you agree? L. KNAPP, Kalamazoo, Mich.

You have to understand that "Lou Grant," like "Hill Street Blues" and some other shows in TV's past, are based on a different principle than most shows. They do not have one simple story, with a beginning, middle and end. They are, instead, "slice of life" stories and often there are no conventional endings. They attempt to give the viewer a glimpse of what life is like. In the case of "Lou Grant," they try to show what the newspaper world is like and, by and large, they succeed. But don't expect orthodox story construction.

DEAR DICK: My father and I have a bet. He says that Peter Sellers was not in the movie, "Murder on the Orient Express." I say he was. Who is right? A. SCHNEIER, Princeton, N.J.

Daddy's right. That flick was not a Sellers market.

DEAR DICK: We saw an old three Stooges movie and I'm sure I saw Lucille Ball's name on the screen. Our son says, "no way," but I thought I saw her in the movie, with three other women. Hope you can help me on this, as mother is not right very often. KAY CORCORAN, Las Vegas, Nev.

Mother is right this time. In 1934, Lucille Ball was in a three Stooges film called "Three Little Pigskins." Early in her career, she did several other bits in small films and even shorts. Her first credit, incidentally, was in a '33 film, "Broadway thru a Keyhole."

DEAR DICK: Will you please tell us who wrote the song "I Did It My Way" for Frank Sinatra. I say Bobby Darin. My friend, Eva, says Paul Anka. ERNEST C. PONCE, Private Investigator, Oxnard, Calif.

I think you'd better hire Eva, because it was Anka, not Darin. Actually, so the story goes, Anka found a French melody in '68 and wrote English lyrics to it, and that became "My Way."

DEAR DICK: Years ago, there was a TV series called "Rawhide." What was the name of the leading star, who was the trail boss and was he called Mr. Faber or Mr. Favor? G. BURNS, Warren, Mich.

Eric Fleming, who directed in an accident while filming that series, played Gil Favor. And his co-star, who played a character named Rowdy Yates, was a young actor named Clint Eastwood.

DEAR DICK: Please tell me the name of the actor who plays Prince Barin in "Flash Gordon." R.M.D., Kalamazoo, Mich.

That's the fine, handsome English star, Timothy Dalton.

KAZARIAN BEATS THE PRICE!

By STACI BIENVENU

"IF YOU'RE UNDER 25: If you own a van or a pick-up, or if you just need immediate minimum Auto or Truck Insurance coverage—you need to call me." Yes, according to Ralph Kazarian, "You may be paying too much for your Auto Insurance..."

RALPH KAZARIAN

Mr. Kazarian is fully aware that we, as drivers, are tired of reading deceptive ads about how we can beat the high cost of our auto insurance, but there is something definite that sets him apart—specialization. He's an unusual man in his line of business, for he is willing to give hard-luck YOUNG DRIVERS a more-than-fair chance on their auto or truck insurance.

"I feel that young people, in many cases, are unjustifiably charged high rates, and I know that many may be short on cash. That's why monthly payments are our specialty. Furthermore, there are a large number of drivers under 25 that are paying high rates due simply to their age; others are penalized because of their personal tastes in automobiles. Finally, customers who need minimum insurance coverage are turned away repeatedly. To overcome these situations is my whole reason for being in business."

Yes, this all sounds quite promising, but just how can Ralph Kazarian afford to offer a truly better price to you and me?

"I've shopped for years to find companies who offer the best possible rates for my particular customers. As a result, I broker business with 30-35 Auto, Truck, Motorcycle, Motor Club, Mobile Home & Motor Home Insurance companies that target their effort to my particular customers. This allows me to give my customers the insurance they need at the price they want to pay."

And Mr. Kazarian has proved himself to be quite successful in his approach. After 15 years in the business, he's established himself as an institution within the auto and truck insurance business in Florida.

To prove his ambition and determination he's opened eleven offices in the last two years in the Central Florida area—in addition to his Orlando office which is located in the Bright-BLUE Building at the corner of Mills and Colonial (898-2454).

There are two additional Ralph Kazarian offices located in the Orlando-Sanford area: Altamonte Springs (824-2454) and Sanford (323-2454).

So...if you're really interested in finding out how to get the insurance you need...at the price you want to pay—stop by one of Ralph Kazarian's offices.

19 Dead; 10 Hurt In Chicago Fire

CHICAGO (UPI) — Fire turned an aging, Uplown residential hotel into an inferno early today, killing 19 people and injuring 10 others.

Firemen found the body of the 19th victim huddled in a gutted stairwell of the four-story brick building about 6 hours after the fire broke out.

"We think we've got 'em all," a fire department spokesman said.

The victims were not immediately identified.

Investigators said the blaze apparently started in a basement laundry room and raged up the stairs, finally exploding in a giant fireball that burst through the roof and upper floor windows.

Choking clouds of black smoke billowed from the 72-unit complex.

Next Move Uncertain

Libya Turns Hijackers Away

DAMASCUS, Syria (UPI) — Libya today refused to give asylum to the hijackers of a Pakistani airliner or a group of Pakistani political prisoners already enroute to Libya in exchange for the release of 102 hostages held for 13 days.

The unexpected turnabout by Libya all but wrecked any chance of ending the world's longest hijacking today.

"Pakistan's Defense Ministry said 'Libya, on reconsideration, has decided not to receive either the hijackers or the released prisoners in its territory.'"

The ministry said President Mohammad Zia ul-Haq is likely to confer soon with Syrian President Hafez Assad to learn what arrangements Syrian authorities propose to make now for the release of the hostages.

Libya earlier had agreed to take the 54

Neighbors in the poverty-stricken neighborhood — some sobbing — huddled together in the pre-dawn darkness on usually-busy Kenmore Avenue, watching helplessly as the flames consumed the building.

One elderly man stood for hours in the middle of the street, staring, sobbing and saying nothing.

A woman who lives across the street said the old building "looked like hell itself" at the height of the blaze.

"It was terrible, terrible," she sobbed. Firemen with ladders carried 15 people to safety. Ten people were hospitalized for injuries suffered in the blaze.

The third and fourth floors of the building were gutted.

Most of the dead were residents of the prisoners, the three hijackers and members of their families.

Pakistan officials had been expected in Damascus today to supervise the release of the hostages, said to be suffering from severe mental stress.

Four ambulances and a bus stood beside the green and white Pakistani airliner, parked in a corner of Damascus airport, to ferry the freed hostages to a Syrian military hospital as soon as they are allowed off the aircraft.

The Libyan announcement came as a Syrian airliner carrying the Pakistani political prisoners was about to land in Tripoli, Libya, after a two-hour stopover in Aleppo, Syria, 250 miles north of Damascus.

The news of Libya's reversal was conveyed to Pakistan's ambassador in Tripoli by Libya's foreign minister, the fourth floor.

Two residents of the building, awakened by the fire, ran door-to-door waking their neighbors and helping them flee. But several apparently were trapped in the stairwell by the flames and smoke.

John Hutter, 31, who has lived in the building for nearly three years, was in his fourth-floor room when the fire broke out.

He said he grabbed his glasses, opened his window and yelled for help.

"It was black smoke and we couldn't see a thing," he said.

Several building residents said they heard rumors the fire was the work of an arsonist. Fire officials said the blaze was under investigation.

Pakistan Defense Ministry said.

"This has come to the government of Pakistan as a complete shock," the ministry said.

The Libyan decision also was delivered to the Syrian authorities, the ministry said.

Syrian security officials had first determined the 54 prisoners were those whose freedom was demanded by the hijackers in exchange for the hostages.

The Syrian ambassador in Tripoli was prepared to meet the plane in Libya and verify that the prisoners and their families arrived safely.

The three air pirates promised they then would release the hostages, including three Americans. The hostages are still being held at gunpoint inside a Pakistan Airlines Boeing 720 at Damascus airport.

Will Communications Merger Avoid Past Mistakes?

By BRITT SMITH

Herald Staff Writer

Is it really better the second time around?

The Seminole County Sheriff's Office and the Longwood Police Department certainly hope so as they move closer to merging their communication operations ... again.

The departments, along with police in Sanford, Altamonte Springs, Oviedo, and Winter Springs, tried something very similar back in 1973-74 and it failed miserably.

But the mistakes of the past will not be repeated, according to sheriff's spokesman John Spolski.

"The way the system was set up before, it was doomed to failure from the outset. It was a case of too many cooks spoiling the stew."

Spolski explained: "We had one small room in the courthouse for our communications center with personnel from each department all trying to dispatch calls and use the equipment at the same time. It was mass confusion."

"Plus, you had all these people from the various city police departments making different salaries which made for morale problems. Then, unfortunately, you had the petty rivalries between the various departments which hindered efficiency."

The second time around promises to be different if for no other reason than that Longwood is the only city linking up with the county. Although the Altamonte Springs and Winter Springs police departments may follow suit, they have as yet made no firm decision.

Under the proposed set-up, scheduled to be operational by May 1, all calls coming into the Longwood police department will be automatically switched to the county control center from where a city patrol car will be dispatched.

The advantage of this, from Longwood's point of view, is that "they will save about $40,000 a year in dispatchers' salaries and they won't have to spend several thousand dollars for new radio gear which they were in bad need of," Spolski said. "All the dispatchers will be on the sheriff's payroll so you won't have any of the old money or morale problems, either."

Spolski also said the merger would result in more efficient communications.

"As it was, Longwood usually had only one person on duty trying to do everything at once — answer the phone, dispatch cars, talk with officers in the field, use the teletype," he said. "It was hectic. And you had real problems when that person had to eat or go to the restroom."

In addition to the performance and monetary benefits, "what Longwood residents will get from all this is improved police protection," he said. "If there is a crime in the city, we will know about it immediately and can send a back-up if needed."

Spolski said the sheriff's office will require no new equipment to shoulder the added responsibility, "but we will need some more people. The addition of Longwood, plus the nearly doubling of our own dispatching load in the last four years, will necessitate the hiring of few new communications personnel — at a total cost of about $40,000 — in the next budget year" which begins Oct. 1, he said.

Raw Materials Stockpile Ordered

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For the first time since 1961, the United States will buy strategic materials, like titanium and platinum, for the national defense stockpile.

President Reagan issued the order Friday and later in the day — just minutes before the closing of commodity trading — it was announced that cobalt tops the administration's shopping list.

"It is now widely recognized that our nation is vulnerable to sudden shortages in basic raw materials that are necessary to our defense production base," Reagan said in a statement.

He said deficiencies in the existing $15-billion National Defense Stockpile, scattered around the country at 106 sites, had been highlighted in congressional hearings.

The administration has budgeted $100 million for the stockpile purchases in the fiscal 1981 and another $120 million in 1982.

The cobalt announcement was made by the General Services Administration to a roomful of news reporters and metal traders.

Afterwards, an industry executive said the action could be a boon to metal traders and some metals industries. He said, for example, that the vanadium and copper industries have been ailing lately.

Roy Markton, a GSA spokesman, said cobalt, an exotic metal used in high-temperature alloys, was currently selling for $20 per pound. The government plans to buy 1.2 million pounds of the metal, which is vital for jet engines and magnets.

Top priority will be given to acquisition through purchase or barter of materials that are far below their target stockpile levels, said Bernard Gallagher, acting director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

State Enters Dog Track Suit

In an effort to protect the state's potential multi-million dollar stake in the case, the State Attorney General has joined a lawsuit between three central Florida dog racing tracks.

Following a 45-minute hearing Friday, Seminole Circuit Judge Kenneth Leffler granted a motion by John Rimes of the Attorney General's Office of Legal Affairs to join the suit as a co-defendant along with the Seminole Greyhound Park of Casselberry.

The suit, filed last summer by the Sanford-Orlando and Daytona Beach kennel clubs, challenges the constitutionality of a 1980 law allowing the Seminole park to convert from a horse to a dog track.

Friday's action was the latest step in the on-going legal battle between the three tracks. The case has tentatively been set for trial on April 27 and 28.

On Thursday, Leffler denied a request by the Sanford-Orlando and Daytona Beach clubs for a temporary injunction to stop construction at Seminole Greyhound pending final disposition of the lawsuit.

In arguing his case before Leffler Friday, Rimes said the state has two primary reasons for entering the fray: "to maintain the integrity of the laws of Florida," but more importantly, because "there is a great deal of revenue at stake here."

For example, the Daytona Beach club has paid roughly $24 million in taxes during the past 10 years and "we don't want to lose something like that," Rimes said. The Seminole park, if allowed to open, would likewise generate considerable tax revenues, he said.

"For over 100 years, the Attorney General has had the authority to intervene in any case in which the state has an interest, and we certainly do in this one," he said.

Daytona club attorney John Goodbee Jr., however, said, "when it's private litigation, which this is, the Attorney General doesn't have a right to be there."

Goodbee suggested the state's top legal officer wait until after trial, "when the state's interest is clear, before intervening." Depending on the final ruling, intervention may not be necessary, he said. — BRITT SMITH

WORLD IN BRIEF

Key Clue In Killing Of American Nuns Found

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI)—Government investigators have found a bullet believed used in the killings of three American nuns and a lay worker and sent it to the United States for analysis, President Jose Napoleon Duarte said.

In Washington, Secretary of State Alexander Haig said Friday Soviet-bloc arms shipments to Salvadoran insurgents have slowed down but not stopped completely.

The shipments, allegedly through Cuba and Nicaragua, prompted Washington to promise $55 million in military aid and 60 military advisers, including 15 Green Berets, to the nation's beleaguered ruling junta.

U.S.-supplied and trained government troops pressed their offensive against leftist guerrillas in four provinces in what one military source called attempts to "suffocate cores of subversion."

Twenty people died Friday in political violence around the Central American nation.

Pan Am Stewardess Killed

AGANA, Guam (UPI)—The badly beaten and raped body of a nearly nude Pan American airlines stewardess was discovered today on a stretch of beach usually crowded with tourists, police reported.

Pan American officials in Agana identified the victim as Christine Barbara Rudnicki, 25, of New York City. She was based in Honolulu.

A police spokesman said Miss Rudnicki's body was found by children playing on a section of beach popular with tourists.

The area where the body was lying was only about 200 yards from a police reporting station, but in a heavily wooded spot near the beachline. The only clothing found on her body was the top to a two-piece bathing suit, police said.

NATION IN BRIEF

Reporter Never Confirmed Burnett-Kissinger Story

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—A reporter for the National Enquirer has testified he never confirmed a printed report that Robert Burnett acted in a "boisterous" manner at a Washington restaurant and spilled wine on another diner.

Miss Burnett, who filed a $10 million libel suit against the tabloid, was expected to take the stand early next week, her attorney said Friday.

The comedian is suing the Enquirer on grounds it suggested in a 1976 column she was drunk and disorderly as she "trampled around" around the restaurant and got into a "boisterous" argument with Henry Kissinger.

Gregory Lyon said he never determined any argument occurred between Miss Burnett and Kissinger, that Miss Burnett had been "boisterous" or loud, or that she had spilled wine on anybody. Lyon said he told the writer of the story those items should not be printed unless confirmed.

The former secretary of state, who coincidentally was in Los Angeles Friday, told reporters Miss Burnett behaved "in a ladylike fashion" during the disputed dinner.

Baby Saved From Compactor

CHICAGO (UPI)—Just seconds before he was going to push an activating button on the trash compactor of a housing project building, James Bowman heard the muffled cries of an infant.

Bowman, a janitor, told police he had reported for work at Dearborn Homes, a Chicago Housing Authority project, on the city's South Side early Friday and had withdrawn the metal covering separating the garbage chutes from the 8-by-4-foot compactor below.

Bowman said he expected to find a kitten. But instead he found a baby boy, an "exceptionally pretty child," in diapers lying on the garbage heap.

The baby, only four or five days old, was taken to Mercy Hospital and Medical Center where it was in good condition following treatment for exposure.

"He thought it was a cat," said Bowman's supervisor. "And, these guys don't like cats too much because they jump out at you and scratch you. He could have just pushed that button."

Transplant Patient Better

STANFORD, Calif. (UPI)—Mary D. Gohke, the world's only living heart-lung transplant patient, was steadily improving condition Saturday but doctors said she would probably remain in intensive care for at least a month.

A Stanford University Medical Center spokesman said Friday Mrs. Gohke was still listed as critical and stable five days after her operation and was "very, very slowly getting stronger."

She breathes on her own, sits up in bed, drinks liquids, talks with relatives and watches some television.

Mrs. Gohke, 45, received the heart and lungs of a 15-year-old bicycle accident victim in a four-hour operation Monday. She was the first patient to receive a transplanted heart and lungs together in more than a decade.

Soviet Craft Docks With Space Station

MOSCOW (UPI)—Two Soviet cosmonauts guided their spacecraft into a docking with the long-orbiting Salyut-6 space station on a flight dedicated to space pioneers who proceeded then, including the late Yuri Gagarin and Neil Armstrong, Tass reported.

The official Soviet news agency said the docking was completed at 11:33 p.m. Friday (4:33 p.m. EST). The cosmonauts, one of whom was history's 100th space traveler, "are feeling well," Tass reported said.

"After checking the air tightness of the docking unit, the cosmonauts transferred to the Salyut-6 station," Tass said.

The news agency said the crew would check Salyut's equipment and perform any maintenance necessary to ensure the satellite's "further operation in the piloted mode."

Flight Commander Kovalyok, 39, and engineer Savynikh, 41, blasted off in their Soyuz T-4 spacecraft from the Baikonur launching pad Thursday, one month to the day before the 20th anniversary of Gagarin's historic first flight into space April 12, 1961.

Gagarin was killed in the crash of a MIG-15 jet fighter on March 27, 1968, and was given a state funeral. A 90-foot monument to the Soviet astronaut stands in the Moscow square named after him.

The cosmonauts paid tribute to Gagarin's pioneering mission in pre-launch comments published by Tass.

Russian flight engineer Savynikh also touched on several American Soyuz-Apollo experiments. Salyut circles the Earth once every 90 minutes along an orbital path ranging from 150 to 205 miles above the surface, inclined 51.6 degrees.

The Salyut laboratory, launched about 3 1/2 years ago, has been the home of all Soviet cosmonauts ever since. The combination research facility and living quarters is about the size of a large trailer home, and its 100 cubic yards of interior space has enabled Russian fliers to stay aloft for as long as six months at a time.

"Our flight was preceded by Yuri Gagarin's legendary heroic feat," the former spaceship designer said, also noting such historic missions as Neil Armstrong's flight to the moon and the Soviet-American Soyuz-Apollo experiment.

CHRYSLER: ROSY PREDICTIONS DETROIT (UPI)—Chrysler Corp. is riding the auto industry's price war in good order, prompting rosy predictions about the company's prospects from Chairman Lee A. Iacocca.

Sprung by rebates from four domestic manufacturers, sales of U.S.-built cars in early March of 200,031 units were 8.6 percent above 187,855 in the same period last year.

Chrysler's gain was a fatter 51.2 percent — at a time when some analysts thought the company would be swamped by price-cutting rebates offered by Ford Motor Co. and General Motors Corp. last week.

"We went head to head with the big boys," Iacocca told UPI Friday. "I really think this is no fluke. I guess it must mean that the public is discovering our cars."

The good, Iacocca said, is the word of mouth — "I guess, I even feel that post-rebate we've got momentum. With gas prices going up and interest rates dropping ... I think we're going to have a good second quarter," he said.

Chrysler reported sales of 25,900 U.S.-built cars, up 51.2 percent from 17,128 last year. GM said it sold 125,549 cars in the period, up 7 percent from 117,296 last year.

Ford sales of 44,227 were down 3.5 percent from 45,871 in 1980, but Ford had an exceptionally strong period last year.

The Belvidere, Ill., plant, which builds Omni and Horizon sedans, probably will be on overtime "for many months to come," Iacocca said.

...Creationists Will Always Be With Us'

Court Ruling On Creationism Not End Of The Issue

PALM COAST, Fla. (UPI)—Scientists say the recent verdict against teaching the Biblical account of creation in California schools is not the end of the anti-evolution controversy.

"The creationists will always be with us," said Dr. Sidney Fox, director of the University of Miami's Institute for Molecular and Cellular Evolution and one of the world's leading researchers on the origins of life.

A California Superior Court judge ruled March 6 that teaching evolution did not violate the religious rights of fundamentalists. The judge refused to order the teaching of the Biblical account of creation alongside evolution, but did say evolution should be taught as a theory.

Fox, interviewed at an international scientific conference last week, said the scientific creationist movement responsible for the California lawsuit involves "a kind of schizophrenia."

"If you are giving a course in science, you are discussing natural phenomena, but when you bring in supernatural phenomena, that's the end of it. It's no longer science," Fox said.

Dr. Gary Findley, an evolution researcher at Louisiana State University, agreed. He said one problem in the creationist-evolutionist debate is the general public doesn't understand a fundamental property of scientific theory — the potential ability of the theory to be proved false.

"Creation is a theory, but it is not a scientific theory because it starts out with a statement that cannot be falsified," Findley said. "The question of the existence or non-existence of God is not testable. Belief or non-belief in a theory is not support."

Both Fox and Findley, who presented evolution papers at the International Quantum Biology Symposium, said creationists have been quick to note any division of evolution within the scientific ranks.

But the creationist version of current scientific thought on evolution has not always been accurate, they said. "Some of the misrepresentation is malicious," Findley said, while other accounts are oversimplifications. "And they're not ethically correct in the way they go about their simplifications." Fox called the creationist position "intellectually dishonest."

Stakes Are High In El Salvador

El Salvador is a small Central American country in which 12,000 people have been killed in the last 14 months.

The Reagan administration announced in Washington recently that it is sending 20 more Army training advisers and $25 million more in military aid to El Salvador.

Earlier, U. S. economic aid to Nicaragua was suspended until Nicaragua gives assurances that it will halt the flow of weapons through Nicaragua to the rebel guerrillas in their mountain strongholds in El Salvador.

Secretary of State Alexander Haig warned Cuba that this country will take action, if necessary, to keep Cuba from supplying arms to the rebels.

It is clear that the rebel leadership in El Salvador is made up largely of hard-line Marxists. A victory for them would be a victory for communism, for Castro and for the Soviet Union.

It would threaten the stability of other Central American governments, such as the one in neighboring Guatemala, and it could threaten the Republic of Mexico.

We cannot allow such a communist victory in the Caribbean. But in preventing it, we must be sure that we do not jeopardize our good relations with Mexico and Venezuela, which are of more strategic importance to us than is El Salvador and which have democratic governments.

The junta in El Salvador repelled a rebel offensive in January with apparent ease. But it is reported that the rebels are preparing a new offensive, and are stockpiling weapons for that offensive.

Our military aid to the junta can prevent a communist victory. But by itself it will not create the political conditions necessary for peace and less-bitterly within the troubled country.

Recently, El Salvador's President Jose Napoleon Duarte said the peasants would have to wait five to 10 years for the enactment of the second and most important phase of the government's land reform program.

The announcement was expected to increase the peasants' sympathies for the leftist guerrillas.

It is required of us as Americans that we seek to repel the forces of communism, whenever they seek lodgment in this hemisphere, not only by military aid but also by constructively working to improve the lot of the common people.

Such a humanitarian policy is essential in our relationship with the people of El Salvador. They must not become mere pawns in a power struggle between the superpowers.

The Deadbeats

The U. S. government needs to show more aggressiveness in its bill collecting, according to a report by the Office of Management and Budget.

There is about $25 billion owed to federal agencies in unpaid taxes and overdue loans to students, farmers and operators of small businesses.

Furthermore, because these debts remain unpaid, the government is forced to borrow money to cover delinquencies in operating funds.

Interest payments on this borrowed money total $3 billion a year.

The report concludes that most government agencies use inadequate record-keeping methods do not assign enough people to the task of debt collection and generally give the recovery of debts a low priority.

Legislation has been introduced in Congress to increase government efficiency in such matters. The bills would allow the government to report names of delinquent debtors, a move to affect their credit ratings adversely.

Lawmakers expect those who owe the government will pay when faced with losing their credit standing. Let us hope that the proposed legislation will have debtors meaning it when they say, "The check's in the mail."

When Reagan Blinked

There's a lot to be said for the Reagan economic package. Correctly labeled by commentators the greatest change in direction since the New Deal, the case for it is overwhelming.

But on one proposal rejected in the highest councils of the administration the new man succumbed to nervous nellyism — and lost the opportunity to teach the American people a valuable economic lesson (which most of them already understand anyway).

It now emerges that virtually all of the president's economic advisors favored eliminating the tax differential between so-called earned and so-called un-earned income — "un-earned income" being earnings from savings. "Earned" income comes from salaries.

Today, "unearned" income can be taxed up to 70 percent, while "earned" income can be taxed at a maximum of 50 percent.

The Reagan command made the decision to maintain that distinction, doing so not for economic but for purely political reasons.

The almost desperate need in this country today is to encourage investment. Our plant capacity is obsolete, increasingly unable to compete with the modern industrial base of our defeated World War II enemies.

Under these circumstances, does it make any sense at all to penalize savings with taxes up to 70 percent on income derived from it? With taxes on that order, people who have some spare money do not save it. They look for tax shelters. At those tax levels, it sometimes makes sense to lose money. But when a potential investor makes that decision, the rest of us also lose.

The Reagan economic team was able to demote, via an economic model, that eliminating the "earned" versus "unearned" distinction would actually produce more income, not less, for the federal treasury.

What blocked this sensible idea? The fear, among Reagan's "political" people, that it would allow the Democrats to attack them as the "party of the rich."

What pusillanimity. America no longer has, if it ever did have, a culture of envy. The American does not envy or hate the rich: he wants to become rich himself.

And the American understands the crucial need for investment and savings. In rejecting or postponing this proposal, the administration lost the chance to deliver an important economic truth to the people, one that Reagan, an expert at such communication, would deliver with complete success.

If we really do face what economic adviser David Stockman calls an "economic Dunkirk," then this is hardly the time to back down in anticipation of gallitarran demagogy.

The Democrats' counter-attack on the Reagan proposals has been so tepid so far as to suggest that even they know what the mood of the country actually is.

In the televised "answer" to Reagan, starring the rising Senator Gary Hart of Colorado, the Democrats succeeded in convincing us little more than grandstand, a defense of the status quo. This, the nation has decisively rejected.

And So The Black Right Moves On

The neo-conservative Negroes who have leaped into public view following the November election seem intent on eliminating the welfare state that they hold responsible for the plight of black America.

Their leading academician, Dr. Thomas Sowell, has already announced plans to organize groups of sympathetic black conservatives in several U.S. cities.

Dr. Walter Williams has become a distinguished scholar at the Heritage Foundation, whose proposals for the next four years make David Stockman, the budget-slashing budget director, look like Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Now comes the Lincoln Institute for Research and Education, a 3-year-old black think tank.

Its founder, J.A. "Jay" Parker, asserts that black Americans are better off now than they were 10 years ago, that affirmative action should be abandoned and that victims of racial bias should be required to prove the discriminatory intent of their persecutors before receiving relief.

He says that the Rev. Jesse Jackson is "a loser," that school busing is an evil failure and that black leaders are ignoring the most important issue — national security.

Many, if not all, of Parker's views are shared by Sowell, Williams and an unknown number of other black Americans. Those who promote such opinions are threatening to use the delicate legislative, judicial and philosophical machinery that has enabled blacks to record some successes in education, employment and advancement.

Parker was the chairman — and the only black member — of the Reagan transition panel on the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, which he blames for having "created a new racism in which every individual is judged by race."

The panel urged that the EEOC budget be reduced, that a one-year moratorium be imposed on EEOC lawsuits, that the Office of Management and Budget be given review power over EEOC regulations, that supposed victims of discrimination be required to prove intent and that a "private-sector advisory committee" be formed to provide the EEOC with input from the business community.

Next: Survival Flea

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Besides having gained military superiority, the Soviet Union is reported far ahead of the United States in civil defense preparedness.

At hand, for example, is a press release from a California company that makes "survival" dog food.

Since I don't have access to intelligence files, I cannot say with certainty what Russia has been doing in this field. However, the unclassified documents I have seen make no mention of any comparable Soviet development.

Thus it appears we have forged ahead in providing sustenance for dogs that might survive a nuclear attack.

As the press release so astutely points out, there is doubt that in the aftermath of a disaster "a family with little enough food to feed the kids is going to want to use that food to feed their pets."

On the other hand, it adds, in another point well taken, "a good, healthy dog would be a very valuable friend to have around" at such a time.

While the company seems to be thinking mainly in terms of surviving natural calamities, such as flood, famine and pestilence, I see no reason the principle wouldn't apply to nuclear warfare as well.

So you and old Rover are down in the bomb shelter waiting for the radioactivity outside to dissipate. Wouldn't it be a comfort to be able to reach into the cupboard and fetch the poor dog a freeze-dried bone?

Even more so considering that your own freeze-dried survival diet isn't likely to produce enough scraps to justify a doggy bag.

The only weakness in the concept I can see is that survival rations for pets currently are limited to dog food. What of hamsters and parakeets?

At one session, the post-prandial entertainment started with a performance by two bisexual women. Egged on by their audience, the two erotic exhibitionists gradually moved out onto the hotel balcony.

After this inspirational warmup, group sex took over. One astonished newcomer observed activities that rivaled the imaginative combinations in X-rated movies.

Despite the presence of one diplomat from an Iron Curtain country, there was apparently no sinister political motivation behind the sex ring. Most of the diplomats and American bureaucrats were in commercial rather than sensitive positions. Though there was a certain amount of business discussed, one participant said there was never swapping of partners than trade secrets.

The membership of the club is bipartisan. Even staunch conservatives, supposedly of fervid disposition, have been caught up in the frolicking. All members of Congress in the club are men, though one staff aide was a bisexual woman — strikingly brunette.

Starting to get the picture? The saga of Rolf has been a circus from the beginning.

The dog has his own legal defense fund which has been set up by area animal lovers apparently convinced that equality to dogs, cats, taste files, plants, amoebas, and partridges in pear trees.

Rolf is NOT human. He has not been endowed by the Creator with certain inalienable rights. Some people, however, can't seem to make that distinction. One newspaper headline blared: "Plight Of Dog Worse Than Killer," implying that the two could or should be treated equally.

The column went on to compare Rolf with convicted murderer Thomas Otis Knight who recently has his execution

Capitol's Swinging Sex Club

WASHINGTON — While the White House has been inhabited successively by born-again Baptists and the Moral Majority, not all of Washington's immortals occupy their leisure with prayer and hymn singing.

Some, alas, have engaged in unsanctified sexual revelry.

A blonde beauty named Paula Parkinson, perhaps inspired by ABCAM, allegedly has filmed members of Congress cavorting in her bed. But the lascivious lobbyist isn't the only one who's playing the new game of kiss-and-tell that is sweeping Washington.

The latest whippers have to do with a swinging sex club that has recruited several high muckamucks in the federal government and Embassy Row. One of the participants is already putting it all in writing.

And while libertinism along the Potomac may not yet rival the lasciviousness of Gay Paree or ancient Gomorrah, the latest revelations definitely move Washington into the Major Leagues of sex — and give a whole new meaning to its proud designation as "capital of the free world."

Here's the lowdown on the sex club's hijinks — or at least as much as can be chronicled in a family newspaper — as uncovered by my associate Les Whitten:

The club — made up of diplomats, members of Congress and officials of the State, Defense and Treasury departments — has held it licentious meetings every two weeks or so in fashionable hotel suites around town. At least as late as the end of 1979, from five to seven men and seven to 14 women were participating in the orgies.

The top-ranking Pentagon boobah was a randy general; the congressional swingers hailed from California, New York and other states; the Executive Branch was represented by at least one deputy assistant secretary.

As described by an active participant, the orgies began, in the approved Roman tradition, with a sumptuous meal. One Middle Eastern envoy shelled out $1,600 for drinks and food alone at one of the fortnightly gatherings.

At one session, the post-prandial entertainment started with a performance by two bisexual women. Egged on by their audience, the two erotic exhibitionists gradually moved out onto the hotel balcony.

After this inspirational warmup, group sex took over. One astonished newcomer observed activities that rivaled the imaginative combinations in X-rated movies.

Despite the presence of one diplomat from an Iron Curtain country, there was apparently no sinister political motivation behind the sex ring. Most of the diplomats and American bureaucrats were in commercial rather than sensitive positions. Though there was a certain amount of business discussed, one participant said there was never swapping of partners than trade secrets.

The membership of the club is bipartisan. Even staunch conservatives, supposedly of fervid disposition, have been caught up in the frolicking. All members of Congress in the club are men, though one staff aide was a bisexual woman — strikingly brunette.

Rolf is NOT human. He has not been endowed by the Creator with certain inalienable rights. Some people, however, can't seem to make that distinction. One newspaper headline blared: "Plight Of Dog Worse Than Killer," implying that the two could or should be treated equally.

The column went on to compare Rolf with convicted murderer Thomas Otis Knight who recently has his execution

'Vietnam Vets Still Have Raging Inner Conflicts'

The recent public rejection over the return of the hostages from Iran has opened again the agonizing psychological wounds of the Vietnam War.

Although this most unpopular conflict in American history has been over for more than seven years, many of the nine million who served in uniform still have an inner conflict raging.

Some 300,000 were wounded in Vietnam, 75,000 disabled, and over 57,000 died. With us today are the amputees, the blind, the burned, and the spiritually maimed... as from every war. But Vietnam produced a new kind of veteran, embittered, cynical or ashamed, and often feeling betrayed by his own countrymen.

Although most of them are proud that they served, they don't advertise it. Even now, unemployment among younger Vietnam-era veterans runs higher than among nonveterans of the same age. They are the forgotten Americans, hostages to a split in our nation's personality.

It is time to speed up the healing of our wounds. We must open our hearts and welcome home the Vietnam veteran on March 16th, and to plan other activities to show their appreciation for those who served and sacrificed.

The American Legion encourages all Americans to join with its members in a day of remembrance and gratitude on March 16th, and to plan other activities to show their appreciation for those who served and sacrificed.

The average age of the Vietnam dead was 23 years, six out of ten had been in the service less than two years, three out of ten were married, eight of the dead were servicewomen. Of the U.S. Army and 25 American Indians. All but one were U.S. citizens.

Of the 303,704 wounded, nearly a third are seriously disabled. According to a 1980 Harris survey for the Veterans Administration, more than three-quarters of World War II and Korea veterans feel people their own age gave them a friendly reception upon their return from those conflicts; less than half of Vietnam-era veterans feel that way, and the general public overwhelmingly agrees that Vietnam vets were not as warmly received as those returning from earlier wars.

The interest on the national debt has reached a very staggering amount. If we did not have this huge debt and did not have to pay the interest on it, this money could be used to reduce our taxes and help the poor and needy.

One could hardly agree with those greedy and ignorant people who think that the Government is rich and has a lot of money for give-away programs. They think they should continue to get the benefits from them.

Do they ever stop to think who the government is, that they are the sovereign or that they are supposed to show their patriotism?

These free give-away programs have done far more harm in many cases than good because of improper screening and poor administration.

Many, many people have thrown away their pride and have become slothful and indolent because they could get on some of these programs without question.

Chamber Endorses Reagan Programs

We recognize that if all the governmental services desired by some elements of our society are to be provided, then personnel and taxes must be increased. However, it is our belief that the mandate given by the people of this country last November indicated their desire to do without some government services in order to reduce taxes, governmental regulation, and the increase of government personnel.

President Reagan has proposed changes in line with these expressed desires. However, the people of Florida apparently are not going to let the benefits, if Gov. Bob Graham's proposed budget for the next two years is adopted.

We object strenuously to any increased taxes on gasoline for the following reasons:

1. Only about one half of the taxes on gasoline, tags sales and inspection fees currently are spent on the building and maintenance of the transportation system.

2. The 55-mile speed limit, especially for trucks and salesmen who cover long distances, acts to increase the cost of goods and services, without the imposition of additional taxes.

3. There is already a huge surplus in the state treasury that should be used before extracting more dollars from the citizens of this state.

It seems very ironic that since the people that have shouldered to burn less gas that they should now be punished because this has resulted in less revenue. The decreased use of the roads should require less maintenance of them.

We have long opposed the increase of state taxes, employees and services at a rate greater than the population increase within the state.

We would be most pleased if Gov. Graham would follow the guidelines established by President Reagan.

'Give-Aways Do Harm'

Our new President and new administration have taken over the business of our government and are trying to set up a system by which everyone will eventually benefit.

However, it seems like many of our politicians, union leaders, members and free loaders are crying and don't want to help. They still want to continue in the old rut of deficit spending with the inflation rate going up by leaps and bounds.

The interest on the national debt has reached a very staggering amount. If we did not have this huge debt and did not have to pay the interest on it, this money could be used to reduce our taxes and help the poor and needy.

FLORIDA IN BRIEF

Prison Officials Prepare For Possible Inmate Move

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — Corrections officials have spent the last two weeks lining room at prisons around the state in case a judge's order requiring the transfer of 200 Florida State Prison inmates becomes final next week.

Gov. Bob Graham still hasn't decided whether to ask the Florida Supreme Court to reverse Bradford County Circuit Judge R.A. "Buzby" Green, who ordered the FSP inmate population reduced to 700.

Department of Corrections Secretary Louie Wainwright continues to prepare for the transfers that might become necessary if Graham doesn't appeal by Monday's deadline, prison system spokesman Vernon Bradford said Friday.

A special task force of inmate classification experts has been working since Green's order was first entered last October. Acting on that group's recommendations, Wainwright shuffled around 200 inmates over the last two weeks, freeing maximum security spaces.

Anticipating that Graham won't appeal, Green scheduled a hearing for 7:30 a.m. Tuesday to decide whether to enforce the original order or modify it.

Mace Use Provokes Killers

MIAMI (UPI) — A young woman who tried to defend herself against three robbers by spraying them with Mace may have provoked them instead into shooting her, according to police.

Claribel Benitez, 19, died early Friday, from a gunshot wound in the chest. The bullet went through her left breast and exited near the right side of her back.

Police said Miss Benitez was shot late Thursday night, after dropping her broom off at a shopping center supermarket across from their home in Miami's Northwest section.

Before she died she described her attackers to police as three Latin men who demanded her money, jewelry and automobile. She pulled a canister of Mace from her purse and sprayed the men, who fled empty-handed after shooting her.

Doctor Arrested For Fraud

MIAMI (UPI) — A Miami physician who built up a lucrative Medicaid business in five years has been charged with filing false Medicaid claims and 30 counts of illegally receiving Medicaid payments.

Dr. Olga Romani, 51, was arrested Friday and booked into the women's detention center. She is facing 30 counts of filing false Medicaid claims and 30 counts of illegally receiving Medicaid payments.

The charges resulted from a random audit conducted by the new, federally-funded Medicaid fraud unit operating in Florida since last October.

The investigation dealt only with Dr. Romani's billings from August 1979 through January 1981, although she had been taking Medicaid patients since 1976.

Reagan Gives Atlanta $1.5 Million

ATLANTA (UPI) — President Reagan, calling Atlanta's child murders "one of the most tragic situations" in any American city's history, granted the city's pleas for $1.5 million to finance the investigation and sent Vice President George Bush to the city today in a further show of support.

Bush planned to meet with Mayor Maynard Jackson and other city officials this afternoon and scheduled a meeting with several of the victims' families.

Reagan, in announcing the grant Friday, called the killings "one of the most tragic situations that has ever confronted an American city."

"I want the people of Atlanta and the nation to know this administration is doing what we can to bring this tragedy to an end," the president said in an unusual personal appearance in the White House Press Room.

Jackson said the president's decision to allocate money for the investigation would free him and other top officials from the time-consuming task of raising funds.

Reagan said the latest money — sought by Jackson to cover police overtime costs estimated at $150,000 a month — was in addition to $979,000 he provided March 5 to cover crime prevention and mental health costs arising from the case.

10,000 March In Harlem

NEW YORK (UPI) — More than 10,000 candle-carrying people, wearing green scarves and chanting "Save our children," staged a march through Harlem Friday night in remembrance of Atlanta's 22 slain or missing black children.

"I'm overwhelmed to see the crowd because I heard the people in New York didn't care about each other," said Willie Max Mathis, the mother of one of the slain children.

The marchers, led by 22 Harlem children — symbols of the Atlanta victims — walked 25 blocks and police estimated the crowd numbered between 10,000 and 15,000 people.

At the end of the two-hour march, Mrs. Mathis and Mrs. Bell climbed onto a flatbed truck to address the crowd.

"It's not just the children in Atlanta," said Mrs. Mathis, whose 10-year-old son, Jeffrey, was found slain four weeks ago.

"There are 50,000 children missing all over the United States," she said. "I consider this a perversion and we must get rid of this perversion."

Prof Calls For Uniform Capital Punishment Law

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — A criminal justice professor studying American executions believes Congress should draft a uniform capital punishment law and regulate the defense and incarceration of inmates accused of capital crimes.

"There is no consistency of laws around the country," said Dr. David Agresti of the University of South Florida. "This should be a federal concern. It should be a national priority."

"The federal government should assume the responsibility of legislating capital punishment and the custody of those condemned," Agresti said.

whether the decision on federal aid would have been made more quickly if the victims were white, Reagan said his administration was "totally color blind."

Bush, who also attended the news conference, said Jackson's request for money was considered carefully because of its precedent-setting nature in giving aid to a local police department.

"We debated this and decided we should go the extra mile," the vice president said. "On a personal note," Reagan said, "I am deeply touched by the depth of concern and compassion being expressed by Americans in every area of our land."

In addition to the 30 children who have been found slain over the past 19 months in the Atlanta area, two others, Darron Glass, 10, and Joseph Bell, 15, officially are listed as missing, Bell, at first thought a runaway, was officially added to the list Friday.

Richard Harp, the owner of a fast-food restaurant near Bell's home, said the youth had joked about the child killer but was well aware of the danger in Atlanta's streets.

"He used to joke about it — said no kid snatcher was going to get him," Harp said. "But he was on his P's and Q's as far as this is concerned. That's why he would come by here for me to drive him home nights."

one of the victims had called the police task force investigating the cases before his disappearance.

Perry said Patrick Ballazar, 11, who disappeared Feb. 6 and was found dead a week later, and a friend called the task force some time before his disappearance to report an encounter with a man in a car.

He said Ballazar's friend told him he and Patrick were together when "a man in a car chased them back and forth across the railroad tracks."

He said there apparently was no response to the call until earlier this week when task force members talked with the youngster's friend.

Perry said it was likely inexperienced telephone personnel were to blame for the lapse.

He said a two-year file of correspondence, memos of phone calls and memos of meetings which "would describe as non-meetings. The bottom line is that they've told us nothing."

The week after the raids, Lewis sent aides to meet with U.S. Attorney Albee Wampler III in Miami.

Lewis said they were given 24 hours' notice, but upon returning to Tallahassee, discovered the feds had already opened a probe at yet another state bank and had failed to mention it.

Wampler, however, told UPI that Lewis was kept fully informed of "investigations that were that most progressed," including supplying the names of targeted individuals and banks.

The raids were planned in less than 24 hours, Wampler said, and Lewis wasn't notified because Wampler, the agents and five other U.S. attorneys worked around the clock to prepare the warrants.

The agents confiscated numerous bank records as part of "Operation Greenback," a multi-agency investigation into the laundering of drug trafficking profits.

Lewis, who regulates state-chartered banks, said he did not object to the goals of the raids and offered a long list of occasions when his office has passed along information to the feds.

What bothered him, he said, was that agents had agreed to notify the state before taking action at a state-chartered institution. Lewis said he learned of the raids in a newspaper.

If the feds didn't trust his office, Lewis said, "they could have at least let us know after the fact."

"Obviously I have no objection to their goals, but I don't approve of the method. There was actually no need to close down those banks. They're state-regulated. I could have given them any record they wanted. It was tacky."

Lewis said his office received calls from panicked bank customers who believed the banks had been closed and worried about their deposits.

Comptroller Lewis Furious Over Handling Of Raids

By TOM HILLSTROM

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — Comptroller Gerald Lewis says the federal government broke a promise, had dubious legal authority and unnecessarily panicked bank customers when its agents raided two Miami banks last month.

Lewis, saying he was both angry and frustrated, called the raids "lacky" and reminiscent of the "Keystone Kops."

The raids, Lewis said, were the latest in a string of incidents in which the state has cooperated with the feds only to find it a one-way street.

He said a two-year file of correspondence, memos of phone calls and memos of meetings which "would describe as non-meetings. The bottom line is that they've told us nothing."

Women In Country Songs Are Changing Their Tune

By United Press International
DON'T STAND BY: Women in country songs traditionally suffer faithless men, unappreciative children and old, torn dresses in silence. But things are changing. Instead of advising the women who listen to her country songs to "Stand By Your Man," as Tammy Wynette always did, Rosanne Cash offers alternate advice. Miss Cash, daughter of renowned singer Johnny Cash, wants women to be true to themselves. The new album, "Seven Year Ache," she showcased Wednesday and Thursday nights at New York's Bottom Line is a different kind of country rock. "It's the story of a woman whose man isn't treating her right but who refuses to be a victim," said she.

Nation Gets The Day Off

PRIME TIME: When the boss gives you an unexpected day off, that's nice. But when the boss of the bosses gives you a day off, that's news. It happened in Britain. Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher gave the whole country a day off July 29 to celebrate the wedding of Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer. She said she was declaring the holiday in response to wide public pressure to allow the country to join in the celebrations and to ease traffic congestion and security problems in London.

But Will It Help Business?

NO BUSINESS LIKE ... Business is bad at "Flo's Yellow Rose" so "Mel's Diner" chief tries to give Flo a few tips on how to improve her profits. Polly Holiday, whose TV show "Flo" was a spin-off from the "Alice" series on CBS had her first crossover visit from an "Alice" cast member in the person of Vic Tackback who plays "Mel" on "Alice." Polly had a special yellow rose ready for Vic to welcome him to her set. The show will be broadcast at a new time Saturday and the network hopes Vic's visit to "Flo" will be as good for CBS ratings as Flo hopes it will be for her bar business.

Stiller, Meara Apart

GLIMPSES: The one-time comedy team of Stiller and Meara will be doing their thing March 15 — but not together. Jerry Stiller will appear in the television movie "Madame X" while Anne Meara will be featured in a segment of "Archie Bunker's Place." Jack Lord flies to New York from Hawaii Friday to be a presenter at the Iris Awards March 15. Hallmark Cards Springbook puzzle people have introduced a 500-piece circular jigsaw puzzle featuring thousands of tiny candies. Puzzle planner Mark Pennington says the company was not influenced by President Reagan's habit of munching on jelly beans.

Vietnam Vets Honored

WAR'S AFTERMATH: A group of Vietnam veterans were honored at a performance of "Still Life" a documentary drama about an actual Vietnam veteran's life after he returned to the states and the trauma he experienced based on his actions in Vietnam. "We all must take responsibility for that war," said author Emily Mann. All of us as a nation fought the war. We must recognize them (the veterans) for fighting for their country. Emotionally we must give them respect and understanding. Everyone must do his share, not only on the part of government but on a one to one basis.

'Standing Room...' Innovative

"Standing Room Only: Vanities," which will air Sunday for 6 million viewers hooked up to the Home Box Office cable system, is as deceptive in title as it is in craft. It's not a musical revue. It's a three-act Off-Broadway play taped on stage before a live audience. It's also strangely flawed — an inept high-school assembly effort at the opening and a poignant drama at the close.

Meredith Baxter Brierly, Shelly Hack and Amette O'Toole costar as three elderly friends who grow up to become three infantile elders — inseparable friends as high-school cheerleaders, empty-headed sorority sisters in college and constants in the cast-ghost of a soul-denuding reunion years later.

For better or for worse, it's not the sort of thing anyone ever will see on the commercial networks. Language and subject matter alone would send the Moral Majority to the barricades. But it is indicative of the innovative self-produced programming with which cable is cutting slices of its dinner from the tables of ABC, CBS and NBC. And cable can cut with impunity.

Oak Ridge Captures Team Titles At Lyman

Seminole Gals Streak To Relay Victory

Lake Brantley's 280-pound behemoth Robin Graham gets set to unleash the little metal ball in the Lyman Invitational track meet Friday. Graham's heave went 48-feet-1 1/4 good for sixth place.

The Patriot's Rick Campbell, who recently signed an Eastern Kentucky football pact, winds up for discus toss. Campbell finished out of the money as Oak Ridge's boys and girls ran away with the meet.

Hardy, Newell, Caldwell, Davis Tribe Winners

Oak Ridge's state-bound track team ran away from the field Friday in the Lyman Invitational in Longwood with both the boys and girls titles. The Lady Pioneers ran up 77 points to Mike Gibson's Lake Brantley crew's 42. Lyman was third with 41, while Seminole came in fourth with 31.

In the male competition, the Pioneers cruised home with 89 points to runner-up Winter Park's 54. Lake Howell was eighth with 23, while Sanford mustered 19 for the ninth spot. Lyman was 11th and Brantley 12th.

The Fighting Seminole's crack girls mile relay team of Brenda Davis, Revonda Caldwell, Sharon Newell and Tony Hardy captured the top spot with a time of 4:11. Lake Brantley was second and Lyman third as the county swept the top three places.

Hardy was also a close second in the 330-yard intermediate hurdles with 45.2 points. Turman, Spear, Finn 49.2 Sanford 51.2, 5. Lyman 51.2, 4. Williams (Ev) 52.4, 6. Lake Brantley 52.7, 4. S. O'Connor Triple-Jacks Back Home

DETROIT (UPI) — Good thing conditions weren't perfect — Keith Connor might have triple-jumped his way back across the Atlantic Ocean to England.

As it was, the Southern Methodist senior, off a runway he described as "the worst in America," merely triple-jumped to a new world record Friday night at the 1981 NCAA Indoor Track and Field Championships with a 56-foot, 9 1/4-inch effort — a quarter-inch longer than the old mark — Shamil Abayajov of the Soviet Union went 56-1/4 indoors, earlier this winter.

Connor, a native of Slough, England, posted his record triple jump in the preliminaries, sparking a surge of Methodist teammates Robert Weir and Michael Carter set meet marks in the 35-pound weight throw and shot put, respectively, and Carl Lewis of Houston broke a 13-year-old, long-jump record.

"It's probably the worst runway in America, but nobody can help that," said Connor, a transfer from Texas-El Paso who finished fourth in the Moscow Olympics.

"My usual run-up is 130 feet. I had to do with 99-5," said Connor, who also placed fifth in the long jump. "The first two jumps I wanted to qualify or maybe to win.

"The third jump I went for it all. It hit and I really feel great," he added.

"I came here hoping to win and figuring the distance would take care of itself. I thought I could go around 56-10 because of the short runway. But when your adrenaline is flowing, anything can happen."

Lewis came the closest of the meet record-breakers from shattering another world indoor mark — in this case, his own.

The sophomore long jumper from Willingboro, N.J., was just a quarter-inch off his own world indoor best of 27-10 1/4. Lewis did break the oldest record on the books, though, in bettering the 1968 effort of 27-2 1/4, set by Bob Beamon of Texas-El Paso.

Carter, a sophomore who already has two football letters, repeated in the shot put, lengthening Han Hoglund's mark of 67-9/16 to 69-4/16. Hoglund set his record for Texas-El Paso in the 1975 NCAA Indoor meet.

Weir, a freshman at SMU from Birmingham, England, stretched Jacques Accambrey's 71-10 1/4 record in the 35-pound weight throw, set for Kent State in 1874, out to 73-7.

Kenyan sophomore Sammy Koskei gave SMU its fourth victory of the competition with a 1:52.29 time in the 800-meter run.

Oak Ridge's fine hurdler Marvin Reese is covered by the two hurdlers early in the race, but the flying Pioneer came on to win his favorite event in 14.6 seconds.

Controversial Homer Upsets Benjamin

DeLand Dampens Lake Howell 6-5

By SCOTT SMITH
Herald Sports Writer

A rivalry which was born last year between Lake Howell and DeLand matured Friday at Howell.

While the two teams battled on the field the fans had their own shouting battle. Regardless of who won the shouting match, DeLand topped Howell, 6-5, in the ball game. The game was filled with numerous close calls with the most controversial coming in the fourth inning.

The Silver Hawks had a 4-1 lead going into the fourth. Ken Mullen led off for the Bulldogs and reached first on an error. Alan Dobos followed with a double. Andre Rhee then drove a fly ball deep into leftfield. Dave Martinez raced to the ball. He watched it hit the ground and roll under a gap in the fence.

Martinez threw his arms up indicating he could not reach the ball. That would have meant a ground rule double.

However the umpire saw it differently. He said the ball went over the fence. A dismaying Howell coach Hirt Benjamin unsuccessfully tried to convince the umpires that the ball "did not go over the fence."

The score stayed 4-1 until the fifth. DeLand's Dobos singled in Mullen with the go ahead run.

The Bulldogs came right back in the sixth to expand their lead. With two outs and a 0-2 count seam sites doubled down the right field line.

Steve Bernier singled to drive in Sites giving DeLand a 6-4 lead.

Howell has a golden opportunity in its half of the sixth. DeLand pitcher John Booker had a bad case of not throwing what the umpire thought were strikes. Booker walked Tony DiMauro to start the sixth. Cas Summers singled. Martinez walked to load the bases. Tony Alberti then drew a walk to score DiMauro.

Kevin Rood relieved for DeLand. The bases were loaded with nobody out. To top it off lead-off hitter Charlie Miller stepped into the batter's box.

Rood jammed Miller and got him to hit a grounder to third. The third baseman promptly forced Summers at the plate. Rood struck out Doug Chiodini for out number two.

The pressure was now on the shoulders of Carl Carlson. Carlson responded with a shot up the middle.

The Hawks would have led the game and possibly taken the lead but the hit of heel of Alberti before going into center field. Alberti was automatically out and the score annulled.

Martinez, a pitcher-lead fielder, transferred from New York two weeks ago. Benjamin has high hopes for his lefthanded Junior.

DeLand Head Coach Mitch Moyer, now in his first year, has only two starters from last years team.

"I'm glad we could come here (Howell) and show them we can play," said Moyer.

The Bulldogs improved their overall record to 9-2 and 5-1 in conference, their only conference loss was to Seminole. Howell is now 12-5 and 4-2.

Hawk pitcher Miller went the distance giving up six hits while suffering his first defeat.

Indiana Stalls Boston 101-94

By United Press International
The city of Hartford, Conn. is not on Boston Coach Bill Fitch's list of places he likes to visit.

After five games at the Civic Center, Boston is 2-3. Considering the Celtics are 27-1 at the Boston Garden and 56-17 overall, Fitch's feeling is understandable.

But, Friday night, he said, "I don't care if we played this game on the moon," after the Indiana Pacers defeated the Celtics, 101-94. "We still would not have won."

"I haven't criticized our starters yet this year. But tonight, I didn't think they played as well as they should. I'm also critical of the defense of some of our people."

The Celtics might have moved within a half game of the Pacers, who lost, 120-104, in Milwaukee. But the Pacers kept Boston from gaining ground with their second straight triumph over the Celtics. Johnny Davis scored 24 points, including 12 in the final four minutes, to lead the Pacers.

"Johnny Davis is a great player," said Pacers' Coach Jack McKinney. "His control of the game did it for us tonight." Bucks 120, 76ers 104.

Marques Johnson scored 29 points to power Milwaukee to its seventh straight home victory. In the first quarter, 76ers' guard Maurice Cheeks suffered a serious fractured jaw in a collision with Bucks' Buckner and Darryl Dawkins reinforced his right knee.

Knicks 127, Bulls 117.

Ray Williams scored 17 of his 27 points in the third quarter and Sly Williams added 22 to help the Knicks clinch a playoff berth.

Hawks 119, Nuggets 117.

Tom Burleson slammed in a dunk shot with 5 seconds left to lift the Hawks.

David Thompson led Denver with 27 points.

SuperSonics 102, Pistons 100.

James Bailey connected on a 10-foot jumper at the buzzer to boost Seattle. Jack Sikma led Seattle with 22 points—20 in the second half.

Rockets 128, Trail Blazers 104.

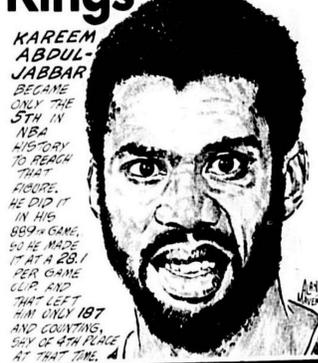

Mike Dunleavy scored 27 points and Calvin Murphy added 26 to pace the Rockets, who outscored Portland by 18 points in the third period.

Nets 140, Cavaliers 125.

Maurice Lucas scored 26 points to lead New Jersey over the Cavaliers, who have lost eight straight games.

Lakers 116, Kings 101.

Tom Burleson slammed in a dunk shot in three quarters of play and Magic Johnson added 21 points, 11 assists and 7 steals to pace Los Angeles.

A TALE OF THREE YANKEES

'I Like Reggie'—Steinbrenner

NEW YORK (UPI) — George Steinbrenner wants a few things clearly understood about his relationship with Reggie Jackson.

He thinks the world of him, that isn't just talk, he means it. He understands him and can comprehend the concern his slugger outfielder has over his contract which expires at the end of this year.

Moreover, George Steinbrenner appreciates the four productive years Reggie Jackson has given him with the Yankees and has no fault to find with his overall effort during all that period.

He would like to sign Jackson again. He says he will bend every effort to do that, and if he can't, that would mean Jackson probably would elect to go somewhere else, to some other club willing to pay him more money.

Speaking from his office in Tampa, Fla., Monday, the Yankee owner said he'll meet with Jackson sometime next week to discuss his future with the club.

"I'm not trying to put any heat on Reggie," Steinbrenner says.

"I'll do what is realistic and what I think is fair," he goes on. "If it isn't good enough and he decides to try for free agency, I'll understand that perfectly. If he thinks he can get $9 million from someone else, God bless him. I spoke with him by phone the other night and he asked me, 'What if you and I can't get together and I go for free when he cornered him in foul territory off by first base he was ready with his first question.

"How does it feel to be a millionaire?" he beamed.

Winfield has heard the same question at least 500 times since George Steinbrenner decided to give him a piece of the business two months ago. He keeps his patience, though, to such a degree he gives the impression this is the very first time he has ever been confronted with the question.

"I was a millionaire before I came here," he said softly to the man from Rome, with the slightest suggestion of a smile on his face.

"I've been playing baseball now for 22 years, the last eight of which have been in the major leagues. I've made some very good investments while I was still with San Diego, so you could say I was pretty well established financially, a millionaire, as you call it. Before I ever got here. That's just for the record. Now that we have that over with, we can go on from there."

That took some of the starch out of the interviewer and the questions went a little downhill from there.

Winfield has been in the Yankees' camp five days now and on his first day in the batting cage he bunted his first time at bat. One newspaper considered it noteworthy it headlined the fact he did so.

Gene Michael, the Yankee manager, had to laugh over that.

"Everybody starts off with a bunt,"

Referring specifically to the arbitrator who awarded Cerone more than four times what he made last year, Steinbrenner says, "Here's an arbitrator whose basic background as I understand it is in the garment industry. We should select men in baseball from both sides and send putting baseball matters in the hands of those without any experience at all in the game."

"Rick Cerone has had one good year," the Yankee owner continues. "I heard the arbitrator looked at what fellows like Winfield and (Andre) Dawson got and then made his decision accordingly."

"Cerone needs at least another year before he can be compared with catchers like (Jim) Sundberg, (Gary) Carter and (Butch) Wynegar. I'll betcha you couldn't trade Cerone for any of those. Some day Rick will be right there with them, but he isn't yet."

The owners started becoming disenchanted with arbitration following the Ralph Gar case six years ago. Garr, primarily a leg hitter, took the Atlanta Braves to arbitration in 1975 after leading the National League with .353 the year before.

He was asking $125,000 a year, big money in those days, and nearly triple what he was in for. Now, with one year to go, and seeing the more than $15 million going to Dave Winfield, he feels he can rightfully ask for more.

This will be Jackson's 14th season in the big leagues, he'll be 35 in May and he has, on pure performance, established himself as a legitimate candidate for the Hall of Fame.

He reads the papers and saw where an arbitrator awarded Rick Cerone $40,000 a year from the Yankees the other day, even though Cerone has been in the big leagues only four years and only one season with the Yankees. Cerone's salary compares favorably to the $52,000 a year Jackson is getting and would serve to strengthen Jackson's argument for more money.

"Baseball is crazy," Steinbrenner says regarding the present arbitration system in which those arbitrators who make the decisions on how much a player should be paid invariably have no baseball background whatsoever.

David's Win-Fall

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — Baseball camps aren't the same anymore. They attract the kind of exotic type interviewers they never did before. Even some international ones.

Money is as much responsible for that as anything else. Big money. It has a universal quality about it and undoubtedly had a lot to do with this particular interviewer from Rome being in the New York Yankees' camp Monday.

He was looking for Dave Winfield, the Yankees' new $20 million man, and

NCAA

Pesky Villanova Attempts To Climb Mt. Sampson Sunday

By United Press International

They suffered a triple-overtime loss to Syracuse in the final round of the Big East tournament but still managed to secure a bid from the NCAA Committee. And, with a new lease on life, the Wildcats of Villanova proceeded to declare the Houston Cougars Friday night and now look forward to climbing a mountain named Ralph Sampson.

"I thought we played a very good basketball game," Villanova Coach Rollie Massimino said after his Wildcats scored a surprisingly easy 90-72 victory over Houston in an East Regional game at Charlotte, N.C. "Each guy played his role. It was certainly one of our better games."

Houston, which won the Southwest Conference tournament to earn a berth, lost the game before it was 10 minutes old. The Wildcats went on a 13-4 spree early in the first half to assume a 24-12 lead and the Cougars were never able to mount a challenge.

The Wildcats, who meet third-ranked Virginia and Sampson Sunday, got 19 points from center John Pinone, 15 from Aaron Howard and 10 from Mike Mulquin. Houston was led by sophomore Rob Williams, one of the nation's leading scorers, with 23 points.

Elsewhere in the NAAs, it was Virginia Commonwealth 85, Long Island 69, in the other East Regional; Boston College 83, Ball State 87 and Alabama-Birmingham 83, Western Kentucky 66 in the Midwest Regional at Tusculoo, Ala.; Kansas 69, Mississippi 66 and Wichita State 95, Southern 70 in the Midwest Regional at Wichita, Kan.; and Pittsburgh 70, Idaho 69 in overtime and Northeastern 55, Fresno State 53 in the West Regional at El Paso, Texas.

John Bagley scored 19 points and Boston College, 22-4, took control in the final minute to beat Ball State and advance to a second-round clash against Wake Forest Sunday. Senior guard Glenn Mearns scored a game-high 22 points to lead Alabama-Birmingham into the next round against eighth-ranked Kentucky Sunday.

Tony Guy sank three free throws in the final 11 seconds to help Kansas stave off a torrid Mississippi comeback. The victory sent the Jayhawks into second-round action Sunday against fifth-ranked Arizona State ... Cliff Levingston scored 24 points to pace six Wichita State players in double figures to carry the Missouri Valley champions into a second-round clash with Iowa.

Wayne Wallace, whose long-range shots brought Pitt back into the game during regulation, hit an off-balance 10-foot jumper with three seconds remaining in overtime to give the Panthers a dramatic victory over Idaho. Pittsburgh will face sixth-ranked North Carolina Sunday in the second round ... Chip Rucker made a layup with four seconds to go to give lightly regarded Northeastern a victory over Fresno State that sent the Huskies into the second round against 10th-ranked Utah.

Luck Of The Irish Comes Smiling Through

By CINDY MOOY
Herald Staff Writer

If you go looking for leprechauns in a dictionary, you'll find them to be "one of a race of elves who are cobblers and have hidden treasure."

You might go looking for leprechauns in a schoolroom, too, for being "wee people" themselves, leprechauns like being around folks of their own size.

With St. Patrick's Day on Tuesday, a few have already been spotted at Idylwild Elementary School in Sanford.

Indeed, one sent a special delivery letter to a class of six- and seven-year olds in the Red Pod at the school. It was signed "Ima Leprechaun."

There were some skeptics about though, questioning the existence of the "wee people." Since Friday the 13th and St. Patrick's Day fall within a week of each other, the second grade students in the Orange Pod presented a play Friday called, "Searching For Luck."

In the play, they find the leprechaun's pot of gold in which they find lucky symbols—a horseshoe, rabbit's foot, four-leaf clover. For each month of the year, they consider another superstition like Santa Claus, black cats and the Easter Bunny.

The play ends the moral that luck is wherever you find it and that it comes from within.

If you look for superstitions in the dictionary, it is "any belief, practice or rite unreasonably upheld by faith in magic, chance or dogma."

But don't try to tell that to an Irishman, especially next Tuesday. For he knows the truth about the "wee people."

UDC Explores 'Relics Of War Between States'

Norman deVere Howard Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy met in the home of Mrs. Katie Corley with Mrs. Donald Dunn as co-hosts.

The ritual was conducted by Mrs. Katie Corley, chaplain, followed by the pledge of allegiance to the American flag and salute to the Confederate flag. Mrs. Charles Steenwerth, president, welcomed the group. Thirteen members and two guests were present.

Mrs. W. B. Wallace introduced the guest speaker, Stanley Lewis who presented an informative program on "Relics of the War Between the States." Sharing his knowledge of Southern history and the Confederacy, he gave brief sketches of several Confederate heroes and many human interest stories relating to that era.

He stressed teaching children and grandchildren to be proud of their rich heritage so that they may know the true story of the Confederacy.

The president displayed a recent "special" Certificate of Recognition from the Florida Division UDC to Norman deVere Howard Chapter for having given largest number of Jefferson Davis Medals to a student of American and Southern history in six area schools.

Also, from the Florida Division, certificates awarded to three students in recognition of Honorable Mention in "Music of the Confederacy" essay contest. They were Tim Dycus, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Dycus; Paige B. Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Jones; and Elizabeth Prior, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Prior, all sponsored by the chapter and Florida Division UDC.

A highlight of the business session was when Real Daughter Mrs. A.B. Wallace and Mrs. Lois Taylor were given by vote of acclamation honorary memberships to the chapter.

Helen Hickey Demonstrates Technique

Renaissance Painting Lesson

The Sanford Seminole Art Association met on Tuesday evening in the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce building.

President Marie Richter called the meeting to order at 7:30 p.m. and read a devotion from Henry Van Dyke "The Goal."

During the brief business meeting the president expressed her appreciation for work done by all members to make the annual member show a success.

A nominating committee was appointed to report in April.

Helen Hickey, member and past president of SAA, gave a demonstration of Renaissance painting or old master technique, this technique makes use of dark undercoloring, emphasizing shadows and reflections with acrylic paint being used for this purpose.

The second step was a coating of glaze using copal medium with the color than finishing by highlighting, bringing out the finished painting.

Mrs. Hickey has classes in this technique as well as pastel and water color in her HMH Gallery on First Street in Sanford.

Florida Artists are featured in this unique gallery and local artists have works periodically on display.

Refreshments were served members and guests by hospitality chairman Fran Tingle and her committee.

'Americana' Coming Up Gold

The Gold Rush is on. A journey back to 1849 is coming up without leaving 1981 when Ballet Guild presents "Americana" March 21 and 22 at the Sanford Civic Center, at 8 p.m.

This performance is likely to bring back golden memories of Early America just as Ballet Guild's immortal "River Gold" did in 1976 as a local salute to the nation's bicentennial year.

The moving ballet will carry the audience through the saga of those early days, moving from the rowdy, colorful dances of a frontier saloon to the excitement of a surprise attack of Chinese bandits and the classic beauty of a Jenny Lind ballet sequence, complete with the formal paces of Jenny Lind Quadrille, made popular during the tour of America under the management of the controversial P.T. Barnum.

Artistic directors and choreographers Valerie Weld and Miriam Wright have done extensive research in designing the sparkling dances which enhance this narrative ballet, conceived and written by Mildred M. Caskey. Authentic costumes of the period were designed and executed by Dr. Genevieve Richardson.

The sets, designed by Miss Caskey, are being executed by Jane Porter and Richard Scott. Musical coordinator Elsa Caskey and company manager and president of the BGS board of directors, Pat Scott, are putting final touches on production details to make this performance one of Ballet Guild's most professional and ambitious efforts.

On March 21, sponsors will be honored at the premier performance. Tickets to the Sunday night performance, open to the public, are for sale in advance at Don Knight's Shoe Store and School of Dance Arts. They will also be available at the door. Prices are $5, adults, and $3, senior citizens and children under 12.

The Tommy Dorsey Orchestra is the final concert of the season scheduled by Seminole Mutual Concert Association, Monday, at 8 p.m., at the Sanford Civic Center.

Limited memberships are available for this concert at a donation of $7.50. For information, call Jan Freeman, 322-7914.

Lois Dycus is planning a fashion show and luncheon Thursday to benefit the Seminole Mutual Concert Association. The benefit will be held at the Sanford Women's Club, beginning at noon.

Lois says no tickets will be sold at the door and reservations must be in by Monday at Lois' Place.

Just this week, four Sanfordites were featured in a photo for winning awards at a cake decorating contest in DeLand.

A fifth winner, Miriam E. Jenkins, was not available for the photograph. She won a third place ribbon in the professional division, honorable mention in the advanced division and a trophy for the most original design in the professional category.

"Not bad for my very first cake show!" Miriam exclaimed.

At the recent Family Lines Federal Credit Union 46th annual meeting which included dinner and dancing to the Bill Hinkle Band, Walter Cook, the retiring president, was presented a plaque from Sanford Mayor Lee P. Moore in appreciation of Walter holding the president's reigns for the past five years.

According to Janet Cobb, "It was really good. Nearly 200 showed up." Others on the planning committee with Janet were Mary Ann Bruce, Justine Lee and Ben Baker.

Betty Willis said, "We enjoyed it. They give neat door prizes." Betty said she has won a door prize for the past several years "... real nice things," she says.

Jackie Goodman seems excited and enthusiastic over a "Roaring 20's" dance to benefit the Seminole Work Opportunity Program for handicapped adults.

The BYOB dance will be an event of May 2, at the Sanford Civic Center. Donation is $5. Prizes will be given to the couple who dance "The Charleston" the best and also to the couple wearing the most authentic costume of the era. Door prizes will also be awarded.

Jackie is planning some "real different" decor. For information, call her at 323-0144.

"You should see my bedroom. It's full of ladies," Sue Stevenson laughed.

Sue is referring to about 300 eggs being decorated by Pilot Club of Sanford. Proceeds from the sale of the lovely "Easter Eggs" help toward the club's scholarship program of sending four girls to Seminole Community College.

The lovely ladies will be going on sale Monday.

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday at work I overheard a young, well-educated co-worker (I'll call her Judy) talking to a fellow employee. She said, "My mother is having this middle-age menopause depression. This morning she threatened to kill herself, so I calmly said, 'Mom, in case you've forgotten where the gun is, it's under the pillow on Dad's side of the bed. The gun is loaded, so why don't you quit talking about it and go ahead and kill yourself!'" Then Judy went on to say, "You know, people who keep threatening to commit suicide never do. Sure enough, a few hours later, Mom called me at work to apologize for threatening to kill herself."

I was shocked. Maybe Judy handled the situation properly because her mother didn't kill herself, but I've heard that a suicide threat is a cry for help and should never be taken lightly. Who is right?

DEAR BETHLEHEM: You are. Judy repeated a common misconception. My experts in the field of suicide prevention say

JUST WONDERING
DEAR WONDERING: First, the only "stupid questions" are those that aren't asked for fear of appearing stupid.

What hookers do is vastly different from what gigolos do. A "hooker" is a female prostitute who solicits men for the purpose of selling them sexual favors.

A gigolo is a male who is available for a fee to escort a woman wherever she wants to go. Sexual favors are not included.

DEAR ABBY: I don't know why, but whenever I get a compliment I feel embarrassed and don't know what to say, so I put myself down. For example, if someone says, "My, that's a pretty dress," I say something like, "Oh, this old rag. It's two years old."

How should I handle a compliment without appearing conceited?

DEAR ABBY: This could be classified as a stupid question, but it has been bugging me. I am 15 years old. A few weeks ago I read an article in the newspaper. It was an interview with a gigolo. He told how much he enjoyed his work and said it was a wonderful way to make a living.

As I was reading this article, a thought suddenly occurred to me. If what hookers do that no threat of suicide should be taken lightly—that statistically the likelihood of suicide increases every time a person goes untreated after attempting suicide or threatening to. Judy's mother needs help.

Fast Cash By Wire

Western Union is cutting the payment time for funds in half to accommodate the demands of the 250,000 students expected to attend College Expo '81. Western Union spokesmen say students will be able to pick up Money Order funds one hour after an order is placed. The Western Union office will be open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and the Agency will make payments until 10 p.m.

Western Union representatives are in Daytona Beach from March 16 to 20 to promote the Charge Card Money Order service (CCMO) at College Expo. This service is particularly useful for the stranded student, who merely calls anyone, parent or friend, with a valid VISA or MasterCard and asks them to send a CCMO. The cardholder can send up to $1,000 and charge it to the credit card, by calling Western Union's toll-free number. CCMOs can be sent from anywhere in the United States, including Alaska and Hawaii, as well as Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands. Service is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

In the merger, 0.1765 share of Eckerd common stock is to be exchanged for each share of AHVC stock, and each AHVC stock option will become an option for a proportionate amount of Eckerd stock. There is a total of 12,874 AHVC shares outstanding including shares held under options.

Educators-In-Industry Grant

DELAND—Stetson University received a $3,500 grant from General Electric this year to conduct an educators-in-industry seminar in conjunction with the local industries, according to an announcement by university President Pope A. Duncan.

This is the third consecutive year GE has made the grant to Stetson to offer the course to area guidance counselors and teachers.

Linda Scira, GE's specialist for personnel practice and training, stated that the grants were designed to develop awareness of careers for young persons in the county. She also noted that the local program is part of a national program of career development sponsored by GE.

Barbara Jean Nordmann, counselor instructor at Stetson University, pointed out that this year the course is offered not only to senior and junior high personnel, but also to counselors and teachers in primary schools. Elementary counselor Shirley Cook is working on this newest portion of the project.

Space Technology

An American Export to Japan

RANCHO CORDOVA, Calif. (UPI) — When Japanese engineers fired a satellite into orbit last month there were loud cheers, not just in Tokyo, but from people 5,000 miles away in Rancho Cordova, Calif.

The Californians were cheering for their jobs.

About 100 employees of Aerojet Rocket Co. and Aerojet Liquid Rocket Co. in Sacramento County built the second stage propulsion system that helped toss the satellite into the sky from Tanegashima Island off the southeast coast of Japan.

The Japanese have orbited more than 20 satellites in the last decade for peaceful uses like broadcasting, weather prediction and space research.

Since 1975 they have combined

Japanese and American knowhow, with Japan buying the American input under a unique agreement that the two countries reached in 1969.

For the United States, the deal has created jobs whose number is hard to estimate and tens of millions of dollars in exports.

Since 1969, Japan has spent about $2.3 billion on space. The government's annual budget for it grows yearly. It reached $445 million in the 1980-81 Japanese fiscal year ending last March 31.

Almost half the money is spent on satellites and launch vehicles, and a substantial share of this goes to the United States.

Besides Aerojet, Thiolek Corp., of Ogden, Utah, and McDonnell Douglas of Huntington Beach, Calif., work with the Japanese on design and building of launch vehicles. General Electric, Ford Aerospace of Palo Alto, Calif., and Hughes of Long Beach, Calif. figure in satellite construction and design.

The parts business filters down to a wide range of subcontractors. It all would have been unthinkable at the end of World War II but within a few years, the former enemies had become allies, and Washington no longer feared a Japanese military revival.

In the late 1960s, the Nixon administration perked up its ears at reports that scientists at Tokyo University were trying to put tiny satellites into orbit, and offered help.

"We knew they could do it themselves," William Rogers, then secretary of state, told reporters at the time. "We thought it was better if we had a role in it."

In return for the right to buy American knowhow, Japan agreed to limit its satellites to peaceful uses. It also promised not to pass American space technology on to third countries.

Originally, the pact limited Japanese satellites to 330-pound payloads. It was revised in 1973 to allow 660-770 pound loads.

Contact between the Japanese and Aerojet, a major American space hardware supplier, started around 1973, says Aerojet executive vice-president William Back. He declines to give any figures on the size of the contract.

Aerojet was hired to build three second stage launch vehicles for Japanese satellites. Two already have been delivered, the first for a ground test and the second for the successful launch Feb. 11.

In a contract Aerojet officials think will last through most of the 1980s, the firm also will supply parts for five other launch vehicles that will be assembled in Japan.

Aerojet engineers work closely with the Japanese contractor, Ishikawajima-Harima Heavy Industries, of Tokyo. The project is under control of the Japanese government's National Space Development Agency.

Japan is the only large market for U.S. space knowhow. European countries like Britain, France, Germany and Italy have united for their own space program. The Soviet Union and China use their own technology.

Beware: Hidden Charges

Nineteen percent interest on one bank credit cards may not be the same as 18 percent on another. The difference in how that interest is calculated could double your monthly finance charges, according to the Florida Institute of Certified Public Accountants.

In addition to finance charges, you may have to pay annual fees, transaction fees, late charges, higher interest rates or charges for exceeding your credit limit. So CPAs advise you to pay attention to the fine print on your monthly statements and in your credit agreement.

Major bank credit cards are issued by commercial banks, savings and loan associations, and sometimes credit unions. An institution issuing the card sets your credit limit and other specifics defining use of the card. Before you apply for a bank card, or use the one you have, it's wise to compute how much it will cost you to use, CPAs say.

An annual fee of between $10 and $20 a card is becoming more common among banks, except in states that forbid such fees. If you use your spouse each have two cards in your own names, and you are charged $12 a card, your annual fees will be $48. And you haven't bought anything yet, you may want to cut costs by obtaining joint cards — two names on a single account.

If you don't pay an annual fee, you could be paying a fee each time you make a purchase with your bank card. At 12 cents a transaction, with an average of five transactions a month, your yearly cost would be $7.20. It would make sense for you to get a card from a bank that charges a transaction fee, if you only use the card occasionally. However, a frequent user of a card will find an annual fee saves them money.

A credit tradition fallen by the wayside is the "interest-free" grace period, usually 25 to 30 days, from the date of purchase and the date you are billed and assessed a finance charge. Now, your purchases may accumulate interest from the date they are posted by the bank, whether or not there is a balance carried over from the previous month. If you are among the 90 percent of credit card holders who pay their bills in full each month to avoid finance charges, you'll find this method no longer works with a bank credit card.

If you carry a portion of your balance over to the next month's billing, be sure you know how your bank calculates the finance charges, CPAs say. Banks use one of three common billing systems: the "adjusted balance method," the "average daily balance method" and the "previous balance method." Depending upon which method is used, your monthly interest charge will be different, even if the annual percentage rate is the same.

Let's say you have a finance charge of 18 percent (or a 1.5 percent monthly charge). Your previous balance is $400, you pay $300 on your bill this month and you charge an additional $100. Using the "adjusted balance method," subtract your payment from your previous balance. This leaves $100, and 1.5 percent of this amount is $1.50. That is your finance charge this month.

With the "average daily balance method," you again subtract your payment from your previous balance, then you add your additional purchase. This time your monthly charges equal 1.5 percent of $200 or $3.00. This is a 10 percent increase over the monthly charge under the adjusted balance method.

Using the "previous balance method," you simply take 1.5 percent of your $400 previous balance, or $6.00, as your monthly interest charge. So, you are paying anywhere from $1.50 to $6.00 — based on how the interest is calculated. Typical finance charges formerly were 12 to 18 percent, but they are going up where permitted by state law. It used to be that if your balance was large, you would pay a higher annual percentage rate on one portion and a lower rate on the remainder. For example, if the finance charge was 18 percent on the first $500 of your balance and 12 percent on the second $500, the monthly interest charge on the total balance of $1,000 would be $12.50. In some states, this higher finance charge would apply to the entire $1,000. The interest charge would then be $15. Check your bank regulation.

To save interest charges and reduce the risk of your card being cancelled, CPAs suggest you avoid missing payments. Pay as much as you can as soon as the bill arrives, especially if charges are calculated on the average daily balance method. Here, charges are figured on days when no payment has been received. When you skip a payment completely, the finance charge is calculated twice on the balance.

Also, try to pay more than the minimum payment (which is also going up in many cases), since finance charges increase the total purchase price of anything you buy. The longer it takes you to pay off the charges, the more you will pay in interest. For example, on your $300 balance, you are charged $4.50 in finance charges. Your minimum payment for the month is $7. Subtract $7 from $304.50 and your new balance is $297.50. Now, another finance charge is calculated for the best billing period — says, $4.45. Your balance is then $293.05, and your minimum payment is $46.50, leaving you with a new balance of $246.55. So, in two months of payments totaling $13.50, you have reduced your indebtedness by only $4.55 — less than half of what you actually paid.

Think about it. James T. Duncan of Orlando, assistant general manager and secretary-treasurer of the Florida Fruit & Vegetable Assn., has been elected to the position of general manager. Duncan has held several positions since joining the association in 1953 as manager of the Traffic Division, including convention coordinator for 20 years.

Hard Shells Save Millions

GAINESVILLE — Fifteen million bucks ain't chicken feed. But that's how much Florida poultrymen have been losing every year in broken eggs.

"Up until five years ago most people used one feed, most people used two and occasionally three," Harms said, "now we have poultrymen that are using as many as 64 different feeds for their laying hens."

In addition to producing harder shells, these diets also increase egg size and overall production in Florida.

Nader Warns Japanese Cars Not As Safe As Ours

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Worries over Japanese auto imports made unexpected bedfellows of consumer advocate Ralph Nader, General Motors chief executive Roger Smith and Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd over the weekend.

Nader, who made his name crusading against American cars, suggested to the United Auto Workers union it start an advertising campaign and "informative street demonstrations" to warn Japanese cars are not as safe as U.S. autos.

In a letter to UAW President Douglas Fraser last week, Nader suggested a new ad campaign be trained on the relatively poor performance of Japanese cars in American safety tests.

"The United Auto Workers and consumer groups can help fill this information gap about the relatively superior safety of several U.S. cars compared with their Japanese counterparts," Nader told Fraser.

"In so doing they can provide consumers with solid reasons for exercising a preference for domestically produced models," he said.

Nader cited these Department of Transportation findings: —In 35 mph barrier tests, only the Chevette and Fiat Strada passed, while the Honda Civic, Toyota Corolla, Toyota Tercel, Datsun 310, Subaru G1F and Honda Prelude failed.

—One test that pitted a 1980 Ford Mustang against a Toyota Celica in a head-on crash found that the belted dummies in the Mustang passed the test while those in the Celica did not.

Byrd far the worst performing bumper system on the tested subcompact is found on the 1981 Toyota Corolla Tercel, an imported car that is being marketed very vigorously in this country."

Meantime, Byrd and Smith urged the Reagan administration to seek limits on Japanese imports.

In a speech Sunday to the UAW, Byrd said the American auto industry needs "a temporary respite" from growing imports of Japanese cars as it shifts gears to meet consumer demands for small cars.

"Before the imports severely and permanently damage our automobile industry, I urge the president to negotiate with the Japanese to prevent further incursion into the American auto market," Byrd said.

"He should alert the Japanese that they should not significantly increase their production capacity for export to the U.S."

It is "a proper role" for the government to seek limits on foreign car imports, Smith said in an interview on CBS' "Face the Nation."

"Basically, we want to see the government get out of business, but there are some things that the industry can't do," Smith said.

"It would be in the best interest of the Japanese and our country to do this voluntarily," he said, adding voluntary import restrictions are preferable to "a trade war that would be the worst thing in the world."

Science Fair Draws Budding Einsteins

By BRITT SMITH

It was an amazing assemblage of scientific talent gathered at Seminole Community College over the weekend; boys and girls too young to even drive a car by themselves, milling about discussing the relative merits of researching marine benthic dynamics, or the effects of ultrasonic sound waves on the metabolic processes of some rare and exotic amoeba.

They had given countless hours of their time to the cause. Their only reward: perhaps seeing their juvenile Einsteins become biologists, physicists, chemists and engineers, winning doctorates, and perhaps even a Nobel Prize or two.

For their part, the competitors stood guard over their work, offering detailed explanations to anyone who would listen, pausing frequently to search for terms understandable to an audience that couldn't quite take it all in.

Strewed about them was a dizzying array of futuristic-looking electronic wizardry, neat collections of some of the projects on display covered a wide range of mathematical equations that could give even Sperry-Univac a headache.

For the first Seminole County Festival of Science, SCC's science building took on the appearance of DuPont during the discovery of nylon.

Standing inconspicuously among the crowd clustered around the exhibits were the students' parents and teachers who had coaxed and cajoled their most promising charges into displays of talent, once thought nonexistent, which bordered on genius. They smiled freely, poking each other good-naturedly in the ribs, pointing to their stars and beaming proudly.

with wings, needle nose, and tail fins. One of them in the UEM, the other at a small control console, the boys would launch into a technological patter that would do NASA proud.

Combining fun and science was a group of would-be engineers who, using containers they had designed, dropped eggs from the top of a building. The idea was to keep the eggs from ending up scrambled. Some succeeded. Others, however, took the Great Fall and literally went to pieces. Winner of the event was all-around good egg Troy Casto, a sixth grader from Jackson Heights Middle School.

Other first place award winners were: for overall demonstration, Mike Cushing, Lakeview; for grades 3-5, Lance Davis, Casselberry and Scott Maloney, Eastbrook and Sam Sherman, Sabal Point; for grades 6-7, Darryl Cunningham, Jackson Heights and Gerald Hawk, Lakeview; for grade 8, Paula McGrath, Jackson Heights; for grades 9-12, Mike Brooks, Crossin.

He allegedly had backed his military-type jeep through the glass doors of the building, shouted "Get out of here," and opened fire with an M-14 rifle, a 12-gauge shotgun and a 45-caliber pistol.

Police Sgt. George Peterman said Hopkins was also carrying a .357-magnnum and .38-caliber pistols. He said all the guns were loaded and Hopkins also wore fully stocked ammunition belt holding extra ammunition.

"We figure he could have held us off for a while if he wanted," Peterman said. Five persons in the lobby, including three children, escaped without injury.

His wife said that he was plagued by nightmares about the war and often went out alone on "maneuvers," reliving his war experiences in terrifying flashbacks.

Officers said they attempted to talk to Hopkins for several minutes but he told them he was deaf. Hopkins later put his rifle down and surrendered peacefully, putting up only a brief struggle when officers attempted to handcuff him.

Investigators said Hopkins had dunned to speak to hospital officials, saying he was "on drugs" and also claiming he suffered from the effects of Agent Orange, a defoliant used in Vietnam that has been linked to cancer.

"He's very angry," Hopkins' 31-year-old wife, Suzanne, said from the couple's Malibu home. "He's angry at the government for sending so many men to war which was never intended to be won. He's angry at the inefficiency of almost all government agencies. He feels he has done his part, and now he's getting the shaft."

While her husband sat in Los Angeles County Jail facing federal charges for shooting up the VA hospital, Mrs. Hopkins described her husband's nightmares-filled nights and his problems with the Veterans Administration.

"Every night in his sleep he screams about being in Vietnam," she said. "He warns me about stepping on land mines. He yanks at me and tells me the enemy is very close and to be quiet. He screams. It's horrendous."

"I very think he was definitely mentally affected by the Vietnam War. He goes out on maneuvers when he's home here alone, dresses up in camouflage and goes out in the hills and does reconnaissance. He wants to go back to war."

Man Charged In Murder Of 2-Year-Old Girl

BUSHNELL, Fla. (UPI) — A 45-year-old former mental patient was charged with first degree murder Sunday in the death of 2-year-old Tasha Lee Smith, whose body was found in a shallow grave near Wildwood Saturday.

Officials said the child may have been sexually assaulted and then buried alive with her nursing bottle beside her.

"This is sickening for something like this to happen...she looked like a little doll, lying there with her bottle."

Adams said the cause of death will be determined by an autopsy, but the preliminary ruling was asphyxiation.

Adams said the child's mother, Kellene Smith, had gone to the home of friends Friday night and left the girl asleep in the car.

The body was naked when the car was jailed without bond was Ernest Lee Roman of Wildwood.

Adams said Roman has been in mental hospitals at least five times in recent years and has been convicted of child molestation charges, including one case which involved a kidnapping.

Tasha was reported missing about 3 a.m. Saturday by her mother, and the body was found early Saturday afternoon.

Adams said the child's mother, Kellene Smith, had gone to the home of friends Friday night and left the girl asleep in the car.

Twice during the night one of the people in the house, Chip Mogg, left, once to drive to a liquor store and the second time, about midnight, to take a friend to work. He said the child was still asleep in the car then.

Mogg and the mother left the house about 1 a.m. and while en route home, discovered the child missing.

Roman lived next door to the house the mother had been visiting.

Tenants Unhappy Reagan Aides Slumlords?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two of President Reagan's most trusted aides are speculating in rundown housing in depressed Baltimore and Washington neighborhoods, the Scripps-Howard news service reported today.

Reagan's personal secretary, Helene von Dammm, owns three dilapidated Baltimore row houses she says she has never seen, the news service said.

Political adviser Lynn Nofziger owns three Baltimore houses in varying states of disrepair and a graffiti-scarred Washington duplex, the service said.

The tenants, many on welfare and all unaware White House officials were their landlords, complained of a non-working furnace, leaking toilets, broken windows, sagging porches and the landlord's failure to respond to their complaints, the news service said in an article by James P. Herzog.

For Miss von Dammm and Nofziger, the houses are low-cost speculative ventures that provide a tax advantage and some day may show a handsome profit, the news service said. They both made their purchases in 1979 through Robert Tuttle, a former Reagan advance man heavily involved in real estate speculation, the news service said.

The news service said Nofziger's investment cost him $10,750 in cash and mortgages of $40,750. Miss von Dammm's houses cost $9,340 in cash and mortgages of $15,660.
