A second grand jury indictment handed up in April remain sealed pending an arrest. The first indictment names Hackett, of Fern Park and Longwood, as an accomplice in the plot to murder Dancy, who was serving in the Coast Guard at Governors Island, NY, when he was murdered.

Mrs. Dancy wrote her husband in New York, asking him to return to their Fern Park home at 612 Prairie Lake Dr. for her birthday, Dec. 31, according to police investigators. Dancy, a member of the "Breed" motorcycle gang in New York, was able to get leave from his Coast Guard duties and attend the party, according to police, and he was murdered shortly afterwards. His body was discovered in a ditch by two men walking in the area of South Sanford Avenue, half mile south of Sanford. His hands and feet were bound and his body wrapped in a blanket

Million Visitors Pouring Into Sanford?

By DORIS DIETRICH Herald Staff Writer

James J. Jacobson is a man with a plan - a package to promote Sanford in the North as Florida's restored historical city.

"Once the word gets out a million visitors pouring down I-4 will take the 1 minutes to get to Sanford and tell their friends the found it truly the tourist gateway to better living in Florida," Jacobson told the Sanford Kiwanis Club Wednesday

"I don't know that they would be prohibited from exposing themselves," said Davis. "If they violate the ordinance they would be subject to arrest. Of course, someone would have to view the performance to make the arrest.

Another provision of the ordinance aims at prohibiting establishments that might specialize in nude entertainment from opening in Altamonte Springs. There are no such establishments in the city at this time, according to Davis.

"The city may specifically bring suit to restrain, enjoin or otherwise prevent any violation of this ordinance in the Circuit Court of Seminole County ... " according to the ordinance.

"Basically, the ordinance we have is directed toward preventing partial or complete nudity in establishments serving liquor," said Davis. "You can have an almost nude performance as long as they don't expose the areas mentioned in the ordinance

The sale of liquor in connection with a nude performance is a specific part of the ordinance. However, "bottle clubs" that sell mixers for patrons who bring their own alcoholic beverages, would not be exempt from the law, since Altamonte Springs has an ordinance prohibiting such establishments, according to

Commissioner Harry Jacobs, an attorney, had asked in mid February that passage of the ordinance be delayed. He expressed concern at that time about the ability of such an ordinance to withstand a court challenge

"This ordinance is obviously constitutional," City Attorney Joe Davis said Wednesday. "I think it is constitutional to regulate the control of this sort of entertainment.

The Altamonte Springs ordinance is modeled after one passed late last year in Orange County. Davis indicated he will be watching challenges to the Orange County ordinance.

"There have been many laws directed toward the control of this sort of activity," noted Davis. "In some cases the constitutionality has been questioned. If the courts overturn the constitutionality of the Orange County law, it might affect this

New Line In Washington

The financial door that Congress narrowly cracked in 1975 to prevent New York City from bankruptcy is about to be thrown wide open.

Despite assurances then that federal loans would be a one-shot proposition to enable the city to get its house in order within three years. New York is back seeking a federal guarantee" for $2 billion in new debt that private lenders have every reason to know cannot be repaid.

The Seasonal Act of 1975, providing short-term federal assistance to New York, expires June 30. Now, the city seems destined to become a permanent ward of Washington and a permanent burden for U.S. taxpayers.

With far less debate and doubt than was heard three years ago; the House recently approved the new $2 billion loan guarantee by a 93-vote margin and broad bipartisan support. It was all so predictable.

What is a billion here and a billion there for congressmen who deal with $500 billion budgets and $60 billion deficits?

House approval to subsidize New York's mismanagement forecasts Senate approval, despite the opposition of Sen. William Proxmire, D-

Wis., chairman of the Senate Banking Committee. A voice crying out in the wilderness, Sen. Proxmire is asking embarrassing questions in the hearings he is conducting

He wonders why New York has agreed to a new contract with the city's powerful labor unions granting 4 percent raises in addition to cost-ofliving boosts - or a total pay increase of 17.8 percent.

He wonders how New York can possibly repay new borrowings when it owes more than $14 billion and is running an annual deficit of almost a halfbillion dollars.

And, undoubtedly, he is concerned about the strike call issue by New York police leaders to 18,000 unionized members despite a state law against such strikes, 2 22 Mode Store M.2

Cleveland, meanwhile, is staggering toward insolvency; that Midwestern city is running out of money and needs $20 million immediately, which of course, is mere pocket change by congressional and New York standards.

So, if Congress bails out New York, how can it refuse to bail out Cleveland? Or, how can Congress, having rescued New York and Cleveland from their fiscal sins, refuse help to California's cities, counties and schools which, through no fault of theirs, have been stripped of $7 billion in property taxes by Proposition 13.

As the line forms in Washington, the ultimate question is why the governments and taxpayers of any city should insist on fiscal responsibility and restrict employees' pay increases while helping to finance wage increases of almost 18 percent for New York workers.

BERRY'S WORLD

Around <:

The Clock By LEONARD KRANSDORF

There are many things in life that are interesting

Such events as going to the beach, eating, playing tennis and sleeping have to rank right up there near the top. On the other hand, there are several other events that are at the other end of the spectrum. For me, these include activities such as doing the laundry, shopping, and waking up in the morning. But, I found there is still another item that needs to be added to the dreaded list . . . moving.

I've known some people who get a thrill out of moving from one house or apartment to another. To me, though, it is a task that can be easily forgotten. My dislike for this task reached a dangerous level this week.

I tried to enter the chore with a positive attitude but that soon fizzled as the day wore on.

My usually calm attitude received its first puncture when I had to first clean up the old place and find everything I wanted to take to the new place. To say I am neat and tidy would be a severe verstatement and so trying to get all my socks, shoes, papers and underwear together and packed proved to be troublesome.

But, alas, I packed similar items (or at least ones that looked alike) with each other and began the next step ... loading it into my car. To assist me, I found a fellow employee who was all but willing, but enthusiasm lessened as we began to pile everything into his car but placed only a few things in my car.

The final item that needed to be loaded was my bookcase. Since my car was somewhat smaller than his, the bookcase went into his Grand Torino. Next came the chore of driving down French Avenue and having to face those dreadful railroad tracks. I made it in good condition, but it was touch and go for him with his trunk bouncing up and down on the bookcase as he delicately rode over the tracks. Having arrived safely at the new place, with only the moon as our light, I now had to get the key in the lock and the boxes, bookcases and suitcases unloaded

But, in a paraphrase of the old saying, I am proud to report that all bad things must come to an end and indeed this one did. Now I can only hope that the day will arrive

when movers will be able to blink their eyes and automatically items will move from one location to another But until then I'll have to grit my teeth and load

ANGLE-WALTERS Tax Reform: It's Going Nowhere WASHINGTON - President Carter's first

attempt to mobilize a broad-based citizens' coalition to promote a major administration program is on the verge of ending in failure. The issue around which Carter sought to muster grass-roots support was his well-intentioned but ill-executed tax reform program. While the White House was responsible for the poor timing, lack of coordination and inept staff work that contributed to the emasculation of the president's program, the blame must be shared by two other groups:

The coalition of business, labor, civic and public interest organizations that initially rallied under the banner of "Citizens for Tax Reform in 1978" but never delivered the expected - and required - support of their members.

The millions of middle-income taxpayers whose notoriously lethargic attitude toward public affairs resulted in little backing for a White House proposal that would have shifted at least some of the federal tax burden from them to wealthier individuals and corporations.

Carter sounded the call for citizen participation in mid-April, when he noted that "The voices we hear in Washington when tax reform is proposed are the voices of those special interest

Added the president: "They are powerful, rich and influential. They are present here through lobbyists, spokesmen, lawyers and accountants, trying to protect the selfish special privilege that has been carved out for them in the past."

The administration's effort to activate a counterforce began with an April 6 White House treaktast for more than 50 potential allies. "It was a top-drawer group, and the State Room was jammed," recalls one participant.

After brief speeches from Carter, Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal and senior members of the White House staff, those invited by the president were asked if they would be willing to commit themselves and their organizations to the grass-roots organizing campaign.

Those who expressed an interest were invited back to the White House on April 17, when Carter invoked his florid rhetoric in an appeal for backing from "average Americans (who) fool the bill for the rich."

Formation of Citizens for Tax Reform in 1978 was announced the same day. The unusually broad coalition included officials of trade associations, officers of major corporations, leaders of labor unions and representatives of senior citizens, black, hispanic, consumer and tax reform groups.

In an unprecedented move, the citizens, committee sought to publicize the votes of representative on amendments proposed in the House Ways and Means Committee - the seldom-noticed process that shapes all tax legislation.

Formation of the citizens' group and plans to generate constituent pressure on members of Congress for true tax reform were bold, innovative steps - but that effort proved to be too little, too late.

Many voters for Proposition 13, according to post-ballot dispatches from California, see themselves as reclaiming from absente authorities some control over their own affairs. But, writing in The Wall Street Journal Richard P. Nathan, who directs Brookings' studies of federal grant programs, suggests that one consequence of drastic property-tax limitation may be not to increase, but to decrease local control of local affairs. The reason is that with local government unable to tap as needed the revenue source that has always been its fiscal mainstay, it will become more dependent upon state and federal funds. And with the outside money comes some degree of outside control over its expenditure This would accelerate a trend underway for

sA-Evening Herald, Sanford, Fl. Thursday, June 22, 1978 High Court Preempts TV Tax Bid

WASHINGTON (UPI) - U.S. manufacturers battling what they view as unfair foreign competition have lost an important round in the Supreme Court.

The court, in a 9-0 ruling Wednesday, rejected a Zenith Radio Corp. appeal that tariff laws require the Treasury Department to impose a penalty tax on television sets and other electronic products imported from Japan. Zenith sought the countervailing duty to offset Japan's system of remitting or forgiving a commodity tax to Japanese companies that export such goods. It charged this practice amounts to an illegal subsidy and gives its foreign competitors an unfair advantage.

The U.S. Customs Court shocked America's trading partners last year and threatened to upset multinational trade talks in Geneva by agreeing with the U.S. television maker But the Court of Customs and Patent Appeals reversed that decision last summer, and - much to the administration's relief the Supreme Court agreed Wednesday. Many European countries have a value-added tax, which is TO SIGN somewhat similar to Japan's system and is the subject of a separate case pending in lower courts. The government thus warned that an adverse ruling could upset this year's Multilateral Trade Negotiations, spur retaliatory actions by other countries and raise consumer prices - by 33 percent for some goods.

Rep. Charles Vanik, chairman of the House Ways and Means subcommittee on trade, said WednesG: 's ruling "saves the world from an immediate trade and economic crisis" and will enable the trade talks to go forward.

But he said he still believes, along with most American businessmen and workers, that the rebate of indirect taxes by foreign nations to their exporters "distorts trade and is unfair to American industry and labor.

"Our trading partners should be advised that the commitment of the American Congress to a satisfactory agreement on a bill by Sen. Lori Wilson, I- materials laws. limitations on subsidies which distort trade is essential for a successful MTN," he said

Congress must ratify the trade agreement, which is expected to be endorsed by heads of states at an economic summit in Bonn next month.

DEFENSE SECRETARY BROWN

Defense Secretary Warns 'Conflict, Tensions: It's A Fact Of Life' SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) - Defense

ecretary Harold Brown today predicted luture "times and places where U.S. and Soviet policies will conflict and tensions will arise," but said there is no cause for undue alarm about expanding Soviet military strength. Brown told the Commonwealth Club of alifornia elements of both competition and cooperation in U.S.-Soviet relations - a theme of President Carter's recent Annapolis speech - will continue for the foreseeable luture.

"This is regrettable and it is not the way we would like the relationship to proceed," said Brown. "But it is a fact of modern life." The secretary reviewed U.S. defense policies, noting that they have been set in a world in which "we have grown vulnerable to nuclear attack and dependent on others for ur economic well-being."

At the same time, however, he said Soviet Union is not militarily stronger than will strongly influence Soviet behavior. Defense sources said Brown's carefully charges of incoherence and inconsistency in administration foreign policy statements in mind, and was part of the effort spearheaded by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance to present a more measured view of administration In strategic policy, the defense secretary said that in the foresceable future more powerful Soviet nuclear weapons could conceivably eliminate most U.S. in tercontinental missiles in a first strike. Despite this, he said U.S. nuclear retaliatory power -- "scheduled to grow" -is large enough now that "it is difficult to see how the Soviets could gain any meaningful
